WOMAN CONFIDANT SOUGHT BY POLICE IN SCRIVENER CASE

Slain Man Is Reported to Have Raised Funds to Assist Her.

PERSONAL EFFECTS FAIL TO GIVE CLEWS

Letters Also Are Examined; Elks and Legionnaires Motor to Funeral Today.

Headquarters detectives investigating the murder of Detective Sergeant Arthur B. Scrivener last night centered their efforts to establish the whereabouts of a woman said to be a former confidant and intimate friend of the slain man.

While the identity of the woman is known to the investigators, and despite that practically all day yesterday was devoted to search for her residence, those assigned to this phase of the case thus far have been unable to find trace of her.

Interest was revived in the woman angle of the crime when it was learned from authoritative sources yesterday that Scrivener found it necessary recently to raise a substantial sum of money. Scrivener placed little or no value on money, a fact that was well known to his intimates. It is believed that he used the money to help the woman who was in financial difficulties.

In Worcester About Gun.

Headquarters Detective Bernard Thompson is in Worcester, Mass., in which city the gun used in the slaying of Scrivener was manufactured. He expects to gather valuable information, as the police department has been advised by the manufacturers of the weapon that it may be possible for them to establish the serial number, which had been filed off by the murderer.

Police are not centering their efforts in running out any one theory. This is impossible until a motive for the slaying is discovered. That a woman may have been the cause of the shooting, that the dead detective was held up, or that Scrivener was shot by some one looking for vengeance are all plausible, police say, but which of these theories is correct is not known to police at this time.

Letters Are Examined.

Headquarters detectives yesterday examined the personal effects of their dead fellow officer in an effort to discover some clew which would provide a motive for the slaying. After wading through a mass of letters and other effects, investigators declared nothing of any value had been uncovered.

A report that Scrivener had stopped at a downtown restaurant Tuesday night, shortly before he was murdered and ordered a club sandwich to take out, after he had eaten a hearty meal, proved a false clew when investigation showed that Scrivener had taken nothing from the restaurant.

Had this report been true, police say, the time between the moment he was last seen near his home and the time he was shot, could have been accounted for.

It is the time between 12:25 Wednesday morning and a few minutes after 1 o'clock when Scrivener was shot that police are trying to ravel.

Hold-up Insisted On.

That Scrivener must have stopped some place near his home is definitely established, but where, no one knows. If they can discover what part of Georgetown Scrivener went to at this time, a solution of the mystery will be easy, the police say.

Close friends of the detective insist that he was the victim of a hold-up man. Fellow detectives, however, declare that whoever fired the fatal shot was known to Scrivener.

Six suspects have been arrested and questioned but none could give any information that would aid the police. Four of these men have been released from police custody and the two others, now held, will be released shortly.

Important Grid Games Played in Early Season

Football took on an imposing front yesterday with a galaxy of important games played despite the comparatively infant season. Clashes between strong Eastern teams and a number of intersectional games featured the play on the Atlantic seaboard, while teams in the Western conference engaged in their first intercircuit contests.

The Yale-Dartmouth game, which saw the Big Green from Hanover go down to its first defeat in three years, featured the day's schedule. Navy invaded the lair of the Tiger and emerged with another trophy of the gridiron hunt. Chicago invaded Pennsylvania and was beaten back by an overwhelming score.

Yale, 14; Dartmouth, 7.
Navy, 27; Princeton, 13.
Penn, 27; Chicago, 0.
Army, 27; Syracuse, 21.
West Virginia, 13; Georgetown, 10.
Notre Dame, 28; Penn State, 0.
New York U., 21; Tulane, 0.
Harvard, 27; William and Mary, 7.
Alabama, 21; Georgia Tech, 0.
Ohio State, 32; Columbia, 7.

1,200 SOLDIERS PERISH IN MUNITIONS SHIP FIRE

SHELLS SPRAY ON CITY

Shanghai, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—A blazing troop ship, laden with munitions, drifted today, an inferno of death of 1,200 Chinese soldiers as it showered missiles in all directions upon the city of Kiukiang and upon ships in the Yangtze river. The ship was the Kuang Yuang, transporting 1,500 soldiers of Marshal Chuan-Fang, ruler of eastern China.

Only 300 of the soldiers escaped death by flame, shot or drowning. The ship took fire while anchored before Kiukiang, the flames being thrown throughout the vessel almost immediately by the explosion of its deadly cargo.

Loosed from its anchorage by the flames, the Kuang Yuang drifted uncontrolled against other ships in the stream, its exploding war cargo hurling missiles upon them and killing many.

Vainly seeking escape by small boats from the flaming ship and maddened by its exploding munitions, the Chinese soldiers aboard the Kuang Yuang became panic stricken as they were stricken with fire and shells. Many, unable to swim, plunged overboard in desperation and were drowned in the broad Yangtze.

Drifting past Kiukiang, the Kuang Yuang hurled shells upon the city, causing considerable loss of life and property damage.

Below the city the vessel grounded upon a mud bank and burned to the water's edge. She was of 3,000 tons and belonged to the China Merchant Navigation Co. Her soldier passengers were to

SENATORIAL RESULT IN ILLINOIS HINGES UPON INDEPENDENT

ANTISALOON LEAGUE UNDER SMITH BANNER

G. O. P. Candidate Suffers Heavy Handicap in Insull Revelations.

By NORMAN W. BAXTER.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—A State which enjoys the doubtful honor of having witnessed the debut of machine guns as a weapon for its gang murders may be expected to be the home of political phantasies, and such is Illinois.

The contrast between the substantial citizens of Chicago and the bootleg syndicates, whose gunmen fill downtown streets with leaden hail, is no stranger than the opposites appealing to the electorate of the State in the senatorial campaign, nor are the alliances of gangland any more startling than some of those that politics has forced here.

The gap between George E. Brannan, Democratic nominee and Hugh C. Magill, independent Republican candidate, is hard to convey in a political sense; and in between stands Frank L. Smith, victor in the Republican primary, whose campaign was aided by a $125,000 gift from Samuel Insull, public utilities magnate. And in this strange contest the Democrats have an outside chance to win.

Drys Neglect Magill.

Superimposed on these confusing elements is the fact that the Antisaloon league, from all indications, will not support Magill, the out-and-out dry, but will send its supporters to the polls instructed to vote for Smith, whose acceptance of the Insull contribution while chairman of the public utilities commission may cause the Senate to deny him his seat should he be elected.

Brennan, himself, the beneficiary of $15,000 worth of financial aid from Insull and the Democratic boss of the State of Illinois, is one of the first machine leaders to seek office for himself in the Senate. Other than the hold he has on his machine, he has based his campaign almost entirely on an extreme antiprohibition plank. No senatorial candidate "drips" more wetness than Brennan.

Smith a Real Dry.

Smith, whose ambitions to represent his State in the Senate were checked when he was defeated six years ago by Senator McKinley, was until the time of his victory in the primary chairman of the State public utilities commission, which in the minds of many persons compounded the gravity of the acceptance of money for his campaign from Insull. He is a law enforcement dry, who has said that his votes in the Senate will be governed by the Illinois referendum on the prohibition question.

Magill, once a State senator and more recently secretary of a protestant body, is the medium

MARIE OF ROUMANIA TO BE GREETED HERE WITH FULL HONORS

ARRIVAL SCHEDULED 6 P. M. TOMORROW

Radu Djuvara, Roumanian charge d'affaires, and his attache, Andree Popovici, as harassed as two diplomatic individuals could possibly be, made ready to go to New York to greet her majesty tomorrow, with the assurance of the State Department that Mme. Loie Fuller, of New York, venerable dancer and friend of the queen, at least would not prevent them from doing that.

Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, whose business it is to see that State funerals, big parades, the reception of royalty and the like goes off without a hitch in so far as the spacious streets of the city are concerned, announced his plans. He is quite likely the only one having to do with the royalty visit whose equanimity has not been disturbed.

Police Along the Route.

Two hundred policemen, aside from secret service men, will guard the royal party upon their arrival here about 6 o'clock tomorrow evening from New York over the Pennsylvania Railroad. Capt. Martin Reilly will have command of 34 stalwarts at the Union Station, and the remainder of the police detail will line the route as the party proceeds across the plaza to Delaware avenue, south and across the east plaza, west on south roadway of the capitol grounds to First street, thence up Pennsylvania avenue to Treasury place to East Executive avenue, north to H street, then to Sixteenth as far as Scott circle into Massachusetts avenue, west to Q street, to Twenty-third street and the legation.

A cavalry escort from Fort Myer will head the procession. Besides the policemen at the station and along the line of march Sergt. Otha R. Sanders and Policemen Wesley L. Hunt and Horace W. Lineberg will form a motorcycle guard of the automobile in which the queen will ride. Similarly a police guard will be maintained around the legation during the royal party's stay here.

Arriving at the legation her majesty will find it evacuated by charge and attendants alike. The legation staff has taken up quarters at Wardman Park hotel, where some of the royal party, including Prince Nicholas, will stay.

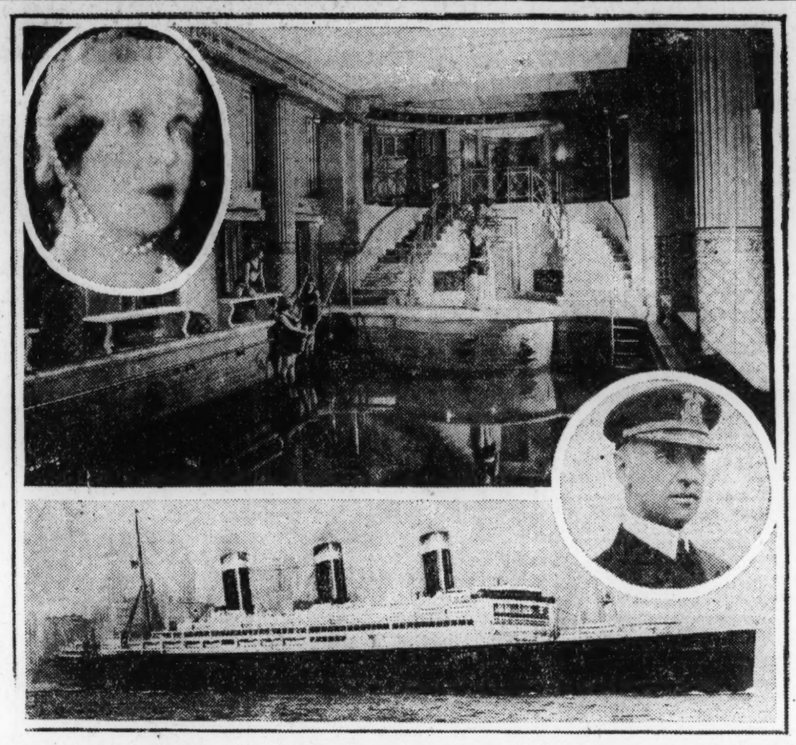

American Furniture for Her.

This removal from the legation was the least of the harassments which have attended Mr. Djuvara and Mr. Popovici. First there was the matter of refurnishing the legation. The furnishings which these two had enjoyed were lacking in stability as well as appearance, so the queen will find nearly a whole set of American furniture, of the period of 1926, and furnished by the Wardman Park hotel.

Whether Mme. Fuller will as reported, be able to completely upset

DIVER WALKS 5 MILES UNDERSEA IN 3 HOURS

ENTANGLED BY ANCHOR

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 16 (By A. P.). Klass Everts, Norfolk diver, walked from Old Point Comfort today to the naval base on the bottom of Hampton Roads, in two hours and 50 minutes, the first person to undertake the feat, and setting up a record that is all his own. The distance covered is about five miles.

Everts several times was almost thwarted in his attempt, but insisted upon going on, even when his performance appeared to be confronted with overwhelming obstacles.

The expedition started at 10:49 a. m., and wound up at 1:30, and the time required was less by nearly an hour than Everts had estimated. The diver encountered less trouble on the bottom than his aids in launches above, who were tossed by rough seas and broke down on one occasion. His chief difficulty was in clambering down and up the sides of muddy channel cuts. In one place he ran into a depth of 100 feet and was forced to call for more air. He encountered one obstacle in the form of a lost ship's anchor and nearly became hopelessly entangled in it, but finally got clear.

When his helmet was removed at the naval base after his trip he appeared none the worse for the jaunt, but when he attempted to walk the strain became evident. His legs became weak and his neck and shoulders were numbed from carrying the heavy helmet. In addition to his diving suit and leaden shoe soles, he carried 80 pounds of lead strapped around his body to hold him in the water.

"The worst of it," said Everts, who is an inveterate cigar smoker,

GEORGETOWN BEATEN BY W. VIRGINIA, 13-10

CONNAUGHTON IS STAR

West Virginia's Mountaineers descended from their stronghold in the Appalachians yesterday and stopped off at American League park long enough to extract two touchdowns from their store, sufficient to defeat Georgetown University's football team, 13 to 10, as 18,000 watched the festivities.

Passive enough for three quarters, if a spontaneous touchdown in the first five minutes of play may be overlooked, West Virginia massed its players in a concentrated attack through the air and with "Sleepy" Glenn the recipient of one of these forward passes, the Mountaineers won the game in the final period. Glenn galloped 5 yards to cross the goal after catching the pass.

It was a football game that presented possibilities at every snap of the ball. The teams discarded all orthodox formations and the players took their positions in seemingly haphazard fashion, but best suited for straight football and an emergency. Backs of both teams gained at will until reaching the line of scrimmage which appeared sparsely populated a moment before but on their arrival a mass of struggling arms and bodies had prepared a stubborn greeting.

Battle Waged Through Air.

West Virginia won the game on points. Georgetown won in every other respect, if the Hilltoppers can gain any consolation from that fact. Georgetown outrushed, outkicked and outplayed the Mountaineers un-

8 MAIL BANDITS ESCAPE THROUGH JERSEY POSSE

SEEN BY SIX RESIDENTS

Somerville, N. J., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The eight mail bandits who killed a postal employe and obtained $151,700 in cash at Elizabeth have escaped the cordon of 500 State troopers, police and volunteers thrown around a 180-mile area of the Watchung mountains. Maj. Mark Kimberling tonight ordered the men in, and admitted that the bandits had made a getaway.

The men came out of the hills, Maj. Kimberling said, "on a road that we did not happen to have blocked, although State troopers were within three or four blocks of it."

Six persons saw the car leave the hills, according to Kimberling. The eight men in a large sedan, answering the description of the one used in Elizabeth when the streets were raked with fire from a machine gun, were seen at 8 o'clock yesterday morning on Johnson avenue, near Plainfield. An hour later they were seen near the Crippled Children's home outside of Scotch Plains.

A third person saw them on the quarry road near the Baltusrol Golf club, in Springfield.

Verification of the stories told by the persons who saw the car was not obtained until this afternoon, Maj. Kimberling said.

A mail bag, which State troopers reported having identified as one taken from the mail truck in Elizabeth, N. J., was found today on a State road from Westfield to Rahway.

The pouch, which was reported

Study Streets at Mall.

The commission also recommended to the public buildings and Treasury officials preservation of the open ground between Seventh and Ninth streets from B street southwest as essential to proper development of the Mall and that north and south streets now crossing it should be retained so as to permit extending Ninth street across the Mall which it believes should not be blocked by any buildings.

Depressing all north and south streets under the roadways was discussed and deemed worthy of further study. Existing streets east and west, and the other streets that do not go through the Mall should be relocated to suit the designs of buildings erected, it was urged.

Adequate transportation in the triangle bounded by Pennsylvania avenue, B street and Fifteenth streets without putting tracks on B street will be taken up with the District commissioners and street railway companies. It was recommended that this triangle should be made into a park.

Parking in Buildings.

Upon examination of figures concerning the numbers of employes, parked cars and office space of the navy and munitions building, and the application of these figures to the location of the Commerce Department, it was shown that approximately the equivalent of one full story (1 1-3 times the floor area) would be required in a building on the Fifteenth street site to accommodate cars of employes of that department.

Upon approximate calculation of land values and building costs it was concluded that parking area on open ground is more expensive than automobile storage space in buildings. It was recommended that plans be made to incorporate within the new buildings facilities for the storage of autos and that parking be prohibited outside of buildings.

The commission further recommended that in general new buildings along Pennsylvania avenue should have their fronts parallel to the Avenue.

To Study Armory Site.

Site for an armory for the District National Guard was ordered studied by the public buildings commission, this being the first step towards such a building. The Chesapeake & Ohio canal will also be studied with a view to its acquisition by the Federal gov...

Browning Files Separation Suit Against "Peaches"

Papers Are Signed in Poughkeepsie and Guardian Is Named for Child-Wife; Habeas Corpus Writ Is Also Obtained by Realty Man.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Oct. 16.—Edward West Browning today entered suit for separation against his wife, Frances ("Peaches") Heenan Browning. The papers were signed in Poughkeepsie late this afternoon by Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser.

N. Otis Rockwood, of New York city, was named as guardian ad litem for "Peaches," who has just turned 16, in the separation suit order. Attached to the document, which was presented to Justice Morschauser by Francis C. Dale and John E. Mack, attorneys, acting for the millionaire realty man, was an affidavit signed by Rockwood, accepting the appointment as guardian.

The proceeding was clothed in great secrecy, unlike Browning's actions of the past, when he openly wooed publicity.

Browning arrived in Poughkeepsie bright and early today, accompanied by Dale, his personal attorney. He immediately repaired to the Nelson house and held himself incommunicado. Dale and Mack drew up the papers and took all the preliminary steps in the action without the aid of Browning, who was present only when the papers were signed. In his deposition Browning accuses "Peaches" of abandonment.

"Without consent or connivance on my part," the paper reads, "my wife left my bed and board. I further declare that she is an infant of over 16, she having reached 16

$425,000 Loot in Satchel Sought After Bank Closes

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—A nation-wide search was under way tonight for Charles E. Knapp, a bond salesman, who disappeared yesterday with a satchel containing a sum variously estimated at from $320,000 to $425,000; of which more than $100,000 represented funds of the Brotherhood Savings & Trust Co., of Pittsburgh, a labor bank.

Search for Knapp was started after the bank was closed today and its affairs taken over by the State banking department and four persons, including three officers of the institution, were arrested on various charges growing out of the alleged swindle. They are H. A. McCrady, president of the ... bank; William Kelly, vice presid... Nelson, secretary, and F...

ing been involved with Knapp in a bond deal through which they were to purchase $800,000 worth of liberty bonds for $425,000.

R. P. Ferguson, chief bank examiner, said the shortage of the bank was about $102,500, so far as was known. Redman, a non-depositor, was said to have indorsed a note through which that amount was withdrawn from the bank to complete a pool for the purchase of the bonds.

When arraigned for a preliminary hearing with the others, McCready, said, "I was gyped and gyped right. They were sure smart fellows when they put a thing like that over on a banker." He said the bank had sufficient ...

...Suter announced at the ... of the general committee. ...ich the representatives of ... neighborhood associations ...ed the number of application ... and membership buttons ...would need, together with ... details, that associations of ...e Georges, Montgomery and ...gton counties had agreed to ...ticipate in the drive.

...he drive is to work like a fine- ...thed comb, with a view, as A. J. ...coll, of the Mid-City associa- ..., put it, of making every citi- ...here realize his civic responsi- ...ty. Mr. Driscoll referred to the ...tement of President Coolidge ...t it is disloyal not to vote, and ...xplaining that while of course the ...ote is not available here, the Pres- ...dent's words applied as well to lo- ...al citizens who neglected their civ- ...c responsibilities.

Stepping Stone for Vote.

Maj. Gen. Eli A. Helmick, of Cathedral Heights, declared that the drive was to give the city a representative body. It is but a stepping stone to suffrage, he said.

The proffer of a big brass band to help inject enthusiasm into the campaign was made by Robert Strobel of the Southwest Citizens association on behalf of Clinton Brown and his Boys' Independent band.

Every member is to be given a button and urged to wear it. Of the dues of all new members 25 cents is to go to the central committee during the period of the campaign and for 60 days thereafter. This is to provide a fund for the expenses of the campaign, which will involve besides application blanks and the buttons, publicity and the like. Mr. Suter said that approximately $500 would be needed.

Already $275 has been raised and pledged by associations and individuals, not including the membership percentage, Harry N. Stull, secretary, announced. More than $100 was pledged by those at the meeting, which was held in the District room, last night. Pledges included Mr. Suter, $10; William McK. Clayton, $25; John S. Driggers, $10; A. G. Herman, $10; Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell, $10; Warner Stutler, $10; J. W. Murphy, $10; Benning Citizens association, $5; Columbia Heights, Dupont Circle, Stanton park, Lincoln park, southwest, Edgewood, $10; and Brightwood, $25.

33 Associations Respond.

Of the 49 member associations of the federation, 33 have responded to the drive, Mr. Stull announced. Not all have yet indorsed it, but their spokesmen made plain that this was because the governing bodies or the full organizations had not yet had time to meet.

Capt. G. L. Shorey, Piney Branch, who, with Mr. Suter, is a veteran of the drive of 1919, told of the benefits to be derived from civic work. For one thing, he recalled an association treasurer who worked off his diffidence and now is a leader among his fellow men. It was the enthusiasm of Mr. Driscoll, however, which emphasized the worth of the associations.

Mr. Suter named the following to serve on the business district canvassing committee: Maj. Gen. Helmick, chairman; George A. Finch, Mr. Driscoll, Mrs. Snell and Charles F. Consaul. A similar committee for schools, parent teachers' associations and community centers was named as follows: Henry Gilligan, chairman; J. G. Yaden, F. S. Walker, Mrs. E. M. Kalmbach, William B. Hardy, Miss M. Gertrude Young, Selden M. Ely, Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, Mrs. H. G. Parsons, George H. Russell and Mrs. Deborah Streitberger. Another meeting of the general committee will be held Saturday night.

2 Pencils, 2 Penholders Only for Interior Clerks

Pencils and penholders are scarcer than hen's teeth at the Interior Department, while a community eraser is likely to be the next installation as the result of the economy wave.

Orders were issued that two pencils, two penholders and one eraser would henceforth be the clerical allotment to each clerk.

At an appointed time each employe was required to stand beside his desk with all accessories above this allotment while a functionary with much ceremony passed with a waste basket and collected them. What became of the basket of economy is not known, but it has left a bunch of callousedfingers in its wake.

1,500 Parade to Celebrate Reunion of Three Societies

Confusion Nearly Halts March of J. O. U. A. M. and Kindred Organizations; Main Body Is Half-Hour Late for Procession.

Celebrating the sixteenth annual conference and reunion of the general executive board of the Junior Order United American Mechanics and kindred organizations, 1,500 members of the organizations last night paraded up historic Pennsylvania avenue in colorful formations.

The parade was to have been headed by R. B. Petitt, jr., grand marshal, of this city, but due to some unlooked-for confusion and misunderstanding immediately preceding the parade, 500 of the participants marched first and were followed fully a half an hour later by what should have been the leading formations of the demonstration.

Th confusion nearly prohibited execution of the parade. Marshal Petitt and his aids were gathered at Peace monument, unaware that the delegations from Pennsylvania and Maryland already had gone up the Avenue. When this was learned the committee on arrangements threatened to call off the demonstration.

Five States were represented in the demonstration, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland, besides this city. Besides members of the junior order, representatives of the kindred organizations, Fraternal Patriots of America and the Order of Independent Amercians, were in the line of march.

The parade was scheduled to start at 7 o'clock. A special detail of police cleared the north side of Pennsylvania avenue of parked automobiles and rerouted westbound traffic all along the line of march, which was from Peace Monument to Twentieth street. The committee on arrangements was late in arriving and then confusion broke out.

Nevertheless the last of the parade, which was to have been first, started up the Avenue half an hour late. This portion consisted of 1,000, and carried two bands. The marchers were dressed in uniforms of purple, red, orange and blue, and transformed the Avenue into a sea of red light by the flares they carried.

The executive board, which is comprised of members of the three organizations, met in the Continental hotel and conferred on plans for the convention to be held in Alexandria Tuesday and Wednesday. Officers of the board: William S. Davis, New Jersey, chairman; Maurice Rosener, Pennsylvania, vice chairman; E. T. Barclay, New Jersey, secretary, and Franklin S. Faye, New York, treasurer.

The general committee on arrangements: Davis, chairman; Faye, Hand, Miller and Petitt.

Wounded Policeman To Be Given Watch

Police Private Frank L. Ach, victim of four gunshot wounds in the battle with bandits in which Patrolman W. K. Busch was killed three weeks ago, will be presented with a platinum watch on the evening of October 27, by the Brightwood lodge, No. 43, F. A. A. M.

The presentation will be made by District Commissioner Rudolph at a reception to be tendered the policeman by the Petworth and Brightwood Citizens associations, in Masonic temple, Georgia and Florida avenues northwest. It was in Petworth that the shooting took place.

ALLEGED BOOTLEGGER TAKEN AT DRY'S HOME

Man Says He Leased House From Representative Cramton; Liquor Seized.

When Representative Louis C. Cramton, of Michigan, quit his div vigil in Congress and went home for the summer recess, he leased his residence at 1829 Irving street northwest.

Police of the Tenth precinct last night arrested Jack O'Hearn, 28 years old, as he was preparing to get into an automobile parked in front of the place, and seized twenty quarts of assorted liquors.

O'Hearn, who was charged with transporting and illegal possession, told the police he leased the house from Mr. Cramton for the summer. He was released on bond.

Patrick, colored, 29 years old, 1718 Fourth street northwest, received several broken ribs yesterday when his automobile was in collision with an automobile drivn by Mrs. Alma Cookeron, 5201 Fourteenth street northwest, at Seventeenth and M streets northwest. He was treated at Emergency hospital.

GILL, FOUND WITH GIRL, GIVES UP; OUT ON BOND

Dorothy Reamer, 17, Said to Have Admitted Trip Through Several States.

UP TO U. S. AUTHORITIES

Gill, who is a member of a socially prominent Baltimore family, will be given another hearing by Magistrate Rohleder at 4 p. m., Friday. Meanwhile he is being held for Department of Justice authorities, who declined to state yesterday what action they will take.

Walking into the office of J. F. Supplee, United States commissioner, yesterday, accompanied by his attorney, Gill offered to surrender himself. Although Commissioner Supplee told him he knew of no charges against him, city detectives arrived before he left the office, and placed him under arrest.

Dorothy Reamer, daughter of Mrs. F. A. Norris, 46 Franklin street northeast, was held yesterday at the house of detention for investigation by Department of Justice operatives. Under examination Miss Reamer is said to have admitted accompanying Gill on a trip through several States, denying, however, that there was anything wrong in their association.

The girl's stepfather, F. A. Norris, stated yesterday he had not filed an affidavit with Magistrate E. E. Hatch, of Laurel, making charges against special detectives concerning Gill's escape Thursday. He admitted, however, contemplating taking such action.

Frank Varney, headquarters detective, investigating the case for local police, turned his findings over to Department of Justice officials yesterday. The matter now rests with Federal authorities he said last night. It was indicated that no charges are to be placed against the girl Robbed at Football Game.

While attending the West Virginia-Georgetown university football game yesterday afternoon at American league park, Col. John Martey, of the Northumberland apartments, was robbed of a billfold containing $9 and an automobile license, by a pickpocket, he told police last night.

MARINES ORDERED TO PROTECT MAIL AGAINST BANDITRY

MORE ARMORED TRUCKS ARE ORDERED BY NEW

Organization of Armed Force in the Postal Service Also Approved.

(By the Associated Press.)

The marines again have been called into action, as they were in 1921, to guard from bandits the millions of dollars' worth of valuable mail handled daily by the postal service.

Stirred by the numerous holdups within the past few months, especially by that at Elizabeth, N. J., when a mail truck was robbed of $151,000, President Coolidge and his cabinet have decided upon extreme measures.

Postmaster General New made arrangements yesterday at a conference with Maj. Gen. Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps, for the immediate assignment of marines to railway terminals, on mail cars and mail trucks which transport large quantities of valuable mails. The number of men to take up the work was not announced, but in 1921 when a similar emergency existed, 2,500 men were placed on guard.

Plans for the organization within the postal service itself of a large armed force was immediately begun by the Postmaster General and as soon as this force has been thoroughly trained the marines will be released. Additional armored railway mail cars will be built by the government upon specifications designed to protect the mail and postal employes from bandit attacks. These will be leased to the railroads. Armored mail trucks are employed in many cities, but the number of these have been insufficient and orders have gone out for the building of more.

Responsibility to Meet.

"The United States government has a responsibility to meet and it will meet it just as it has in the past," Mr. New said in announcing the placing of the marines on guard. "It is my hope and desire that within a very few months the Postoffice Department itself will have organized, equipped and trained a sufficient body of men who will be able to protect the United States mails from the depredations of mail bandits as well as to insure safety of the lives of postal clerks and others entrusted with the transportation of currency from the big terminals, from postoffices and to the large industrial concerns throughout the country."

The Postmaster General declared his intention of going before Congress at the coming December session to ask for a special appropriation to pay for the expense of placing the marines on guard and for money to organize his new force. He also would have Congress enact a law to make it a capital offense to attack the United States mails with arms.

Minister Is Called Ape, And Cabinet Collapses

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The political situation in Jugoslavia was greatly complicated by the resignation of the Ouzounovitch cabinet which had only been in power a few months. King Alexander accepted the resignation today.

An agreement among the contending elements within the cabinet had been almost reached when Stefan Raditch, minister of education, was called a political ape and clown by one of his radical colleagues in the premier's anteroom last night. After that efforts toward a reconciliation between the radicals and the followers of Raditch were futile.

At the time of the incident, M. Raditch was negotiating for a declaration that the Croat flag should have equal rights with the Serbian flag on government buildings in Croatia.

Nuevo Leon Deputies In Free Fight; 3 Dead

Mexico City, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). Dispatches from Monterey say that three persons were killed and a newspaper reporter was wounded in a riot in the chamber of deputies of the Nuevo Leon state legislature last night.

The trouble started when spectators in the gallery hooted the deputies. Lawmakers and spectators thereupon engaged in a free-for-all fight in which pistols were used. The dead include the sergeant at arms of the chamber. Troops are protecting the governor's palace.

to be empty, has given some of the troopers reason to believe the robbers may have fled to Philadelphia, as the road on which it was found leads to that city. Other troopers, however, said that the same road leads to the mountain district where many of the searching parties have centered their efforts at tracing the robbers.

Slayer of Sweetheart to Die.

Tallahassee, Fla., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The State supreme court today held that Rufus Chesser, Clay county youth, must die in the electric chair for the murder of his sweetheart, Sally Bowles. The court denied a petition of the defense for leave to apply to the circuit judge for Clay county for a writ of error.

TROTZKY CAPITULATES TO ESCAPE DISCIPLINE

Opposition to the Majority in Soviet Committee, Caused Threat.

OFFERS OF PEACE MADE

Moscow, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). The opposition within the communist party, headed by Trotzky, Zinovieff and Piatakoff, has capitulated unconditionally to the central executive committee. Offers of peace were advanced tonight to the majority group of the party, led by Stalin.

London, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). The Moscow correspondent of the Sunday Observer reports that an open breach in the communist party has been averted by the capitulating of Trotsky and Zinovieff, who have admitted themselves wrong in attacking the central executive committee. Thus, the correspondent says, they have spared themselves extrme disciplinary measures. The group in power in the communist party, led by M. Stalin, now will proceed to carry out its policy in cooperation with the peasants.

Disciplinary measures against Trotzky, Zinovieff and Piatakoff for their recent attempts to air the views of the opposition within the communist party were foreshadowed in a resolution passed a week ago by the political bureau of the party. This resolution characterized the action of these three men in attempting to undermine the majority by pointing out to the workers the evil policies of the forces now in power, as "unprecedented and flagrant violation of the basic principles of party life.

WOMAN CALLED TO DOOR, SLAIN BY MOONSHINERS

HAD BETRAYED STILLS

Trinidad, Colo., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Enmity created when Miss Rosa M. Perdue, former Wisconsin welfare worker, informed officers of the location of mountain whisky stills, resulted in her being shot to death by moonshiners two weeks ago at her Sarcillo canyon home, police declared following the finding of her body yesterday.

The body, clad only in overalls and a coarse shirt, and wrapped in charred blankets, was found by Ray Wolcott, a rancher, while riding through the canyon. Apparently an attempt had been made to burn the body, as bits of burned blanket and an overall buckle were found in the ashes of a campfire in another part of the canyon. The condition of the body would not permit location of bullet wounds.

Miss Perdue had been the object of a search started by ranchers October 4, when two school children visited her cabin at the chicken ranch she operated and found it in disorder, with no trace of the owner. A shattered oil lamp lay on the porch, while Miss Perdue's collie dog lay dead in the yard. Bullet holes in the cabin walls and blood stains leading from a door indicated she had been called to the porch in the night and shot to death.

Three miles down the canyon from the fire in which the slayers attempted to burn the body, officers found a complete distilling outfit.

Miss Perdue was about 43 years old. Officers are endeavoring to secure definite information as to the location of relatives.

Missouri Referendum On Dry Law Blocked

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct 16 (By A. P.).—Attorney General Gentry late today ruled that proposition No. 4 to repeal all the State prohibition laws should not be placed on Missouri's ballots for the general election November 2. He held that the proposal does not properly come within the scope of the State initiative and referendum law.

China Bandits Free 2, Hold Third Missionary

Shanghai, China, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The Rev. Freeman Davies, Australian, and Mrs. Davies, of the China Inland mission, kidnaped by bandits from Chowkiakow three weeks ago, have been released.

The Rev. Mr. Riding, another British missionary, is being held for ransom of $500,000 and 100 pistols."

Dry Chief's Wife Quits Capital Life for Job

(By Associated Press.)

Mrs. Lincoln C. Andrews, wife of Assistant Secretary Andrews, chief of the dry forces, has forsaken Washington life to take a "job" in New York.

She wrote her husband yesterday that she was "going to work," entering the Travel Service Corporation conducted by a friend, Clara Laughlin, in New York.

"This ocean business sounds wet to me," the general remarked upon receiving the news. "But I know after a few days now Mrs. Andrews will sympathize with my wishes to stay at home at night and take it easy."

10 Banks May Form International Union

Berlin, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Negotiations for the formation of an international finance trust company, representing ten American and European banks, for financing international transactions, are being conducted by Henry Schroeder & Co. of London. The new company would have a nominal capitalization of $5,000,000.

The American banks which are understood to be members of the new syndicate are Blyth, Witter & Co., and the Schroeder Banking Corporation of New York. The only German bank interested is the Dresdener Bank, a representative of which today denied that the new syndicate intended placing German railway bonds on the international market.

JOHN COOLIDGE PUZZLED BY PRESENCE OF GUARD

Says He Has No Idea Why Secret Service Agent Is With Him.

GENERAL POLICY SEEN

Amherst, Mass., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Why John Coolidge, Amherst college student, and son of the President, is being guarded by Col. Edward W. Starling, of the secret service, remained a mystery today.

"I have no idea," young Coolidge told inquirers, while in other sources the opinion was expressed that threatening letters received by the President or his son were responsible for Starling's presence.

Col. Starling lives with the President's son and is with him constantly except at classes.

Information from Washington was that Starling's orders had been issued under the general policy of the secret service department which is charged by law with the protection of the persons of the President and the members of his family.

Young Coolidge has been under guard since the opening of the fall term, it was revealed. The letters were believed to be from a harmless crank but it was considered prudent to take every precaution against any possible attempt to harm the President's son.

Bluenose Wins First Of Canadian Races

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The schooner Bluenose today won the first race of a series with the Haligonian, to determine the Canadian championship of the North Atlantic fishing fleet. The race, in Halifax harbor, was over a course covering 39.3 miles. The boat winning two out of three races will win the Canadian championship and thereby qualify to race the Columbia, of Gloucester, Mass., for the North Atlantic fishing fleet championship, later this month.

The European buffalo also is threatened with extinction. Only 66 heads of the species, evenly distributed in sex, are known to be alive today, all of them in captivity.

Marriage Will Bring Amnesty in Belgium

Brussels, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). The marriage of Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium and Princess Astrid of Sweden in Stockholm, the date for which has been advanced to November 3, will be made the occasion of a special amnesty in Belgium, it is learned in court circles. The Belgian royal family will embark October 30 on the steamer Marie Jose for Gothenburg, from which a special train will convey them to Stockholm for the civil ceremony.

PRESIDENT SHOWN TAXI THAT RUSHED TROOPS TO MARNE

Two Famous French Veterans Accompany Prized Relic of World War.

MEN CAME TO CAPITAL FROM LEGION MEETING

Those terror-filled days in 1914, when the German army was closing in on Paris, were recalled yesterday when a grotesque little French taxicab rumbled up the White House driveway.

The cab was one of the fleet used to rush troops from Paris to the first battle of the Marne, the battle which foiled Von Kluck's coup and saved the French capital. Worth about 10 francs as junk, the taxicab is regarded as a priceless relic by the French, and they would no more part with it than they would part with a relic of Joan of Arc.

Two famous French war veterans accompanied the cab to the White House—Col. Yves Picot, a member of the French chamber of deputies, and Jacques Truelle, of the French ministry of foreign affairs.

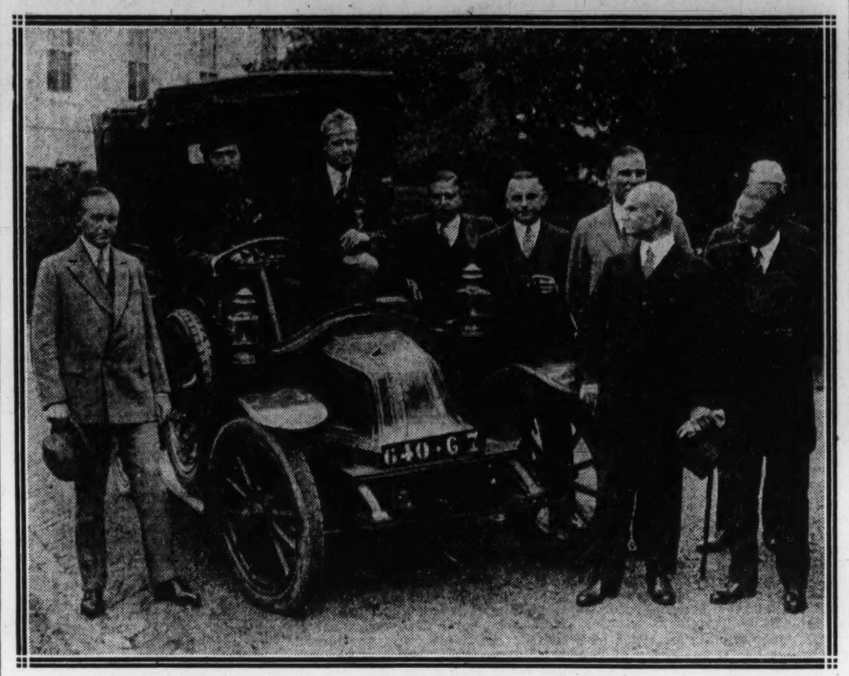

Leads "Busted Mugs."

Col. Picot had an eye and part of his face shot away at the Somme, and he is now head of a French veterans' organization known as the "Busted Mugs." M. Truelle was badly wounded in the battle of Noulette and had to have his leg amputated on the spot.

The distinguished Frenchmen came here from Philadelphia, where they invited the American Legion to hold its next convention in Paris. They told President Coolidge of the plans that have been made for this event. The taxicab was driven in the legion parade at Philadelphia and provoked lusty cheering.

When they return to France, Col. Picot and M. Truelle will plunge into the task of preparing for the arrival of the 30,000 legionnaires who are expected to make the pilgrimage to Paris in September.

COOLIDGE SEES FAMOUS FRENCH WAR TAXICAB

Harris & Ewing.

This ancient taxicab, which was inspected by President Coolidge at the White House yesterday, was one of those used to rush troops from Paris to the battle of the Marne when the Germans were threatening the French capital. On the right are Col. Yves Picot and Jacques Turelle, who brought the cab along when they came to this country to invite the American Legion to hold its 1927 convention in Paris.

Radio Industry Shows 215 Per Cent Increase

(By Associated Press.)

The tremendous growth of America's newest industry—radio—was made manifest yesterday by statistics published by the Department of Commerce.

In 1925 the value of all radio apparatus manufactured was $170,390,572, an increase of 215.5 per cent over the 1923 production, worth $54,000,470. The number of tube-type receiving sets manufactured increased from 190,374 in 1923 to 2,180,622 last year, and the number of radio tubes increased from 4,687,400 to 23,934,658, the rates of increase being 1045.4 per cent and 410.6 per cent, respectively. Crystal type sets fell from 223,303, valued at $669,906, in 1923, to 112,656, worth $344,079, in 1925.

Maryland Scout Wins Heroism Certificate

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Four boy heroes living in all parts of the country have been accorded official honor as life savers by the Boy Scouts of America.

John J. Henley, 14 years old, of Evanston, Wyo., was awarded the gold honor medal, the highest honor that a boy scout can win, for his rescue of another boy from drowning near Evanton, in August, 1925.

Certificates of heroism were awarded twelve other Boy Scouts, including Leonard Murphy, of Oakland, Md., for pulling two boys from the path of a rapidly moving freight train.

FORT MYER TRIUMPHS IN ENDURANCE RIDING

MATHEWSON GETS $100

Brandon, Vt., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Miss Brandon, a three-quarter bred bay mare, entered by the service troop of the Third United States cavalry and ridden by Corpl. S. J. Mathewson, today was awarded first place in the eighth annual endurance ride, finished yesterday. Six out of the fourteen starters finished.

The others in order, judged on condition, since all completed the 300-mile ride on time, were: Stockings, Third U. S. cavalry; Rex Rysdyk, entered by R. T. McCready, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Peggy A., troop E, Third cavalry; Bunny Boy, Third U. S. cavalry, and Lillian Russell, entered by Capt. J. A. Weeks.

Beside the temporary possession of the cup, Miss Brandon won the first prize of $600. Miss Brandon is an 8-year-old, sired by Cock-of-the-Walk, an Arabian.

The result of the endurance ride was a triumph for Fort Myer, Va. Not only was Miss Brandon the winner, entered by Fort Myer, but Peggy A. and Lillian Russell also were among the six that finished.

If the officers and men of Fort Myer had a favorite in the race, it was Peggy A. Had this gallant mare won yesterday she would have gained permanent possession of the mounted service cup. To win permanent possession it is necessary to win the ride three years in succession. Peggy A. won in 1924 and 1925.

Corpl. Mathewson, who rode Miss Brandon, was awarded a $100 prize for having exhibited the best horsemanship, according to word received by the War Department.

The 300-mile ride is held each year for the purpose of stimulating interest in the breeding of good saddle horses. It required five days, 60 miles being ridden each day.

Appreciation Sent Walsh by Coolidge

(By Associated Press.)

Appreciation for the services of J. H. Walsh, of New Orleans, as a commissioner of the Shipping Board, who has just resigned, was expressed by President Coolidge in a letter to him made public yesterday.

"I want to thank you," Mr. Coolidge said, "for the effective and faithful service that you have rendered in this position and extend to you my best wishes for your success in the future. I am exceedingly sorry to have you retire from the service of the United States, but I can not urge you to stay against your personal interests."

Grange Asks Coolidge To Speak at Meeting

(By the Associated Press.)

President Coolidge was invited yesterday by Louis J. Taber, of Columbus, Ohio, master of the National Grange, to address the Grange at its annual meeting in Portland, Maine, early in November.

Taber also asked for assignment of technical assistants from the budget and census bureaus to help work out a State budget system for submission to the Ohio legislature. It was indicated aid would be supplied.

5-DAY WEEK FAVORED BY EDWARD A. FILENE

Director of World Chamber of Commerce Thinks It Will Be Success.

Chicago, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The five-day working week recently sponsored by Henry Ford enjoys the support also of Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant and a director of the International Chamber of Commerce. Here en route home from St. Louis, Mr. Filene said he was heartily in favor of the plan.

"I consider the five-day week as a force that will bring about a reduction of waste in industry," he said. "I believe Mr. Ford will succeed in his five eight-hour days a week as he did with his six eight-hour days."

An increase in net production, contentment for the masses, less class warfare and a better chance to apply political, social and economic remedies to industrial ills were listed as the benefits.

"Moreover, it will compel all producers to improve their methods, take the loads more and more off the backs of men and put them on machinery, and, finally, there will be heavier production with costs at a point which will enable us to export temporary surpluses," he said.

CHECK FAILS TO REVEAL IDENTITY OF "TARBOT"

Description Shows He Was Not Marine Comrade of Baltimore Man.

IN FOREIGN ARMY, BELIEF

Identification of "Jerry Tarbot," so-called nameless veteran of the world war, failed yesterday after a careful recheck of marine corps records, following a statement of Israel M. Greenberg, of Baltimore, that he recognized the man as George Beaupre, his "buddy" in the A. E. F. Tarbot's identity has been a mystery six years.

Comparison of fingerprints and a personal description of George Beaupre showed that he could not be the nameless veteran, experts pointed out. Beaupre's record in the marine corps hadquarters indicates that he enlisted in the marine corps April 24, 1917, in Philadelphia, served overseas and deserted July 10, 1919, from the marine corps personnel office, New York city. He still is classed as a deserter on the muster roll in Washington.

A second claim that "Tarbot" is Bruce Harpin, made by Charles Smith, of New York, met with no results. Seach of marine corps records failed to disclose the names of either Smith or Harpin. Neither the muster rolls of Sixteenth company, Fifth regiment, marine corps, nor the records of the complete Fourth and Fifth regiments have yielded any description or identifying marks that would place "Tarbot" as having served in these commands.

The opinion was expressed at marine corps headquarters that "Tarbot," who was legally given that name by a California court, served in France either with a French or Canadian unit, and at some time, while sick or wounded, was associated with American marines in a base hospital or elsewhere.

DIRIGIBLE COMBATS WIND THAT CAUSED SHENANDOAH CRASH

Same Twisting Combination of Currents Survived by the Los Angeles.

SAFE LANE DISCOVERED BY ADMIRAL MOFFETT

Airship Reaches Lakehurst Safely After Storm Cut Detroit Visit Short.

Youngstown, Ohio, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The dirigible Los Angeles in her turnings and twistings over an area of northeastern Ohio Thursday night, was fighting the same combination of conflicting winds which caused the destruction of the Shenandoah over Ohio, according to Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, who was in command of the Los Angeles Thursday night. He came here today to dedicate a municipal air port.

Over Columbiana county, as the Los Angeles crossed the Pennsylvania-Ohio line, a brisk cold wind suddenly sprang up from the north. From the south came equally strong, hot winds.

Observers Were Mystified.

Rear Admiral Moffett said he began maneuvering to find an air lane through which the ship could pass, to escape the conflicting cross-currents. Finally such a lane was discovered, and he ordered full speed ahead. It was at that time that the dirigible swung south and passed over Akron.

The admiral's statement explained maneuvers which had mystified Ohio observers. The dirigible seemed to be lost as it swung about over Columbiana county. Finally, as it was over Struthers, a few miles from Youngstown, it suddenly swung south at full speed. It was at this point, Admiral Moffett said today, that the air lane was found by which the ship was taken out of conflicting winds.

The admiral said the Los Angeles was of sturdier construction than the Shenandoah, and he believed that it could weather practically any storm.

Returns to Lakehurst.

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The first major flight of the dirigible Los Angeles since the Shenandoah disaster, ended at 5:35 o'clock this morning when the craft arrived over the air field after a 780-mile trip from Detroit.

The flight was completed in 13 hours and 5 minutes, cruising at an average speed of 60 miles an hour. The ship traveled a total of 1,550 miles.

"We had a very pleasant trip," the skipper, Lieut. Comdr. C. E. Rosendahl, said. "The only trouble we had was caused by a wireless antennae wire becoming loose after we left Lakehurst.

"Mr. Ford met us at the mast at Dearborn yesterday and came aboard the ship. He was deeply impressed by its performance. He was to take a flight with us, but the storm warnings caused an early departure, which made it impossible. Mr. Ford tendered us a wonderful dinner."

Anxiety Over Fate Of Overdue Vessel

St. John, N. B., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Increased anxiety was expressed today over the fate of the steamship Haleakala of the American Republic Line, last heard from in Southern waters. Miss Charlotte Pratt, sister of the commander of the Haleakala, Capt. John Pratt, announced that she had been unable to get definite news of the vessel, due at Montevideo from Norfolk September 24.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Moore & McCormack, Inc., of this city, agents for the Haleakala, said today they had tried repeatedly last week to reach the Haleakaya by radio. The agents said they had not given up hope.

Murdered Marine's Body Is Identified

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The body of a marine private, found murdered last night in Central Park, was identified today as that of Thomas C. McElerry, 26, of the U. S. S. Cleveland.

A marine from the same ship made the identification. He said he and McElerry had been absent without leave.

An automatic pistol found near the body was one McElerry took from a rebel in Nicaragua recently when they were on duty there, the marine who identified the body said.

LEGIONNAIRES STOP HERE ON HOMEWARD JOURNEY

MANY VISIT WHITE HOUSE

The backwash from the American Legion convention reached its peak in Washington yesterday when a half dozen large delegations of legionnaires stopped off on their way home from Philadelphia.

They brought with them some of the noise and color that Philadelphia enjoyed. How they managed to do it after the strenuous five days there is a mystery, but the visiting drum and bugle corps marched up Pennsylvania avenue with a briskness and springiness that gave no hint of fatigue.

Among the delegations that called at the White House were those from Florida, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota and Montana. The Miami delegation made an unsuccessful attempt at Philadelphia to obtain the 1928 convention, and it now is trying to get the convention of 1929. The Minnesota delegation called at the State Department and serenaded Secretary Kellogg, who is a native of that State.

Pershing Is Gratified Over Legion Honors

The action of the American Legion in electing Marshal Foch and himself honorary national commanders was "inexpressibly gratifying" to him, Gen. John J. Pershing said yesterday in a telegram to John R. McQuigg, retiring national commander.

"My election," said Gen. Pershing, "by the loyal men of the legion who formed America's incomparable army in the world war, and who now occupy the proud position of patriotic leadership in our country, is inexpressibly gratifying to me. No greater reward could come to any soldier than to receive such an honor from the men of his former command. I am most deeply touched. Please accept my heartfelt thanks and appreciation, with sincere regard and warmest personal affection to each and every one of you."

BROWNING FILES SEPARATION ACTION AGAINST "PEACHES"

on June 25, 1926 that she is living with her mother, and that I have been unable to ascertain her whereabouts."

Browning then asked that some disinterested person be appointed. "Some responsible person upon whom a summons can be made."

Rockwood, after accepting the appointment as guardian ad litem, called Peaches on the long-distance telephone at her mother's home, on Washington Heights, and informed her of the action.

"I told her that from now on she would be compelled to stay in this State," Rockwood said, "and that she would have to hold herself in readiness to appear in court as the defendant in this action."

Justice Morschauser stipulated that the suit must be tried as in the jurisdiction of Putnam county, in which lies the town of Cold Spring, where the past-middle-aged lover has established legal residence.

Browning, who for two weeks, since Peaches "left his bed and board" at the Kew Gardens inn after first packing up and sending away to the home of her mother, Mrs. Katherine Heenan, about $30,000 worth of clothes and gifts publicly proclaimed his lack of love for his mother-in-law in the suit papers.

Held Clever Move.

"I am acquainted with the mother of my wife," one section of the Browning deposition reads, "and in my opinion she is neither a disinterested person, nor is she a proper person to be appointed guardian ad litem for the said Frances H. Browning."

This suit is seen by lawyers as a shrewd attempt on the part of Browning to force the hand of his wife, who has not communicated with him in two weeks.

Mrs. Heenan and the runaway bride, who, judging from her statements, does not seem to know whether she loves Browning or not, are living at the Heenan flat at 600 West 157th street. That they anticipated legal action from Browning was indicated on Thursday by their visit to Max D. Steuer, well-known lawyer. They conferred with him for an hour.

Steuer admitted the pair tried to retain him, and said he was considering their proposal.

Browning Gets Writ.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). A write of habeas corpus ordering Mrs. Catherine Heenan, mother of "Peaches" Browning, to return "Peaches" to her husband, Edward W. Browning, was obtained in supreme court here today by Francis Dale, attorney for Browning.

"Wait a few days and you will have something startling—some real news this time," Dale predicted.

EUROPE UNFRIENDLY, ASSERTS UNDERWOOD

Feels U. S. Did Not Do Part in War, He Says on His Return.

(By Associated Press.)

A strong underlying sentiment against the United States was noted by Senator Underwood (Democrat), Alabama, on his recent trip abroad, he said yesterday on his return to the capital.

The European feels, he said, that the wealth of the United States was made out of the war and that this country did not do its part in the war. Any consideration now for the cancellation of the debt, he said, would appear as if the United States were pleading guilty to such an indictment.

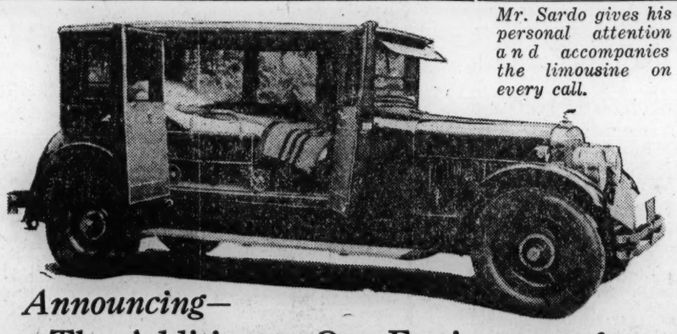

He expressed the fear it would be impossible to collect the debt unless the tariff were lowered to a "reasonable competitive basis," as the people of Europe felt the United States had closed its doors not only to them in person but commercially. Much of the feeling could be traced to loose talk by American travelers, Underwood said.

NATIONAL LEADERS TO KEEP HANDS OFF INDIANA CAMPAIGN

VISIT J. J. DAVIS PAID TO WALB REGRETTED

Charge Against "International Bankers" May Open the Door to Reed.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 16.—Although Republican leaders in this State have been unable to determine into what straits the Stephenson case, and the "whispering campaign" in which it has resulted, will place them between now and election day, they have received definite words from national sources that administration leaders are not going either to interfere or take a hand in a situation loaded with so much dynamite.

Before the imprisoned former grand dragon threw the State's political forces into a turmoil, national headquarters had made no elaborate provisions to take part in the situation here, both because the Republican candidates were considered safe and because support of national issues was no great part in either Senator James E. Watson's or Senator Arthur R. Robinson's campaign.

Aspect Changed Radically.

The complexion of the State fight has been changed radically within the past two weeks and although no formal request for aid had been made, the word has been sent here that do so would be useless. Harry S. New, Postmaster General, has been scheduled for a speaking tour that will carry him all about Indiana but not into it. Everett Sanders, secretary to the President, had an engagement to speak in the State, which has been canceled. Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, was considering an appearance on the Indiana hustings but will not be present now.

Washington and Chicago headquarters of the Republican organization are said now to regard the situation here as being a "family affair," which some of the Republican politicians characterized it whe charges first began to leak from Stephenson's cell in the Michigan city penitentiary. It is, in fact, considered such a family affair that national leaders feel it would be indelicate for them to discuss it.

Walb Message Regretted.

There is still no telling where it may lead within the State, and discussion of the matter on the stump in its present stages would of course be impossible.

Republican State leaders who have received this information have privately expressed the wish that the rule had been put into effect prior to the visit of James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, whose name was connected with the now famous Walb statement which may form the entering wedge for an investigation of the whole muddled state of affairs by Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, and his senatorial primary investigation committee.

The Walb telegram to Reed already is regarded by many members of the Indiana Republican party as a sad mistake because the charge contained in it, that international bankers had financed the opposition to Watson and Robinson, was calculated to arouse the curiosity of Senator Reed as nothing else could. And Mr. Walb in his message to Missouri connected Secretary Davis in such a way as to make him joint author of the message.

International Bankers.

The full text of the message leaves no doubt of the Labor Secretary's participation in its drafting, Republicans here say. It follows:

"Secretary of Labor Davis took breakfast with me this morning and we reviewed the Indiana situation completely and we are absolutely convinced that the whole situation in Indiana hinges around Senator Watson and Senator Robinson opposing the League of Nations and insisting that the foreign debt be paid.

"There is evidence everywhere that international bankers in Wall street have their money in every precinct in this State in the hands of fakers who pretend to have something up their sleeves and are putting on a probe, and at every hand we see the activity of this outfit attempting to defeat our senators and congressmen on account of their stand in the United States Senate and Congress on the League of Nations and payment of foreign debts."

Leads Into 1926 Ground.

Persons familiar with the fight that Senator Reed has made in the Senate for the past few years along these lines must realize that if the message had been deliberately designed to draw the Missouri investigator on, it could hardly have been better done.

It provides, moreover, an opening which connects Indiana's present involvement with the primary and election of 1926, the specific thing for which the Reed committee was given life and authority. Once an Indiana inquiry has been begun the Republicans can hardly hope to benefit even if they should, as has been suggested, block any investigation [illegible]anson charges as outlined in the resolution.

In the advertisement in the atrical section of today's paper the prices for the "Magda" matinees are incorrectly stated. The correct prices are: Wednesday 50 cents to $2.00, Saturday 50 cents to $2.50.

Watson Denies Opposing Reed Inquiry in Indiana

Statement Follows Report That He Questioned Right of Senatorial Committee to Take Up Adams' Charges of Corruption.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Thomas H. Adams, publisher of the Vincennes (Ind.) Commercial, said today that he will not take his sweeping charges of corruption in Indiana politics before Senator James A. Reed's senatorial campaign investigating committee at Chicago Monday unless an invitation comes from the committee.

United States Senator James E. Watson today denied reports that he opposed investigation of Indiana political corruption charges by Senator Reed's committee.

Referring specifically to a statement in the Chicago Tribune of today which represented Senator Watson as saying he would question the right of the Reed committee to investigate the Indiana situation on the ground that its powers extend only over 1926 primary election matters, the Indiana senator said that he had "made no such statement to any one nor did I even direct any person to make any such statement."

The Tribune said the statement was made through John Hayes, Senator Watson's secretary. The senator is in a hospital here recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident last Sunday.

The grand jury that has under investigation the political corruption charge was in adjournment today, but plans were made for calling as a witness next Monday John H. Kiplinger, Rushville attorney. Kiplinger is attorney for D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, who is now serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer. It has been alleged by Adams that Stephenson has evidence which would corroborate the allegations of corruption.

Several State senators are to be called before the grand jury. Stephenson is alleged to have exercised considerable influence in legislative matters during the 1925 session.

Mysterious moves continued to mark the case. Earl Klenck, a former associate of Stephenson who has been active in gathering evidence which Adams contends will support the corruption charges, was out of the city today on a secret mission. Reports also came that Mildred Meade, a 23-year-old girl, who was a confidante of Stephenson, and who is sought as a grand jury witness, had been seen in Cincinnati. A search was also in progress for L. G. Julian, another former associate of Stephenson, who is believed to have information concerning the former klansman's personal affairs.

ILLINOIS SENATE CAMPAIGN HINGES ON MAGILL STRENGTH

through which the reform element in Illinois has voiced its disapproval and objection to Smith as the Republican candidate. Julian Rosenwald and Raymond Robbins indicate the type of men who put Magill into the race.

Admittedly the entry of Magill and the peculiar way in which the Democratic and Republican forces of Chicago play politics have complicated the possibilities of the November election. The independent Republican candidate's first inclination was to avoid personalities and to make his appeal to the "public consciousness of the State."

More seasoned political advice evidently prevailed, for in his opening speeches Magill has dealt frankly not only with his opponents but with the Antisaloon league, which he is pillorying for its support of Smith.

Magill's greatest handicap is lack of any semblance of a machine. The Chicago Daily News, which played a part in the selection and entry of an independent candidate, says that this is being formed as Magill's tour of the State progresses, but political history has demonstrated that organization is seldom so spontaneous.

More important, probably, as a factor in the election, is the rumored and apparently authentic alliance which Brennan has formed with the Crowe-Barrett Republican machine in Cook county. There is much to indicate that Chicago's Republican organization, as wet as the Democrats, has no overmastering affection for Smith. The reported alliance will yield two judgeships for the Republican machine in return for support of Brennan.

Smith, therefore, who already carries the burden of the primary investigation revelations, is threatened with attack from two sectors that, under normal conditions, would not have to be defended.

Paint Smith as Martyr.

It seems at this writing almost certain that Brennan's majority in Cook county will be overwhelming and that Magill will cut into the Smith vote in the rural sections of the State, where Republicanism and adherence to the prohibition cause go hand in hand. Despite these handicaps Smith supporters in the State do not appear to be discouraged. The strategy which has been adopted to counteract the bad effect of the Insull charges is to paint Smith as a martyr. His friends are spreading the story that Smith had no knowledge of the Insull contributions—that they were obtained by his manager without the consent of the candidate, who refuses to "pass the buck."

Smith, moreover, appears to retain the support of the Antisaloon league which, apparently, is convinced that in order to prevent the victory of Brennan it will have to back Smith. Insull revelations and all, rather than shift to Magill. The Antisaloon league position has its awkward sides and is meeting with opposition from dry leaders but is hardly likely to be changed.

Estimates of the strength that Magill can command vary, also the sources from which he will draw his support, for it is expected that some down-State Democrats as well as Republicans may espouse his cause. The most generous estimate of his supporters is that he will poll 200,000 votes. The conservative belief is that the mark may reach 100,000. The pessimistic view is that his vote will be negligible.

Illness has handicapped the speaking tours of both Brennan and Smith. Cynics say that the inability of the Democratic candidate to take the stump has helped rather than hindered his cause, that his personal appearance in sections where he was not known had proved a drawback.

In any event, the boss of Illinois Tammany Hall will pile up a big vote in Cook county, East St. Louis, Peoria and other centers of population that are overwhelmingly wet. If Magill does develop rural strength the Democrats may find they have gained a seat in the Senate.

VARE IS DISQUALIFIED, NORRIS SAYS IN SPEECH

CORRUPTION IS CHARGED

Altoona, Pa., Oct. 16 (By A. P.). Opening his campaign against William S. Vare, Republican candidate for the Senate, Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, declared here tonight that Vare's election would put the stamp of approval on political corruption and the placing of a Senate seat upon the auction block.

Vare disqualified himself by the extensive expenditure of money in the primary campaign, Norris said, and the voters should elect William B. Wilson, his Democratic opponent, to rebuke the "corrupt machine."

The only argument against Mr. Wilson, he said, was based on "narrow, blind, and bigoted partisanship."

"The issue involved is more important than any party question that has ever arisen as it strikes at the very cornerstone of free government," the Nebraska senator contended.

"No free government can exist as long as its citizens are coerced and prevented from exercising at the ballot box their free and untrammeled will. When seats in the United States Senate are sold for cash, then it is only a question of time, a comparatively short time, until our government will be ruled either by the man in the saddle or by the mob.

"But the cry now in Pennsylvania by the machine politicians is 'vote the ticket straight, yellow dog and all.' Corruption is not denied."

Declaring that partisanship should disappear where patriotism was concerned, the Nebraska senator predicts that if Vare should be elected he would never be seated. If he should be seated, he said, the Senate should apologize to former Senator Truman H. Newberry, of Michigan, whose seat was questioned first he spent $190,000 in

Second Suit Filed In Ban on Knickers

Jeffersonville, Ind., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The suit brought to compel Port Fulton school authorities to allow 9-year-old Virginia Allen to attend classes in knickers was thrown out of court here today on the ground that it was filed in the girl's name, and it was illegal.

Mrs. Fayhma Allen, the child's mother filed a new petition in her name to accord with legal provisions which prevent a suit being filed in the name of a minor. Hearing of the new case was set for October 23. Meantime, the girl must remain out of school unless she gives up knickers.

Soviet Mine Position Given to American

Moscow, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). The soviet govrenment has appointed Charles E. Stuart, of New York, a member of Stuart, James & Cooke, engineers, to reorganize the Donitz coal mines along American lines.

Mr. Stuart is confident that the government will adopt his recommendations and replace the obsolete German-Russian equipment with modern American machinery, involving an ultimate expenditure in the United States of from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000.

Morristown, Tenn., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Howard Isenberg, 19, half back of the Morristown High school team, died last night of injuries received in a game with LaFollette High yesterday. He was carrying the ball when he suffered a blow on the head.

RECORD PROSPERITY ACHIEVED BY G.O.P., DECLARES HOOVER

Courage of Republicans in the White House, Congress and Cabinet Lauded.

REELECTION OF BUTLER AND WADSWORTH URGED

Secretary Declares Party's Policies Have Brought Highest Wages Level.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). In less than six years, under Republican national administration of its political affairs, the United States has attained a level of national prosperity never before experienced by any people, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, said in a speech here tonight. He spoke in behalf of two candidates for reelection to the United States Senate, Senator James W. Wadsworth, of New York, and Senator William M. Butler, of Massachusetts.

The nation has recuperated from a great war with unexampled speed, Mr. Hoover declared. It has aided stricken nations to recovery; it has nearly abolished poverty and has embarked upon the education of its children by unparalelled expenditure.

Without denying credit to the spirit, energy, and traditions of America's population at large, Mr. Hoover said that much of it should go to the display of governmental courage and wisdom by the Republican Presidents, Congresses, and cabinets who have exercised authority since 1921.

Helped America Forward.

Asserting that after the war there was a demand throughout the world that governments continue war-ownership and operation of many parts of industry, the Secretary said such a course meant the adoption of a "creeping state of socialism" against which the Republican party had turned its face to begin to "unlock the fetters which, from necessity in time of war, we had fastened on individual enterprise and opportunity."

This policy, he said, had figured largely in the forward movement of the American people while the rest of the world had halted or even gone backward.

"The Republican party," he continued, "holds to the protection of public interest by the regulation of private enterprise in public utilities—it does not believe in the deadening hand of operation by government bureaucracy. The Republican party has challenged socialism with a new twentieth century American individualism and we are ready to compare six years' experience in recovery and prosperity with every country which has been infected with these policies."

Republican policies, he said, had overcome the unemployment problem without resorting to doles or "fictitious employment by inflation." The American woman in the kitchen, he said, prizes beyond all "an honest-to-God job for her man."

Wages Never So High.

"Never before in our history," he said, "were real wages so high—wages measured not in dollars but in their purchasing power. They are the highest wages in the world."

Citing figures based on wages and prices over a period of years, Mr. Hoover said, in five years there had been "an astonishing increase in wages," parallel with a decrease in the price of things labor must buy.

"In America today," he said, "the poorhouse has become nearly as extinct as the slave block."

He argued that if the Democrats win the congressional elections, the legislative branch would come in conflict with the executive and there would be no party responsibility and no direction of any sort.

"The people of the United States justly have confidence in President Coolidge," he said. "In a world subjected to the violent stresses of reconstruction * * * we have seen him calmly, wisely, cautiously but courageously, holding the helm of our ship to a safe course, steadily driving onward * * *. In the President's great work he should be assisted and partisan politics should not prevent the accomplishment of his great desire to be of real and lasting service to the people of the United States."

Gov. Blaine to Vote "Yes" on 2.75 Beer

Madison, Wis., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Gov. John J. Blaine, Republican nominee for United States senator, announced today that he would vote "yes" in Wisconsin's 2.75 beer referendum at the November election.

The governor added "as a matter of principle," that he had "never favored, and does not now favor prohibition or other sumptuary legislation," but would abide by the result of the referendum. "It is important also to state that the Volstead act went too far," he said.

Kansas Farmers Tired Of Political Speeches

Arkansas City, Kans., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Kansas farmers are tired of political speeches. They voiced their sentiments yesterday at the closing session here of the Kansas Farmers union by proposing an amendment to the organization's constitution to abolish talks by office-seeking candidates at future conventions. They had just listened to several political speeches.

DEMOCRATIC FARM FIGURES ABSURDITY, DECLARES JARDINE

Secretary Denies Existence of Official Title Given in Book of Facts.

DATA OF LAST 3 YEARS IS HELD MISLEADING

Agriculture Going Through Process of Recovery, Despite Problems.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). In a letter made public today, W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, characterizes as "a statistical absurdity" figures in the "Book of Facts" issued by the national Democratic senatorial and congressional committee, intended to show the difference between purchasing power of the farmer's dollar, as compared with the dollar of people in industries.

Denial that the Department of Agriculture ever issued such a table as the figures were represented as being taken from, was made by Mr. Jardine in his letter, which was sent to Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, Eastern campaign director for the Republican senatorial and congressional committee. Mr. Tilson made the letter public.

Referring to figures in the "Book of Facts" for the years from 1921 to 1925, inclusive, Mr. Jardine said:

"No such table as this has ever been issued by the Department of Agriculture. Furthermore, the figures given for the last three years, 1923, 1924 and 1925, are, as used here, manifestly absurd."

Statistical Hybrid.

"This table to which you refer seems to be a sort of statistical hybrid," continued Mr. Jardine in his letter to Mr. Tilson. "Its effect is to reveal a trend that is partly fact and partly fiction. The figures given for the years from 1890 to 1922, inclusive, are, I believe, a representation of the ratio between wholesale prices of farm products and wholesale prices of all commodities. Presumably it has been obtained by dividing these respective series of price indexes as published by the bureau of labor statistics, calling the result the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar.

"But the figures shown in the foregoing table for the last three years, 1923, 1924 and 1925, are a statistical absurdity. Somebody has apparently attempted to bring the table down to date by grafting upon it three figures which have not the slightest proper place therein. The effect is to make the latter part of the table wholly incorrect and misleading. * * *

Farm Products Rising.

"Since 1921 agriculture has been going through a slow but steady process of recovery. The index of purchasing power of farm products has risen by an average of 5 points per year from its low point of 69 in 1921. It is true that cotton has slumped in price this fall, but it is equally true that other products of regional importance enjoy a favorable price position. In August, the latest month for which our figures are complete, such leading products as hogs, potatoes, butter, and wool had a unit purchasing power even above the prewar parity of exchange.

"Of course, no informed man will argue from this that the difficulties of farmers are ended nor that there are not yet real agricultural problems to be solved. On the other hand, no real progress can be made toward restoring full agricultural prosperity if such important matters as tariff protection or other issues of national policy are to be settled on the basis of incorrect and misleading statistical evidence."

'REPUBLICAN TRAGEDY' BAYARD'S RADIO TOPIC

President's Summer Visitors "Shaken Down" to Approve Third Term, He Says.

In a radio address last night, Senator Bayard, of Delaware, Democrat, dealt with the subject, "The Republican Tragedy." He described the "trials and tribulations" of those who visited the summer White House. He insisted they went to shake hands but were themselves "shaken down for a third term indorsement."

According to Senator Bayard, "an advertising man and not a newspaper reporter was called in after all the representatives of the press had departed, and was asked to and did write a polite homily on the domestic virtues of our President.

"I say third term longings for the patent reason that the 'best minds' had expressed their adulation of the President and his policies. The Republican candidates in the pending campaign would necessarily each one have to run on his own individual qualifications. But having hitched his wagon to the presidential star, he, in doing so, indorsed that political myth, the 'great accomplishment of the administration program.' So it comes about that while the 'great minds' were allowed to shake the hand of the President, he in turn shook them all down as indorsing him for a third term."

Balloon Races on May 29.

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 15 (By A. P.). The 1927 national elimination balloon race will start from Akron on May 29, it was announced by C. W. Seiberling, president of the Akron chapter of the National Aeronautic association.

Gov. Smith Insists Mills Tell Stand on Referendum

Charging Republicans With "Hypocrisy and Double-Crossing," He Demands Clean-Cut Reply; Advises All Democrats to Vote "Yes."

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Ending the first week of his campaign for reelection here tonight, Gov. Smith turned on the Republican organization of New York State with a charge that it had employed "hypocrisy, double-dealing and double-crossing in its attitude toward the prohibition question." Also, for the first time, he openly advised Democrats to vote "yes" on the wet and dry referendum to be referred to the voters this fall.

Speaking of his opponent, Ogden L. Mills, he said:

"Congressman Mills made the statement in Jamestown last night that he would answer any question I would ask him within an hour after I asked it. As a candidate for the governorship and as self-appointed leader of the Republican party, how does Congressman Mills advise his followers to yote on the referendum—yes or no? The answer to the question can not be a repetition of the jumble of words contained in the Republican platform and in his various speeches. It is clear cut, yes or no.

"I do not believe any one questions my leadership of the Democratic party and I advise all Democrats and all who are in sympathy with their aims and purposes to vote 'yes' in order to indicate that they favor a modification of the Volstead act."

Speaking at Niagara Falls, Representative Mills tonight charged the governor had made five deliberate misstatements in debating the issues of the present campaign. Chief of these, he said, was the governor's statement that the Republican candidate was seeking to convey to the fathers and mothers of the Bronx that milk they were buying was poisoneus.

The Republican candidate reiterated his charge of extravagance in the State administration under Gov. Smith and renewed his demands for a 'full investigation of the milk frauds in New York city, where, he declared, most of the milk on sale was adulterated and below the sanitary code standard.

Directly charging Gov. Smith with having blocked an investigation into milk frauds in the metropolis, he said:

"The people of this State will have to retire Gov. Smith and smash Tammany before they will get a full and impartial investigation."

M'CORMICK WIDOW TO TALK FOR WILLIS

Longworth Also to Take the Stump in Ohio as Mark Hanna Veteran.

Chicago, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Mrs. Medill McCormick, daughter of Mark Hanna and widow of the late senator from Illinois, announced today that she will take the stump about October 27 with Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House of Representatives, in behalf of Senator Willis, Republican candidate for reelection in Ohio.

"Congressman Longworth and I," she said, "are the only survivors of the old Mark Hanna organization in Ohio."

She will be active prior to October 27 in the Thirteenth congressional district, which includes her country seat in Ogle county, in behalf of Col. Frank L. Smith, Republican senatorial candidate from Illinois.

Mrs. McCormick has just returned from Washington, where she conferred with President Coolidge.

British Censor Bans Emerson-Loos Play

London, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The lord chamberlain has banned a play, "The Fall of Eve," written by John Emerson and Anita Loos, American authors, which was to have been produced at the West End theater shortly.

The chamberlain said that he was opposed to the whole theme of the play.

Mrs. Jean Nash Bride In Paris; 5th Wedding

Paris, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Mrs. Jean Nash, of New York, known as "the best-dressed woman in the world," took her fifth husband in the city hall of the Sixteenth ward of Paris yesterday when she married Paul Dubonnet, a well-known Parisian sportsman and son of the millionaire cordial manufacturer.

Dubonnet recently was divorced from the daughter of the perfume manufacturer, Francis Coty, who also is proprietor of the newspaper Figaro.

Outcome Will Depend on G. O. P. Vote Coming Out, Senator Asserts.

IMPRESSION GROWING COOLIDGE WILL SPEAK

Ohioan to Reintroduce His Agricultural Bill With Modifications.

In a conference with President Coolidge yesterday, Senator Fess, of Ohio, discussing the political outlook, pictured the senatorial fight as a hard one and the outcome uncertain. At the same time Senator Fess held the outcome largely depended on whether Republicans went to the polls.

Although Senator Fess did not indicate it, there is an impression here the President, before the campaign ends, will take occasion to make a strong appeal calculated to reach Republican voters and shake off any apathy.

Senator Fess again discussed the agricultural situation with the President. The Ohio senator announced that he would press the Fess bill with modifications next winter, and said the need for such legislation was stronger than ever in view of the cotton situation.

Contest a Hard One.

"The Senate contest is a hard and uncertain fight," said Senator Fess, "and the outcome depends on whether Republicans get to the polls."

He depicted the local situations and independent movements in some States as hurtful to the Republicans, and in this connection mentioned Oregon and New York. As to New York he said:

"The latest reports which I received indicate that Senator Wadsworth will be elected."

Senator Fess has been speaking in New York and Massachusetts. He said the Massachusetts fight was a straight one between the two parties. "The chances favor the election of Senator Butler," he said.

Local troubles, he pointed out, have caused difficulty in Indiana, but he thought the charges in circulation there would not seriously hurt the Republican senators.

Willis to Be Reelected.

"Senator Willis will be elected in Ohio," added Senator Fess. "We're making the campaign there on support of the administration and the

$265,740 WOMEN'S WING BEING ADDED TO DISTRICT'S JAIL

Crowded Conditions Make Building of New East Portion Imperative.

WILL TAKE 10 MONTHS TO CONSTRUCT ADDITION

Prisoners Move Today to Make Way for Erection of Larger Quarters.

An entire new east wing, which will take ten months to complete, is being added to the District jail. The usual cause of money spending is the reason for the need of the new addition—women.

The present east wing quarters the women prisoners and the jail kitchen. With the advent of bobbed-hair bandits and husband-shooting women into present day crime, the women's section in the institution has become crowded and the need of larger quarters for some time past has been felt. When completed the east wing will be the largest section of the jail.

The wing will be 192 feet 9 inches long and 45 feet wide. Sixty feet of the present wing will be left standing and 132 feet will be added to it. The entire rear of the wing will be torn away before construction begins.

Temporary Kitchen Erected.

At preset women prisoners coming into the institution are forced to pass through corridors in the sections of the jail occupied by the men. With the completion of the new wing the women will be isolated. The addition is being made at the cost of $265,740.

Before planning on the removal of the women prisoners and the kitchen to other quarters, tearing away the roof of the wing and the huge chimney in the rear was begun a few days ago, but had to be discontinued. Three workmen were overcome by fumes from the chimney while removing the uppermost stones.

Yesterday Maj. William L. Peak, superintendent of the jail, supervised the completion of the erection of a temporary kitchen at the cost of a few pieces of lumber. The kitchen was built between the east-wing dining room for men and the boiler room.

Women to Be Moved Today.

Today is to be moving day for the women. The third floor of the west wing, which was destroyed by fire a year ago, has been remodeled, and that and the second floor of the wing will be utilized by the women. The men prisoners, who occupied the two floors, have been quartered in other parts of the jail.

The medical staff of the jail, Drs. Thomas Fearns and Ralph Mangannar, yesterday were forced to flee to Gallinger hospital before the coming of the women. Their quarters were in the west wing on the second floor.

The prison walls in the rear of the jail completely will be torn away within a few months. By January, it is expected, the construction of the wing will commence and by July the new wing will be completed.

Women to Be Guests Of Cosmopolitan Club

Members of the Cosmopolitan club will entertain their wives and friends at their first winter women's night in the Carlton hotel Wednesday.

McKee, entertainment, and Lawrence Rubel, publicity.

Police Seek Girl, 15, As Hospital Fugitive

Police yesterday were searching for Miss Ethel Spitzer, 15 years old, a ward of the board of public welfare, who escaped from Gallinger hospital Friday night, clad in a nurse's uniform. She was described as having dark eyes and dark hair.

Charles Newman, colored, 17 years old, also a ward of the board of public welfare, was reported missing from 2524 Sheridan road yesterday. Wyoma Smith, 13 years old, who disappeared Friday from her home in Riverdale, returned yesterday, her parents notified police.

Killeen Gets Divorce On Desertion Ground

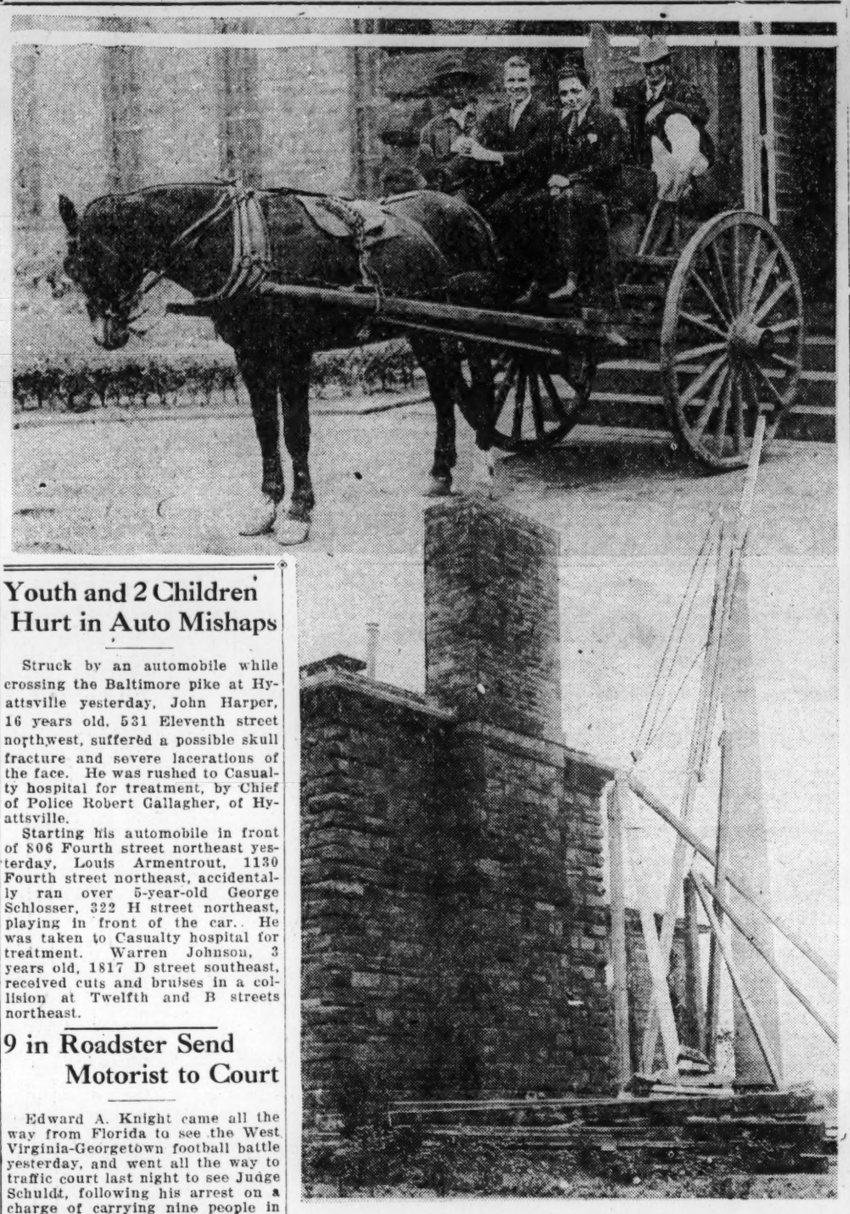

Judge Robert B. Peter has signed a decree in circuit court, Rockville, Md., granting to Edward V. Killeen, of Washington, well-known in sporting circles, an absolute divorce from Mrs. Ollie Killeen, on the ground of desertion. He was represented by P. Kenneth Lyddane, attorney of Rockville.

According to the bill, the couple was married March 10, 1920, in Baltimore, and lived together until March 21, 1922. They have no children, the bill stated.

Youth and 2 Children Hurt in Auto Mishaps

Struck by an automobile while crossing the Baltimore pike at Hyattsville yesterday, John Harper, 16 years old, 531 Eleventh street northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture and severe lacerations of the face. He was rushed to Casualty hospital for treatment, by Chief of Police Robert Gallagher, of Hyattsville.

9 in Roadster Send Motorist to Court

Edward A. Knight came all the way from Florida to see the West Virginia-Georgetown football battle yesterday, and went all the way to traffic court last night to see Judge Schuldt, following his arrest on a charge of carrying nine people in his roadster after the game.

The judge took his personal bond. Asked to explain how nine persons could get in a roadster, Traffic Policeman W. A. Schotter told the court that three sat on the front seat, four on the top and two more in a small rear compartment. Knight told the judge he had been warned he was breaking the law and was on his way to a nearby hotel to unload when Schotter stopped him.

Autoists Deprecate "Lifts" to Children

Terming the giving of "lifts" to children one of the gravest hazards of the highway, the American Automobile association yesterday entered the war against this practice by calling on parents and motorists to discourage children from asking a "lift," by counsel and by refusal of such requests.

Hundreds of accidents are caused yearly by this practice, the association states, and the number is growing rapidly. The association is planning to arrange a national campaign to discontinue this practice.

Mrs. Bradford Files Counter Divorce Suit

Mrs. Bettie Burch Bradford, who was sued for divorce in circuit court at Rockville several weeks ago by her husband, Granville C. Bradford, local real estate man, has replied with a counter suit naming a corespondent and charging her husband embezzled $7,960 of her money.

He charged her with desertion. He is represented by Attorney John E. Oxley, of Rockville, and Mrs. Bradford is represented by Robert Peter, jr.

protective tariff. Both are popular in Ohio. I think Ohio is Republican this year both as to senator and governor. I believe we will gain at least two congressmen in the Canton and Akron districts."

Senator Fess, in connection with agricultural matters, is interested, in addition to the bill he urged last session, in the plea for reduction of freight rates. He does not see how the roads, dependent on receipts chiefly from agricultural freight, can cut agricultural rates unless they are put into consolidations with roads that have a large traffic in industrial products and products other than agricultural.

CITY HEADS INVITED TO MUSICAL DINNER

Party, November 6, Will Be for Mrs. E. S. Kelly, Federation President.

District Commissioners Dougherty, Rudolph and Bell, accompanied by their wives, will be among the guests at a dinner to be given the night of November 6 by the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs, in honor of Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelly, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs. The dinner will be held in the Raleigh hotel.

Mrs. Kelly is the wife of a widely known American composer and has achieved a reputation herself as a musician. More than 100 reservations already have been made for the dinner, to which all who are interested in music have been invited.

The dinner committee: Karl Holer, tickets; Mildred Meyers and Esther Linkins, invitations; Frances Gutelius and Mrs. Henry White, decorations; Mrs. J. M. Stoddard, seating, and Miss Helen Miller, program.

WOMAN IS SOUGHT IN SCRIVENER CASE

will leave here this morning for Winchester, Va., where Headquarters Detective Scrivener is to be buried at 1 o'clock.

The automobiles will leave the District building between 7:30 and 8 o'clock, bearing 150 members of the Vincent B. Costello post of the American Legion. Included in the delegation will be a drum and bugle corps, a firing squad and a color guard. Members of the post have been asked to assemble at the District building not later than 7:30 o'clock this morning.

The Washington lodge of Elks and members of the Masonic lodge, of which Scrivener was a member, also will attend the funeral. Funeral music will be furnished by the Meyer Goldman band.

CARNIVAL-CABARET AT JEWISH CENTER WILL LAST 3 DAYS

Committees Are Appointed for Booths, Games and the Other Attractions.

RABBI JONAH B. WISE HEADS LECTURE GROUP

Sophie Braslau, Metropolitan Opera Contralto, Will Sing on October 31.

A three-day carnival-cabaret is being planned by the Jewish Community center and the Council of Jewish Women for November 1, 2, and 3. The festival will be given in the auditorium of the center at Sixteenth and Q streets northwest and the proceeds will be shared equally by the two organizations.

Mrs. Leonard B. Schloss, president of the council, heads a group of committees arranging for booths, games and other attractions. Mr. Myer Fichman, of the center, is rehearsing a musical show to be known as the Blackbottom revue which will be the leading feature of the entertainment.

The revue will be given all three evenings and again on the afternoon of November 4 at a children's party, which will be the closing event of the fete.

Committees for Fete.

Entertainment, Maurice Bisgyer, Edward Rosenblum, Mrs. M. Bisgyer, Myer Fichman, Mrs. Earl Klein and Mrs. H. Herzberg; tickets, Mrs. Henry Jaffe, Mrs. Sherry Stein, Mrs. M. Tempchin, Mrs. Maurice Narcissenfield, Mrs. H. Perlman, Miss Rose Hornstein, Miss Jeanette Baer, Milton Korman, Allen de Ford, Mrs. William Rosendorf and M. Garfinkle; booths, Mrs. Barney Liebman, Mrs. Alvin Newmyer, Mrs. N. Kal, Mrs. Harold Levi, M. Garfinkle and M. Stein; games, Mrs. Jerome Meyer, Mrs. Morton Luchs, Mrs. Edmund Kaufmann, Mrs. Isidore Semsker, Milton Korman, Henry Kaufman, Charles Frank, Mrs. Louis Simon, Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, Mrs. Lee Baumgartner, Mrs. Wallace Luchs; flowers, Mrs. Harry Rosenberg and Mrs. Helen Levinson; candy, Mrs. A. Leibman, Mrs. G. Nordlinger and Mrs. Harry Sherby; children's party, Mrs. M. Baer, Mrs. E. Kaufman, Mrs. I. M. Gensberg and Mrs. Bertha Israel.

The educational program of the center is rapidly taking form, and in a few weeks the activities will be in full swing with the lecture and concert series.

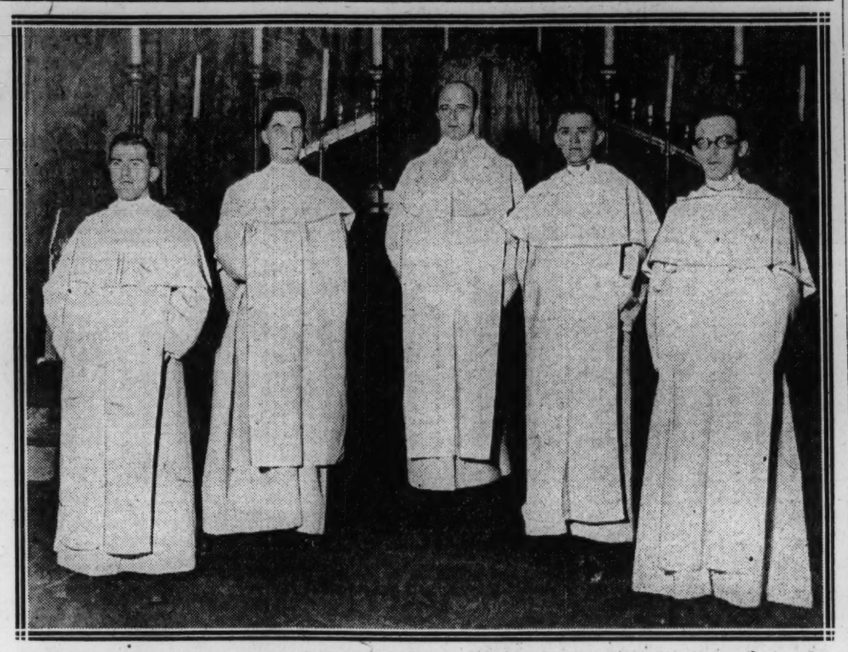

The first lecture in the national Jewish forum will be given by Dr. Jonah B. Wise, rabbi of New York and son of Isaac M. Wise, the founder of reformed Judaism in America. Dr. Wise has won fame as an arbiter of labor disputes in Oregon and is a frequent contributor to social and labor journals. Others who will speak in this forum are Samuel Untermyer and Max Steur, New York lawyers.

The first artist to appear in the Sunday evening concert series will be Sophie Braslau, contralto, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera company, who will appear at the center October 31.

A course in Hebrew, given by Dr. Israel Schapiro, of George Washingtgon university, also has had a large registration. A class on the American newspaper, under Herbert Hollander, will start in a few weeks, and rehearsals for the center symphony orchestra, under Henri Sokolov, are scheduled to start next Sunday morning.

PRIESTS TO SAIL FOR MISSION IN CHINA

Dominican priests, former students at Dominican House, Brookland, who will sail next month to take up their missionary work in China. Left to right—the Rev. William F. Cassidy, the Rev. J. M. Barrett, the Rev. H. A. Burke, the Rev. R. E. Brennan, and the Rev. F. A. Gordon.

SERVICES WILL HONOR MISSIONARIES TO CHINA

Five Priests Will Be Given Farewell at St. Dominick's Church Tomorrow.

DR. SHAHAN WILL PRESIDE

Five Dominican priests, who are to sail next month for China, where they will take up missionary work, will be given a farewell service tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in St. Dominic's church, Sixth and E streets southwest.

The five priests are: The Rev. H. A. Burke, O. P., of New Haven, Conn.; the Rev. W. F. Cassidy, O. P., of Michigan City, Ind.; the Rev. R. E. Brennan, O. P., of Lima, Ohio; the Rev. J. M. Barrett, O. P., of Lowell, Mass., and the Rev. F. A. Gordon, O. P., of Somerset, Ohio. All were former students at the Dominican House of Studies, 487 Michigan avenue northeast.

The Right Rev. T. J. Shahan, rector of Catholic university, will preside at the ceremonies, which will be a joint testimonial to the departing missionaries by the members of St. Dominic's parish and their former classmates from the Dominican House of Studies. The Dominican students will sing compline and assist in the services. Many priests of the Dominican order will be present, including the professorial staff from the House of Studies, the Very Rev. W. G. Scanlon, O. P., prior of St. Dominic's church, the Very Rev. H. I. Smith, prior of Immaculate Conception college, and the Rev. L. E. Hughes, director of foreign missions, New York city.

The Very Rev. Raymond Meagher, O. P., provincial of the Dominican fathers in this country and a former pastor of St. Dominic's church, will read the formal notification to the young priests, assigning them to their foreign labors. Their duties will be in the Fukien province of China. The American Dominicans have been laboring in the northern district of China for several years. Other missionaries are working in Kenningfu, Chungan, and Kienyan.

LOCAL REALTY FIRM PURCHASES COLONIAL

Hotel Will Be Part of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory Chain.

The Colonial hotel, Fifteenth and M streets northwest, formally was taken over yesterday by Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, Inc., according to an announcement by the firm. It will be operated in conjunction with the string of hotels now owned and operated by this company.

The hotel was purchased from Duncan F. Power. The price was not given but is understood to have been in the neighborhood of $800,000. W. P. Hutchison, for 15 years associated with the management of the Shoreham, will be resident manager.

The American plan will be stressed at the Colonial, but guests will be accommodated on the European plan where desired.

Acquisition of the Colonial gives Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory a string of six hotels in Washington, the others being the Cairo, Martinique, Arlington, Fairfax and Tilden Hall.

Suit Filed to Divide $150,000 in Realty

Suit has been instituted in the Supreme court of the District to procure a partition of 1143 Eighteenth street and 1144 and 1146 Connecticut avenue northwest, among the heirs of the late Catherine Shea. This property, which is valued at 150,000, was owned by Catherine Shea, who upon her death left a life estate in favor of her daughter, Elizabeth Shea.

Elizabeth Shea died recently and three of the heirs, through Attorneys Wilton J. Lambert and R. H. Yeatman, have asked the court to appoint trustees to sell the property so that the proceeds may be divided among all of the parties in interest.

Written Examinations For Teachers Thursday

Written examinations for teachers in various subjects in the colored divisions of the public schools will be held at 9 o'clock Thursday morning in Franklin school. Examinations will be in the following subjects:

Educational sociology in the Miner Normal school; clerical practice, sheet metal work and wood work in the junior high schools; bricklaying in the vocational schools, and the management of incorrigible boys and incorrigible girls in the elementary schools.

Clothing for Syrian Refugees Asked Here

An appeal to the public of Washington for old clothing for refugees in Syria was issued yesterday by Harold F. Pellegrin, director of the Potomac division of the Near East relief.

It is hoped to get the old garments into Syria before the rainy season sets in soon. Any kind of old clothing that is warm and wearable is acceptable. The clothes should be sent to the headquarters of the relief organization at 321 Bond building, Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest. There are 125,000 refugees in need of clothing in Syria and many of these are women and children.

MUSICIANS TO HONOR AMPHION CLUB HEAD

Will Pay Tribute Tuesday to J. Henri Lewis, Leader for 35 Years.

Musicians from this and neighboring cities, according to Wellington A. Adams director of the Columbia Conservatory of Music, will unite in testimonial to J. Henri Lewis, for 35 years conductor of the Amphion Glee club, Tuesday night at the Dunbar High school. The club was organized by Lewis in 1891.

It is the oldest organization of its kind in America. Appearances for President McKinley on the Dolphin were frequent, and it has been called on in days past to entertain the Russian Ambassador, former Secretary of State Elihu Root, Mrs. Joseph Leiter and members of the Democratic caucus when Senator Hoke Smith sat in Congress.

The club has to its credit the staging of the comic opera, "Pirates of Penzance," at the old Academy of Music. Besides Lewis, only two, Dr. James H. Washington, second bass, and Charles Champ, second tenor, remain of the original organization. In 35 years its roster has included the names of more than 500 men. Its present number is 25.

Palisades Landscape Prizes Are Awarded

Awards for the best lawns along the Cabin John car line were made at the meeting of the Potomac Palisades Garden and Landscape club held Friday in the Community church at Potomac Heights.

First prize was taken by Mr. L. T. Alden, 5711 Sherier place, and second prize by Mr. John T. Jones 5519 Shetier place. The prize were given by the Washington Railway & Electric Co., which will give prizes for the best window boxes now on display along Prospect avenue, Melvin Sharpe, executive assistant to the company, said.

MISS SUTHERLAND'S SUIT IS SET FOR TOMORROW

$10,000 DAMAGES ASKED

The $10,000 damage suit filed by Miss Katherine Sutherland, daughter of Howard Sutherland, alien property custodian, against Silas Jacobs, 3815 New Hampshire avenue northwest, is scheduled for trial tomorrow in circuit court No. 2, before Justice Siddons.

The suit is the result of the collision May 9, 1925, in Rock Creek park, between an automobile driven by Jacobs and a horse ridden by Miss Sutherland. Miss Sutherland's arms were fractured and she was rendered unconscious, she alleged. Mrs. "Bucky" Harris, sister of Miss Sutherland, was to have been one of the chief witnesses.

Jacobs denied, in his plea, that he was responsible, and also denied that Miss Sutherland's injuries were of the nature alleged by her. Lambert, Yeatman & Canfield, attorneys, will appear for Miss Sutherland, while P. Gad Morehouse, attorney, will defend Jacobs.

The father of the plaintiff in this case is a defendant in a damage suit filed by Mrs. Nancy Smith Law, of Pinehurst, N. C This plaintiff alleged that Mr. Sutherland's automobile collided with one in which she was riding September 18, 1925, at the intersection of New Hampshire avenue and S street northwest. This case has not yet been tried.

Jewish Center Opens New Library Station

The Great October COAT SALE

$44

That annual event for Women and Misses Continues tomorrow.

As we've asked so often, "What's the coat strike got to do with it?" Our record business Friday and Saturday tended to prove that coat strike publicity increased our sales. Maybe we owe the coat strike a vote of thanks.

But we're more inclined to believe that Washington women look forward every year to our October coat sales. And they're worth while waiting for—when you find such fabrics, furs, tailoring as combine to make these coats the remarkable values they present.

The fine performance of this Freshman Masterpiece which has set a high standard for perfect reception, distance, selectivity and simplicity, was a delight to the ear.

These two reasons made patrons want the Consolette at sight, but when they heard the price, they just had to have it.

Never before has an absolutely new model radio been offered at so great a saving. Such a low price was only possible through the great concession made us by the manufacturer, so we could offer this Consolette as a sensational feature.

The Consolette is the radio you've been waiting for—so artistic in its slender design that it will add to the beauty of any room. The cabinet is duo-tone solid mahogany—has the charm of a colonial heirloom. In performance the Consolette is up-to-the-minute in all the features which assure perfect reception.

Remember, too, this is a complete Freshman Masterpiece in one unit and must not be confused with inferior sets assembled in cheap cabinets and sold at prices higher than we ask for this beautiful real Freshman Masterpiece Consolette.

THE CONSOLETTE pictured is one piece; 36½ inches high, 19½ inches wide, 10 inches deep.. Ideal for the small apartment.

PARTY LINES SPLIT BY DRY LAW ISSUE IN KEYSTONE STATE

DEMOCRATS AID G. O. P. GOVERNORSHIP NOMINEE

Special to The Washington Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 16.—How the prohibition issue is dividing families, splitting parties and playing hob generally in this national election is illuminatingly exemplified by the Democratic campaign in Pennsylvania.

Appearing together daily on the stump are former Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson, Democratic candidate for senator, a bone dry, and Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, Democratic candidate for governor, a wringing wet. Perhaps you think they are able to do this by dodging the burning question of modifying national prohibition so as to permit the restoration of light wines and beer. Well, they do not. They discuss it fully and freely.

With Judge Bonniwell seated on the platform and preserving an attitude of studious attention, Mr. Wilson leads off, portraying the benefits of prohibition, arguing for the preservation of a state of unmitigated bone dryness and vigorously lamming the modificationists. All this to the enthusiastic applause of the drys in the audience, who appear to be mostly women.

Then Judge Derides Dry Law.

Then Judge Bonniwell takes the floor and Mr. Wilson becomes a solemnly interested auditor. The judge rakes Volsteadism fore and aft and holds the bone drys up to derision. Great applause on the part of the wets, mostly men. The meeting breaks up and the electors depart, the wet Democrats to support Boss Bill Vare, the wet Republican candidate for senator, the dry Democrats to give their suffrages to Mr. Fisher, the dry Republican candidate for governor.

The Republican candidates, no less divergent than the Democratic nominees in their prohibition views, are also appearing daily on the same platform. But they are preserving an appearence of harmony and doing it by avoiding any mention of the question of the hour.

At the begining of the campaign Vare announced that he stands by his primary pledges to work for the restoration of beer and light wines and has not referred to the matter since. He does not need to in order to get the united support of the wets of both parties and he does not dare to from fear of making the Republican drys madder.

No Platform to Embarrass Them.

There is one embarrassment the candidates have been spared in this State. That is a platform declaration on prohibition. In almost every other State party leaders have experienced great mental anguish in devising prohibition planks that will appear wet to the wets and dry to the drys. They have had only measurable success and almost everywhere wet candidates are running on dry platforms and dry candidates on wet. Not so in Pennsylvania, however, for the simple reason that in this State there are no platforms. Both parties have dispensed with that part of the political ritual since the advent of the direct primary. Each candidate is allowed to roll his own.

The Republican organization is united in support of Vare and Fisher. Vare and the Mellons made their peace after the primary. Gov. Pinchot announced that he would not support Vare, but as he has no organization his influence will be negligible. Philadelphia and Pittsburgh will roll up enormous majorities for the Republican ticket. There has been a new registration in Philadelphia, the Republicans registering 415,000, the Democrats 22,000.

Registration was comparatively light in wards in which Pepper received conspicuous support in the primary, indicating that there is a considerable number of dry Republicans who are not going to vote at all.

Vare undoubtedly will be cut considerably in the dry rural districts and even with the support of the wet Democrats probably will run behind Fisher. The wet Democrats come largely from the ranks of union labor, which is partial to Vare despite the fact that his Democratic rival was formerly Secretary of Labor. And, though Mr. Wilson once worked in a mine, the coal miners are largely with Vare in this fight. They want their beer.

COUNTESS KAROLYI'S SUIT IN COURT ON SATURDAY

Demands Kellogg Be Mandamused to Order Visa He Has Denied.

TO BE TRIED ON MERITS

The Karolyi mandamus case, involving the power of Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg to use his discretion in admitting aliens to this country, even for temporary visits, will be heard on its merits in the circuit court on Saturday.

The petitioner is Countess Catherine Karolyi, wife of Count Michael Karolyi, of Hungary, who was not permitted to come to the United States to accept the invitation of a publisher of Philadelphia, Pa., for a temporary visit. While it is generally known why Mr. Kellogg refused the countess admission, he has never stated his reasons publicly. He even declined to explain them when he appeared before the Senate committee on foreign relations on March 3 last.

The count was more fortunate than the countess. He was allowed to enter, but was "muzzled" by Mr. Kellogg. Not until the count arrived in Canada did he unburden himself of the thoughts he was forbidden to express orally in the United States.

The countess, through her counsel, Howe, Swayne & Bradley, has asked the court to issue a writ of mandamus to compel Mr. Kellogg to instruct the American consul at Paris to visa her passport, an act which Mr. Kellogg has steadfastly refused to do.

District Attorney Peyton Gordon and his assistant, Leo A. Rover, will both contend that, under the laws pertaining to the visits or entrance of aliens, the Secretary of State is vested with discretionary powers that can not be reviewed by the courts. This case has been pending since February.

45 Britons Injured In Mine Strike Fight

London, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—A dozen policemen, 30 miners and 3 women were seriously injured in a fight growing out of an attack yesterday upon the Glyncymmer colliery, near Port Talbot, South Wales, by 700 strikers. The strikers were attempting to prevent a few nonstrikers from continuing work.

Harkness Estate Put at $85,000,000

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—An estate of $85,000,000 on which inheritance taxes estimated at $16,000,000 are payable, was left by Mrs. Anna M. Harkness, widow of Stephen V. Harkness, one of the earliest partners of John D. Rockefeller, it was shown in an inventory made public today. The will, admitted to probate April 5, named as executor Edward S. Harkness, son of the testator, who is the beneficiary of the residuary estate, which will amount to approximately $60,000,000.

It is estimated that the Federal inheritance tax will total $8,000,000, the New York inheritance taxes $3,000,000 and the taxes payable to other States in which were organized corporations issuing stocks owned by Mrs. Harkness, $5,000,000.

DENYING GRAFT CHARGE BLAIR FIRM SUES FORD

$2,000,000 IS DEMANDED

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Replying to charges of graft and bribery with a complete denial and an allegation of dilatory payment, the John M. Blair Construction Co. today filed a $2,000,000 damage suit against the Ford Motor Co.

The suit was an answer to one filed October 6 by the Ford concern for an undetermined amount said to run into millions, in which it was charged that the Blair company had bribed Ford employes to accept inferior material in seven construction projects, allow exorbitant prices and approve padded accounts for labor not actually supplied. The Ford suit asked an accounting and cancellation of the contracts.

John M. Blair, president of the construction company, declaring that he had been obliged to put $700,000 of his own savings into the projects because of Ford delays in payment, asserted in filing his bill that he would suffer $2,000,000 damage should the contracts be canceled. He denied bribery or any of the graft charged. An injunction was obtained preventing Ford from engaging any contractor other than Blair on the disputed works.

The Ford bill declared that $5,075,273 had been paid on account for work done here, at Somerville, Mass., and Memphis, Tenn., and asked the accounting to separate moneys justly due from those declared fraudulently asked.

J. L. Bowles and F. G. Brown, supervisors for Ford of the Blair contracts, were mentioned by the Ford bill as having made large sums of money by accepting false accounts.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS QUEEN TO BE NAMED TOMORROW NIGHT

Thirty-Six Will Seek Honor at Program in the Tivoli Theater.

CARNIVAL TO BE RULED BY WINNER AND COURT

After Parade, Thursday, Coronation Is to Be Held at Street Throne.

Thirty-six young women will line up on the stage at the Tivoli theater at 7:20 p. m., tomorrow. By 9 o'clock, one of them will have been selected "Miss Columbia Heights, 1926."

The winner will be queen of the Columbia Heights carnival. She will be elected by popular applause. The 35 unsuccessful aspirants for the honor will become a court of honor and will participate with the queen in the carnival exercises Thursday and Friday nights.

Miss Louise Sobotka, who was queen of the carnival last year, will be on hand tomorrow night to congratulate her successor. The first public appearance of the queen will come at the opening of the carnival at 8 p. m., Thursday, when she and her court will ride in the parade.

After the parade she will take her throne in the court at Fourteenth and Kenyon streets northwest, and there, in the presence of two District commissioners, will have the crown placed on her head.

Jerry Wolf, of the contest committee, is making arrangements to have motion pictures made of the coronation.

In Parade Friday Also.

The work of decorating the stores and streets in the carnival area already has begun. This area extends along Fourteenth street from Columbia road to Monroe street.

Final arrangements for the carnival will be made at a meeting of the carnival committee at 1 p. m tomorrow. The committee already has arranged for band music, for entertainment by clowns, and for costume parades.

Community Centers Participate.

Two centers of the community center department—those of Wilson Normal school and Central High school—will take part in the carnival. The department itself will be represented by Mrs. I. E. Kebler and Mrs. Edith H. Hunter.

Each center will have a candidate in the queen contest, Miss Florence Philpit representing the center in the Wilson Normal center and Miss Marguerite Bogue the Central High center. Each center also will have a group of children in the costume parade Friday night.

The community center float, which will be in the parade Thursday night, has been designed and built by Harold Snyder. It is surmounted by a replica of a schoolhouse. The organization will have a display in a store at 3105 Fourteenth street, which will include samples of the work done in the community centers.

Strangers Are Refused Spoons in Paris Cafe

Paris, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Thirty francs for a cup of tea charged in one of the chic restaurants in the Bois de Boulogne has caused many protests from customers. The tea is very weak and no spoon is served with it.

"I don't mind paying a dollar for a cup of sweetened hot water," an American remarked to the waiter recently, "but at least give me a spoon to stir up the sugar with."

"The absence of spoons is the reason why the tea costs thirty francs," came the reply. "We had a thousand spoons at the beginning of the season; we have about fifty left. Souvenir hunters took the rest. We serve spoons now only to customers we know."

11 DIE AS SHIP SINKS IN THE ST. LAWRENCE

5 Men Saved; Woman Among Victims When Steamer Guide Is Lost.

Quebec, Quebec, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Eleven persons, including one woman, lost their lives when the freight and passenger steamer Guide sank in heavy weather last night near Godbout, on the northern shore of the St. Lawrence. News of the disaster was received today by the North Shore Trading Co., owners of the vessel.

Five other men on board the steamer were saved. Among the missing are Capt. J. M. Caron, First Mate Henri Fortin, and four passengers, Miss Anna Marcoux, address unknown; J. K. Laflamme, a former mayor of Levis; Joseph Belanger, of Natashquan, Quebec, and Joseph Collar, of Romaine, Quebec.

The Guide at 6 o'clock last night, two hours before the tragedy, passed Pointe Des Monts, about 15 miles below the place where she sank. She gave no signs of being in distress at that time, and it is believed that she capsized when her cargo was shifted by the heavy seas.

LLOYD GEORGE CALLS FOR FIGHT ON LIQUOR

Liberal Leader Says Traffic Is Crying Evil for Party to Oppose.

Barnstaple, England, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Former Premier David Lloyd George, in an address here today, described the liquor traffic as one of the "crying evils" which the liberal party must fight in England.

It was the former premier's first address since the retirement of Lord Oxford and Asquith as leaders of the liberal party.

Lloyd George deprecated the split in the party, and made an appeal for unity. He referred to Lord Oxford as "that great liberal leader, Lord Oxford, one of the most illustrious of the party's brilliant array of leaders."

Lloyd George's reference to the liquor question during his address recalled the fact that on his return from the United States he expressed frank approval of the American prohibition law.

LABOR UNIONS WIN AGAINST PAINT FIRM IN SUPREME COURT

DISPUTE STARTED BY DIFFERENCE IN SCALE

Five-Day Week Involved in Suit Arising From Mayflower Hotel Job.

A labor union dispute, which incidentally involves the five-day week, was decided yesterday in the equity division of the District of Columbia Supreme court by Justice James F. Smith in favor of the unions.

The case, which was brought into court by the Barker Painting Co., of New York city, involved an alleged conspiracy to interfere with interstate commerce in violation of the Sherman act.

The object of the injunction suit was to prevent the Brotherhood of Painters and Paperhangers of America, and the Washington local and its officers, from enforcing or attempting to enforce the so-called "higher wage," "shorter work" and "50 per cent rules" of the unions.

The court acquired jurisdiction of this case because the work which was to be performed was the decorating of what was then known as the Walker hotel in this city, which now is operated as the Mayflower hotel. The dispute started when the Barker concern advertised for painters, and these painters were informed that the New York scale, which called for a five-day week and $10.50 for an eight-hour day, would be their guide. The Washington scale called for a five-and-a-half-day week and $9 for an eight-hour day.

Could Not Get Men.

Because of this difference the Barker Co. charged that it was not able to procure painters as required. Then the injunction bill was filed charging a combination in restraint of trade under the Sherman act which, it was alleged, consisted of the act of attempting to enforce the New York scale. The Barker Co. agreed to be guided by the Washington scale.

In deciding that the Barker concern is not entitled to an injunction and that the unions are within their lawful rights in demanding that the concern recognize the New York scale, the court says:

"If a thousand workers present, without duress or threat, a united demand that a certain wage be paid them for eight hours daily labor during a five-day week or a 5½-day week, they are no more engaged in an unlawful enterprise than is the individual worker who makes the same terms a condition for his acceptance of employment.

"Section 6 of the Clayton act expressly provides that labor organizations shall not be construed to be illegal combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade under anti-trust laws.

"The Barker Painting Co. has no more cause to complain because painters of the District of Columbia refused to enter its service than they have to complain because it declined to employ them.

"Used No Threats."

"The court finds, first, (a) that the combination of the defendants to fix wages and working hours, the fixing thereof, and the collective demand for such wages and working hours, was lawful; (b) that the defendants neither used nor threatened to use any unlawful methods or means to compel the plaintiff to yield to their demands for such wages and working hours; (c) that the wage and working time rules of the brotherhood do not vest nor tend to vest any painting or decorating concern or concerns with the control of the painting or decorating business; and that as the labor of human beings and the contracting for painting and decorating are not objects of interstate trade or commerce, the collective demand of the defendants that the wages and working time fixed by the brotherhood be recognized and accepted by the plaintiff as a condition for its employment of brotherhood painters does not constitute the combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce contemplated by the antitrust laws."

Commissioner of Internal Revenue David H. Blair and his assistant, C. R. Nash, were the guests of honor at the annual oyster roast and field day of the Ionic club yesterday on the banks of the West river.

Members of the club left for the oyster roast at 8:45 o'clock from Fourteenth and B streets northwest. The transportation was in charge of H. A. Neff. Howard Rutan was in charge of the games and contests. Dr. E. B. Cook was head of the "glad hand" committee, which welcomed the guests. E. L. Corbin, president of the club, was in charge of things generally.

J. W. LEEDY, NAMED FOR CONGRESS, DIES

Eighth Virginia District G. O. P. Nominee Found Dead in Bed.

Manassas, Va., October 16.—John W. Leedy, nominated on the Republican ticket at the recent primaries for Congress from this the Eighth district, was found dead early today in bed at his home here. Heart disease is believed the cause of death.

He was one of the most widely known lumber and pulp men in the South and for years was an elder in the Brethren church. Born at Woodstock, Va., in 1854, he spent all of his life in this State, residing at various times here, at Woodstock, Fairfax and other places. He served as justice of the peace at Fairfax for some years and later was active in Republican politics.

W. Edgar Leedy, of Leedy, Inc., 1113 Connecticut avenue, Washington, D. C., and B. F. Leedy, a prominent farmer, living near Manassas, are surviving sons. His wife, Mrs. Diana Leedy, and daughter, Mrs. Mary Puckett, of Centerville, Va., also survive. The body will be taken to Mourertown for burial.

Divorced, He Faces Charge of Contempt

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va. Oct. 16.—In addition to entering a decree giving Mrs. Mary Virginia Wall a partial divorce from W. Taylor Wall, wealthy real estate owner, fruit grower and turfman, Judge Whiting, in corporation court, today issued a rule requiring the defendant to appear next Monday and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court in not complying with the terms of a decree entered November 17, 1924, concerning alimony which the court directed him to pay. The divorce was granted on grounds of desertion.

An infant son, William W. Wall, is awarded six months to the mother and an equal time to the father. The defendant is ordered to pay $75 per month alimony and counsel fees. Mrs. Wall was formerly Miss Mary V. Hawkins.

Dry Oasis Is Planned 60 Miles Off Coast

(By Associated Press.)

A prohibition oasis just off the southern coast of the United States is to be created with the sanction of prohibition officials.

It will consist of an island, known as the Grand Bahama, 60 miles off the Florida coast. British and American interests have obtained a lease for 150 years on the island from Great Britain.

Those interested in the grant have pledged themselves not to violate the laws of any country, and it is understood that under these conditions Assistant Secretary Andrews has given his unofficial approval.

No smuggling into the United States will be tolerated and as long as the residents stick to their pledges to "buy and keep" their stimulants on the island they have the unofficial promise of the American dry forces to let them alone.

SECOND SON OF KAISER SOON MAY BE DIVORCED

Wife, Princess Sophie, Said to Plan to Wed Officer of Potsdam Police.

BERLIN SOCIETY AGHAST

Potsdam, Germany, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Potsdam's aristocracy may experience a real sensation if Prince Eitel Friedrich, second son of the former kaiser, and his wife, Princess Sophie Charlotte, are divorced. A decree, if one is forthcoming, will probably be granted next month.

It is asserted on good authority that the princess, who is a daughter of the Grand Duke of Oldenburg, is planning to marry Herr Hedemann, a lieutenant in the Potsdam police force. Former court circles are aghast at this possibility, as Hedemann is of bourgeois and not noble birth. Before the war he belonged to the guard dragons. He is said to be considerably younger than the princess, who is 47.

That the princess should consider marrying so "far below her station" is the more surprising because it was supposed she would become the wife of Baron Udo von Plettenburg, a childhood friend, former adjutant to her father, and later a director of the North German Lloyd.

It is also persistently rumored that Eitel Friedrich will marry the Countess Mellin, belonging to the Baltic nobility, and now a resident of Potsdam.

A Potsdam dispatch, September 20, said Eitel Friedrich had been sued for divorce, on grounds of incompatability which, his wife alleged, had caused her "mental suffering." Eitel is 43. The couple married in Berlin, February 27, 1906. They have no children.

Hearing on Bus Fare Increase Tomorrow

Public hearing on the valuation and proposed bus fare increase of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. will be resumed before the public utilities commission tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the District building.

William McK. Attaches of the commission, who have checked over figures on valuation presented at that time, will submit reports.

Ship, Blown Ashore, Is Towed Into Port

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The Norwegian steamer Anderson, which was blown ashore on Watling island, San Salvador, in the tropical hurricane late last month, was towed into Hampton Roads today by the wrecking tug Warbler.

The vessel was so badly damaged she had to be towed all the way from the place of her mishap to Newport News, where she will be repaired. She was en route from Port Antonio to New York when she ran into the hurricane.

During their tour of inspection which covered the Wakefield, Fort Hunt and Fort Washington reservations, the commissioners received word that the Arlington county supervisors has passed resolutions inviting and requesting them to plan parks in that county and pledging cooperation. They also requested that in this planning work plans of the State Highways Commission should be taken into consideration and that the park and planning commission, the highway commission, and the supervisors should cooperate with the special commission appointed by Gov. Byrd. Following a thorough inspection of Forts Washington and Hunt, scheduled for sale as surplus army land, the commissioners announced their intention of doing all they can to save them for the parking plan. All were impressed with the character of the old earthworks.

Impressed at Wakefield.

Consideration of two plans for the development of Wakefield, site of the birthplace of George Washington, as a national shrine will be taken under consideration by the commissioners, who spent two hours on the scene. One of these calls for its formal treatment with a garden and park layout, and the other is one whereby the reservation will remain in its present state, the commissioners realizing the natural beauty of the surroundings.

Practically all were of the opinion that the present memorial monument near the site of the original dwelling should be moved to a more effective position on the reservation.

All were agreed also that the birthplace of the father of the country is deserving of special recognition. According to Maj. Gen. Egar Jadwin, chief of army engineers and chairman of the park planning commission, "there are many monuments to heroes throughout the country, but only one birthplace of the father of the country, and this must be recognized."

A plan is now under consideration to acquire the original 1,000 acres of Washington estate, it was announced. This includes the area from Pope creek to Bridges creek, Va. The Wakefield Memorial association has already obtained 70 acres, and there are 11 acres in the present reservation.

3 of Sultan's Widows Home; 4th Still in Exile

Constantinople, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Three widows of Sultan Mohammed VI have returned from exile to make their home in a small house of the old quarter overlooking the magnificent Yildiz palace, of which they were once the mistresses.

The fourth widow, daughter of a former palace gardener and said to be the youngest and prettiest of the group, did not accompany the others on their return, preferring to enjoy European freedom.

The widows fled from Turkey three years ago after the sultan's dethronement, but hardship and penury drove them to petition the new Turkish government for permission to return, which was recently granted.

PLOT TO WRECK TRAIN OF ALFONSO LAID TO 5

Armed Men Are Arrested on Right of Way in Spain; Deny Charge.

DICTATOR ALSO ABOARD

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Barcelona, Oct. 16.—Five reds of Barcelona tonight were charged with plotting against the lives of King Alfonso and Dictator Primo de Rivera, who, with a brave show of solidarity, have brought the seat of the Spanish government here, where the old coals of Catalan nationalism and syndicalism still are alight.

As a result of the efforts of hundreds of secret service agents sent from Madrid by Martinez Anido, General De Rivera's iron-handed minister of the interior, together with thousands of troops and civil guards to make the biggest city in Spain safe for rulers, the syndicalist suspects were rounded up on the railroad right-of-way half an hour before the train bearing the king and queen and Infantas Cristina and Beatrice, as well as General De Rivera was due to pass. They were armed to the teeth and were accused of intent to wreck the train.

The disbanded artillerymen had their innings this morning when the king and the director arrived. Forbidden to wear their uniforms, 100 well-known officers of the defunct Barcelona garrison, gathered near the station. When King Alfonso appeared, they suddenly snapped into military formation and cheered the astonished monarch. But when Gen. De Rivera's bulk hove into view, they let out howls of derision and scorn.

RED CROSS AIDED 90 DISASTERS OF YEAR

62 of Them Were in America, the Annual Report of Society Shows.

In the fiscal year ended June 30, the American Red Cross served 90 disasters, 62 of which were in the United States, according to the annual report of the organization made public yesterday.

There was no outstanding disaster in the fiscal year, the report says. The New Jersey munitions blast, the Louisiana hurricane and the Florida hurricane all occurred in the current fiscal year.

Expenditures for relief work totaled $2,962,159.79. In the last two fiscal years the organization spent $3,297,537.67.

SECOND LOVE

by MALCOLM DUART

COPYRIGHT 1926 BY EUGENE MACLEAN

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

John Parrish, poor young husband, has been on strained terms with his rich young wife, Audrey, because of her frequent mention of his dependence upon her. When she recalls to him that she bought clothes for him and even his tie pin, he throws away the valuable emerald pin.

They have taken into their household Marcie Allen, beautiful girl of advanced ideas, who has been ordered out of her home because of her free views on what women should be allowed to do. She has kissed Parrish, but he has not told his wife. Audrey tells Marcie that John has thrown the emerald among the bushes. As the last chapter closes, Marcie is searching, alone, for the pin.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

MARCIE breakfasted alone, and early, the following morning.

When Audrey came down stairs at half past 8, she found a note on the breakfast table.

"Audrey, dear," it read. "If you lose your cook, it's my fault. I made her give me my eggs and bacon at a quarter to 8. Got to be at that store at half past, ready to smear beauty cream on my lovely cheeks. See you through the show window. "MARCIE."

"Isn't she the limit?" she asked.

He read the hastily scrawled lines with serious attention.

"I didn't think she'd go," he said, handing back the letter. "Was she serious about forcing her father to give back her allowance, that way?"

"Probably," said Audrey. "He's sure to hear about it—everybody knows Marcie. And when he sees her, sitting in a dressing gown in a store window, he'll do anything to stop it. Don't you think so?"

"Don't know," said Parrish. He sat down, and scooped a spoonful of grapefruit.

It was a little after 9 o'clock when he drew up his little motor car in front of the store where Marcie was appearing. A crowd was standing before the show window. He alighted, methodically locked his car, and pushed his way through the spectators.

Inside the window was a dressing table, gorgeous in gilt and enamel. Before it sat Marcie, in a pink slip, her arms and shoulders bare, her neat legs thrust out before her, with the knees showing, her face puckered as she leaned forward and looked into the mirror. She was applying rouge to her lips from a slender gold stick.

Parrish stared. Marcie's cheeks, usually glowing with rosy health, were of a striking orange hue. Her delicate eyebrows were extended far out upon her temples. Her lips, as she turned toward the crowd, instead of their customary cherry fullness, showed an exaggerated scarlet bow.

Her eyes caught Parrish's, and she smiled. The crowd turned toward him, and he backed away. Marcie waved. Hastily, Parrish retreated to his car, and cranking it, hurried off. As he cast a glance toward the window, Marcie was laughing, and she waved to him once more.

It was not until the end of the day that he saw her again. He was sitting on the front porch, at home, surveying the front lawn and the movement of passing motor cars, when her figure appeared outside the gate.

"Cheerio," she called to him, as she entered.

Her face was clear of rouge and eyebrow pencil and lipstick, and his face lighted with relief.

"You look better the way you are," he told her, as she reached the steps.

"I saw you, looking at the naughty lady in her underclothes," she said, gayly. "Aren't you ashamed?"

Parrish's face reddened. "I was worried about you," he said.

She tapped him on the lips with her finger. "Shush!" she reproved. "That wasn't why you came. You wanted to know whether I wore pink ones, or yellow ones."

She passed into the house, giving him a pat on the cheek as she went by.

Parrish turned and looked after her, and then relapsed into thought. He was sitting, his elbow on the arm of the chair, his finger to his cheek, when Audrey came out. She sat down beside him.

"That child has ordered six pairs of shoes, a dozen sets of pretties to wear under her clothes, and two dozen pairs of stockings," she announced.

"How in the name of Caesar will she pay for them?" he asked. "She only has about $1,200. How much did that stuff cost her?"

"About $250," Audrey said. "And she's talking about some new dresses."

The conversation was cut short by the appearance of Marcie. She was in evening dress again, charmingly demure and quiet.

"The world is hard to us poor working women," she sighed.

She adjusted the short skirt of her dress. "Papa came and saw me today."

"Did he give back your allowance?" Parrish asked.

"He did—not." She laughed. "He came into the store, though, and talked to me."

She lifted her foot and inspected its little silvered slipper. "He told me that I could go and be a bathing girl, for all he cared. He said he was on to me." She laughed, and stretched her arms. "Do you know what I'm going to do?"

Parrish and Audrey shook their heads.

"I'm going to have some fun out of this," Marcie resumed. "You know, every time I put any of that goo on my face, I have to set out a card, telling what it is—'Madam de Punk's Cleansing Lotion;' 'Double-strength Circassian Desert Blush'—that sort of thing."

She waved her hands, gleefully. "So I'll get up some cards of my own to show to the crowd tomorrow," she said. "One of 'em'll read: 'This stuff is the bunk.' I'll have another that says: 'Use this and weep.' Won't that be gorgeous? I'll think of a lot of 'em before I go to bed."

"But," said Parrish, "if you do that you'll be discharged."

He was evidently concerned. Marcie, however, kicked out her foot as if expelling the whole world of care, and cried:

"You bet I'll be discharged! But I was going to quit, anyway, when I found out daddy wouldn't come through. Isn't he mean?"

Audrey put her hand on the other girl's arm. "But if you're going to leave, why did you buy all those clothes? You won't have any money left, if you keep on that way."

Marcie refused to be perturbed. "My face is my fortune," she intoned. "My face—my face—my fortune is my face!" Her voice dropped from its sing-song chant. "And the rest of me, of course."

She was chattering about possible careers, as they went in to dinner.

"I might be a suffrage lecturer," she said, "or give talks on the care of babies—I was a baby once, and I ought to know. Or else I might go out and be a gold-digger. Do you think I could dig gold out of tired business men?" she appealed to Parrish.

"I know some gold-diggers. They were friends of my daddy's," Audrey said, with amusement.

"Nona was a gold-digger once," Audrey said. "She told me so herself. And sometimes she didn't eat—didn't have any money."

"I wouldn't be that kind," said Marcie. "I'd buy diamonds, and pawn 'em."

"If you got the diamonds," Audrey added. "My daddy says that the old fellows who go out with gold-diggers are smarter than the girls are, usually — they'll buy a dinner, and buy wine, and dance all evening, but they're cautious with their cash."

"Maybe I'd better not go out with the smart old ones, then," she said. "I'll take the nice dumb young ones."

"Nona says the young ones never have any money," Audrey informed her. "And when they do have any, they spend it on themselves. She says young men are selfish."

Marcie sighed. "Then I'll have to go out and be reformer, and take up collections for the cause. What had I better reform?"

"You might reform young ladies named Marcie," Audrey suggested. "Why don't you go and make peace with your father?"

"I can't," Marcie confessed. "I've tried to be good, lots of times. But I just fill up with the Old Nick every time, and pull something that makes him simply furious. The last time I tried it, I was just as good as gold, until I found a lot of dandy wine he had bought, for a Good Government club he belongs to. He was going to give them a dinner, and I took all the sherry and gave a party. We nearly took off the roof." She smiled reminiscently. "Gosh; it was some party."

She turned to her meal, and ate with gusto. The talk drifted to the weather, and to a new motor that Audrey had ordered, and to the dresses that Marcie proposed to buy.

When dinner was over, Audrey went to give instructions for the next day's marketing, and Marcie and Parrish strolled out to the stone bench on the lawn.

"Why didn't you tell Audrey kissed you?" she asked.

"I just—well, I decided not to," he said.

"Did you like it?" Her eyes were simple and childlike as she gazed upward at him.

He moved away from her a trifle. "Better not do it again," he advised, slowly.

"You liked it!" she concluded. "And, John—Audrey said I could call you 'John.'"

She edged near him again.

"You know your emerald pin?"

He showed surprise, as he nodded.

"You didn't go and look for it, did you?" He shook his head. She went on: "I looked for it, and found it."

He waited for her to continue.

"I found it, and I took it down town with me today, and sold it," she said, laying her hands on his.

TRAVELERS SOCIETY HELPS AGED WOMEN BACK TO RIGHT PATH

Organization Seeking Funds for Budget, Shows Typical Day's Work.

UNION STATION BRANCH HAS VARIETY OF TASKS

Approximately 50 Persons Are Aided Every 24 Hours by Group.

The Travelers Aid Society of Washington, which is asking residents to subscribe $15,500 for its 1927 budget, has prepared a record of a typical day at its booth in Union station.

An aged woman is found wandering about the station by one of the society's workers and is taken to the booth. She is very feeble and, from her appearance, very worried. The worker humors her and finally obtains her story. She has run away from home after stealing $150 and now regrets her act. The society's worker convinces her it is best to go back home and then places her on a train that will take her there. What might have happened to her if she had not gone back can be conjectured.

In the course of the day half a dozen lost or runaway boys come to the booth or are brought to it. Their parents are communicated with and arrangements made to send them home.

Boy to Grandmother.

One 13-year-old boy, evidently of the unmanageable type, refuses to go home to his mother in Florida. He says he doesn't like his mother. The society learns that he is fond of his grandmother, and it arranges to send him to her.

Altogether 50 persons are aided in the day. They include, besides the types mentioned, mentally defective war veterans, travelers who have lost their money or their baggage, travelers unable to speak English, and persons who are in various kinds of trouble.

Grace Dodge, for whom a hotel here is named, was responsible for bringing about a consolidation of the various organizations that now constitute the society. The society lends a helping hand to about 150,000 persons a year in various parts of the country. It also carries on an international service.

Not long ago a representative of the society met a young Czech "picture bride" at Ellis island. She was en route to Lone Mountain, Mont., to marry a man she never had seen. The society investigated and found the man had a wife and three children.

SISTER MARY AGATHA DIES IN GEORGETOWN

Sister Mary Agatha Scott, 85 years old, of the Georgetown Visitation convent, died yesterday morning in the convent, from infirmities of age. She was a nun 66 years, having taken the vow in 1860 in the Baltimore Visitation convent, where she remained until 1904, when she came to the Georgetown convent.

For many years Sister Scott was in charge of the Baltimore convent and academy. While there she met most of the bishops of the country and was an intimate friend of Cardinal Gibbons. Sister Mary Agatha, during her long career, translated many religious works from French and German into English. Sister Mary Agatha retired from active teaching a few years ago when her health began to fail.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Anna McElroy of Sheepshead Bay, Long Island, N. Y., and a niece, Mrs. Frances Colittis, of the same address.

Funeral services will be held at 8 a. m. tomorrow in the Georgetown Visitation convent. Burial will be in the convent cemetery.

MRS. J. B. CARTER DIES.

Funeral Services Will Be Held Today in Culpeper, Va.

Mrs. James B. Carter, 84 years old, of Culpeper, Va., and Washington, died in Culpeper Friday night. She was a native of Culpeper, where the family for generations has been prominently identified with the political and social activities of the community. Mr. Carter died about six years ago.

She is survived by a son, J. Barrett Carter, attorney of this city; three daughters, Mrs. C. P. Gibson and Mrs. J. F. Boles, of this city, and Mrs. A. H. Spilman, of Culpeper, and a sister, Mrs. George Apperson, of Rosslyn, Va. Funeral services will be held this afternoon in the Baptist church, Culpeper. Interment will be at the Fair View cemetery.

St. Francis Order Meets Today.

The Third Order of St. Francis will hold its monthly meeting in the Franciscan monastery at 3:30 o'clock today. Several candidates will be received into the order and others will make the profession of the rule. The services will take place in the monastery church and not in the chapel, as heretofore.

CAROL WILL REGAIN RIGHTS AS PRINCE; PARLEY ARRANGED

Bratiano Going to Paris to "Fix Up Situation" Caused by Renunciation.

MME. LUPESCU AFFAIR NOT TO BE BROKEN UP

Paris, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Prince Carol, of Roumania, who soon may find himself once more the heir apparent to the throne of his father, today celebrated his thirty-third birthday at his temporary home in Neuilly.

The anniversary, which was observed quietly, was cheered by the receipt of telegrams from his family in Bucharest, many sympathizers among the younger political element in Roumania but above all by a wireless message from his mother, Queen Marie, who is now voyaging to the United States aboard the steamship Leviathan.

"Carol is playing a watchful waiting game," say those Roumanians in Paris who are cognizant of his plans regarding his possible restitution as Crown Prince and a member of the regency. Beyond a visit yesterday at the automobile show in the company of Mme. Lupescu, the errant young prince has made no public appearance since his dramatic farewell to his mother early this week when she departed for the United States.

Living Together Quietly.

Carol and Mme. Lupescu have been living in the quiet suburb Neuilly in an unostentatious villa. Occasionally they go out driving but the days of his open flaunting of their mutual attachment in the dancing resorts of Montmartre and the Champs Elysee are over at least for the time being.

News that former Premier Bratiano is coming to Paris to fix up the situation and to restore Carol to his rights as crown prince seems to have brought Queen Marie's eldest son to a realization that too flagrant indiscretions right now might be hazardous.

The prince, it is understood, has been given the hint that his relations with Mme. Lupescu may be continued and even winked at if conducted in a discreet manner. The main thing that the Roumanian government wants to know is what line of politics he intends to adopt once he has been proclaimed again a member of the royal family and in line for succession to the throne. What his answer will be on this matter is something that Carol is keeping secret until former Premier Bratiano visits him.

Much Comment in Press.

Roumanian newspapers are paying considerable attention to the possibility that Prince Carol may again resume his rights as crown prince despite his most recent escapade with Mme. Lupescu. A large section of the press expects that this will occur shortly after parliament reconvenes on November 14. To a great extent Carol's reconciliation with his mother in Paris is responsible for the belief that he will shortly be restored to favor.

The newspaper Adeverul says that former Premier Bratiano is going to Paris to see Carol "in the role of peacemaker." The new national taranist party, which strongly favors Carol, is increasing in power and it is declared that Premier Averescu is now alarmed by the possibility of the overthrow of his cabinet.

the itinerary and plans which have been made for her remains to be determined. There is no doubt but that she "rates" with the queen.

Charge Protested Trip.

Mr. Djuvara is understood to have joined those of the Roumanian government who did not want her majesty to make the trip. Those of this thought believed that some of her majesty's democracies lessened the dignity of the throne. They have frowned, in fact, grimaced on her majesty's indorsements of this and that cold cream, notwithstanding that New York society seems to have gone in for it, of her writing for magazines and the like.

When her majesty determined, however, that she was going to make the trip, objections to the contrary, Mr. Djuvara and his advisers made definite plans for her. It was his desire that she be thrown almost exclusively with the nation's big business and industrial men.

When the movie magnates and other American go-getters came running forward with screen offers and other proposals, the attache was shocked beyond expression, and made haste to beseech her majesty that whatever she did, please give a royal shrug to these proposals. The attache, a personable, gracious man, has been in the diplomatic service all of his life, and royal traditions are deeply rooted within him.

Invitations Pour In.

In the last several weeks he has been besieged by American society folk, vieing with one another to be able to entertain the queen. He has a stack of letters from cranks, containing offers of marriage to Princess Ileana.

Americans, who in one way or another met the queen in Europe, have sent her cablegrams, welcoming her to this country, and inviting her to an entertainment planned by them. And her majesty has graciously responded in appreciative vein and extending her love to the American people. Whereupon the recipient of this reply would try to override Mr. Djuvara and take the whole tour in hand.

Despite reports, Mr. Djuvara has not received any rebuff from her majesty over the Mme. Fuller incident, but there is little doubt that there is to be a struggle between him and the dancer as to who will take her majesty in charge.

In the meantime, local society realizes that Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has stolen a march, for she is not only returning on the same steamer as the queen but is frequently dining with her.

Prominent persons on the sidelines who have no axes to grind and who know Marie and Roumania, predict that she is quite likely to do what she wants when she gets here, and will have "sold" herself and country to America when she returns.

QUEEN GREETS CAPITAL BOY SCOUTS

The autographed photograph of Queen Marie, of Roumania, and her Boy Scout son, which Her Majesty sent to Troop 70, Boy Scouts of America, of Washington, after they had sent an American flag to the Roumanian scouts. The inscription reads: "Through me all the Boy Scouts of Roumania, to which my son also belongs, they send a warm greeting to the Boy Scouts of America—Marie, Queen of Roumania."

Marie Will Arrange Trip To Suit Her Own Wishes

Roumania's "Strong Woman" Not Worried by Reported Changes in Itineary; Enjoys Voyage on Leviathan; Princess and Princes Play Deck Tennis.

S. S. Leviathan, Oct. 16. (By the Associated Press.)—Queen Marie of Roumania is not perturbed in the least by the various reports over arrangements for her tour and reported changes in her itinerary made by various unofficial persons who are supposed to be directing the queen's movements. Indications are that Roumania's "strong woman" will do exactly what she desires after landing in New York.

The belief is held by those close to the queen that every one who is thrown into contact with her will fall in line with her plans gladly under the charm of her beauty and personality.

The queen passed much of her time today sitting in the sun on the promenade deck, serenely crocheting a cap to hold her shingled hair in place. She lunched in the public dining room, Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt being at Capt. Hartley's table with the royal party.

At six o'clock in the evening there was a private concert in the Winter Garden, at which Pavil Ludikar, Czech barytone of the Metropolitan opera, sang, the newspaper correspondents being the queen's guests.

Marie expressed regret that the Leviathan's voyage was drawing to a close, as she said she had enjoyed every minute of it and would like to return on the ship, were the Leviathan sailing about December 20, which is the probable date of Marie's departure from New York.

Princess Ileana and Prince Nicholas had a busy day playing deck tennis with Prince Hohenlohe and other members of the party and chatting with newly-made friends among the passengers. They are indefatigable walkers, making 4 or 5 miles daily.

Although suffering from a slight cold for the last two days Queen Marie felt good enough this morning to take another dip in the Leviathan's pool after having a cup of tea. Marie and Princess Ileana, remained in the water about ten minutes and and emerged much refreshed.

The Roumanian sovereign and her suite are much concerned over the clashes about contracts for her literary output in America, under conditions which are variously interpreted.

Mme. Lahovary, one of the queen's ladies-in-waiting, characterized as "absurd" reports published in the United States that the queen would not go farther west than Billings, Mont. Marie is making the trip especially to dedicate the Roumanian room of the Museum at Maryhill, Wash., Mme. Lahovary said, and has no thought of cancelling her visit to California.

With regard to the hotel arrangements in New York, Mme. Lahovary said the queen would go to the Ambassador upon her return from Baltimore, and might go to the Plaza on returning from the Pacific coast.

CAPT. DIMANCESCO MADE BOYS' COMMITTEEMAN

Is Presented With American Flag; Founder of Organization in Own Country.

In the throng which is sure to crane its respective necks to get a glimpse of Marie, Queen of Roumania, when she arrives here tomorrow, there will be several American boys who feel that she is their personal queen. The boys are members of Troop 70, Boy Scouts of America, and their attachment to the Queen of Roumania is made real to them by the possession of an autographed photograph.

The incidents leading to the possession of their token began several years ago when Capt. Dimitri D. Dimancesco, a Roumanian world war hero and founder of the Roumanian Boy Scout organization, was sent to this country as an attache of the Roumanian legation. The captain immediately became interested in Boy Scout activities and finally became associated with Troop 70, a group of boys of the Fourth Presbyterian church. He was appointed a troop committeeman.

In appreciation of his interest, Troop 70 arranged a special meeting to which Capt. Dimancesco was invited, but was not told of the program. When the meeting had been called to order and the troop was standing at attention with their American and troop flags, a scout entered the room bearing the Roumanian flag, and, escorted by two color guards, took his place beside the other color bearers. Then the troop saluted the three flags. Thereafter, in honor of the Roumanian Boy Scouts, Troop 70 saluted the Roumanian flag at their opening and closing ceremonies in addition to the American flag.

Then came a day when Capt. Dimancesco was called back to his own country. Troop 70 staged a farewell hike and presented the young Roumanian with a silk American flag for his Roumanian Scout troop.

After arriving in Roumania Capt. Dimancesco decided it would be selfish to limit the gift of the American Scouts to one Roumanian troop and presented it to the crown prince, official head of the Roumanian Scouts.

Queen Marie had a photograph made of herself and her son, a member of the Roumanian Scouts, and after autographing it with a message to the American Boy Scouts, sent it to the Roumanian embassy in Washington with instructions that it be officially presented to the troop by the Roumanian Minister.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—New Yorkers may look at a queen but it will take a deal of preparation.

A thick red carpet on the steps of the city hall, a throne chair on a dais in the Aldermanic chamber, the Roumanian flag surrounded by masses of American flags, gold chairs, gilt posts and green ropes—all this is in readiness for the official welcome which Mayor Walker will extend to Queen Marie off Roumania, Monday.

Silk hats, frock coats, striped trousers, gray cravats, black shoes, spats to match the cravats and dark lacquered canes—all these are in readiness for the members of the mayor's committee on welcoming the distinguished visitors.

The set speech of presentation is in readiness too, for Grover Whalen head of the committee, when he presents the queen to the mayor; and the mayor's reply—"Your majesty, I have the honor," or whatever it is that mayors say on such occasions—is also ready.

And at the Ambassador hotel there will be grouse, river trout, endive, griddle cakes, beluga caviar, fruit ices and other delicacies suitable for a queen.

And later, when the queen is ready to leave the city, there is a private train waiting for her, with drawing room, sleeper, dining car, parlor car and baggage car.

The United States Lines received a wireless today from Capt. Herbert Hartley, of the Leviathan, which is bringing the queen to this country, saying that the queen desires to return to Europe aboard that ship about Christmas. Arrangements will be made by the Roumanian government at Washington, he said.

The New York World today says: "Advices received from the Olympic, which sailed 24 hours after the departure of Queen Marie and her entourage aboard the Leviathan, stated that more than 150 'democratic' Americans had change sailings from the Olympic to share the passage with royalty. The dispatch, sent by a well-known publicist, concluded: 'What price snobbery?'"

Queen's Trip Is Exploited Commercially, Writer Says

Toronto, Oct. 16 (Canadian Press).—The Toronto Globe has received a dispatch from its correspondent traveling with Queen Marie on the S. S. Leviathan, in which he says that the trip is being commercially exploited and that this became known when "the queen's business manager, Mme. Simone Lahovary, admitted to American press representatives aboard the Leviathan that they might be allowed to see Marie today (Friday), but could not be permitted to print interviews because the queen is under contract to do all her talking for money."

The Globe correspondent says in his dispatch that the agent for the syndicate holding Queen Marie's contract is aboard the Leviathan and that the agent after consultation with the queen's suite "flatly forbade" publication of the interviews "under threat of cancelling the agreement."

The dispatch also states that it is further asserted that agreements provide for advertising concessions "so that everything the queen uses while in the United States will be a source of added gain on the score of publicity value of Marie's name."

RED CROSS ADDING CHAPTERS FOR AID IN DISASTER RELIEF

Organization Fast Becoming More Capable of Grappling With Tragedies.

SPEEDY AND ACCURATE AS AREAS ARE STRUCK

Communities and Nation Are Looking More to Agency for Help, Report Says.

(By the Associated Press.)

A great national phalanx of preparedness has been set up by the American Red Cross to grapple with relief work such as that recently necessitated by the southern Florida hurricane.

Thus the organization, in its annual report, describes the numerous Red Cross chapters that have grown up over the country. The report, made public today and covering the fiscal year ended last June 30, added:

"Red Cross chapters generally have been increasingly vigorous in perfecting strong, alert disaster relief committees, and consequently a large portion of the United States is covered with this disaster preparedness plan. With unfailing accuracy and speed these chapter committees have moved into action when disaster has struck their communities. Chapters are studying their local disaster hazards more carefully."

During the fiscal year, the Red Cross participated in 90 disasters, including 62 within the United States. The year was the first since the world war that the organization was not called on to serve in some great disaster, the New Jersey munitions explosion, the Louisiana hurricane and the Florida storm all having occurred since June 30.

For disaster relief in the United States the organization spent $3,871,827 duing the year, $229,000 of which was furnished by Red Cross chapters. A total of $53,075 was expended for foreign disaster work.

For operations in connection with the mid-West tornado, which killed 800 and left approximately 30,000 homeless, the report listed $2,962,159, as expenditures during the fiscal year, which brought the total spent in this disaster to $3,297,537.

Declaring that the community, as well as State and national authorities, are looking more and more to the Red Cross as the "disaster agency best equipped by organization and experience to handle their relief and rehabilitation problems," the report outlined preparedness plans carried out during the period covered and called attention to the forthcoming tenth annual roll call for Red Cross membership in November as an opportunity to help the organization advance in efficiency.

BAPTISTS WILL HOLD ANNUAL CONVOCATION

Session Is to Be in Salem Church; Theological School Is Organized.

The general Baptist convention of the District of Columbia and vicinity will meet in annual session tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the Salem Baptist church, N street between Ninth and Tenth streets northwest, and continue throughout the week. Participating will be Sunday school organizations, the Baptist Young People's unions and ladies' auxiliaries. The Rev. W. H. Jernagin will preside.

Report on the first week's operation of the newly organized Washington Baptist college has been drawn up by the Rev. J. L. S. Holloman, president. The institution has matriculated twenty in the theological department, principally pastors of city churches. The aim is to train the colored Baptist ministry for greater denominational effectiveness. Headquarters of the college are at the Second Baptist church, Third and H streets northwest.

On the faculty, besides Dr. Holloman, professor of practical ethics and Bible history, are the Rev. J. Harvey Randolph, Biblical interpretation and theology; the Rev. W. A. Taylor, homilectics and elocution; the Rev. W. L. Washington, English; the Rev. James W. Pace, psychology and religious education. Special lecturers include the Rev. J. Milton Waldron and the Rev. Walter H. Brooks.

Traction Line Plans Car-Stop Platforms

The Capital Traction Co., yesterday proposed addition of two car stop loading platforms in Pennsylvania avenue between Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets northwest. Permission of the public utilities commission for their installation was requested.

One would be placed in front of the District building, for use of those boarding eastbound cars at Fourteenth street, who do not want to cross the latter thoroughfare to the platform now at the near side, its intersection with Pennsylvania avenue. The other would be near the Hotel Washington.

Dougherty Asks Civic Bodies to Aid Cleanup

Commissioner Proctor L. Dougherty yesterday widened his appeal for cooperation in keeping papers and other trash off the streets, by including the civic organizations. He wrote each a letter similar to the one he sent Friday to the superintendent of schools, appealing for wide public use of trash boxes.

VISITOR IN CAPITAL FIRST WOMAN GIVEN HONORS BY PERSIA

IS LEADER IN COUNTRY FOR FEMININE RIGHTS

Not many years ago a Persian woman of noble birth defied the conservatism of her land, and shattered an ancient Mohammedan tradition, when unveiled she strolled the streets of Persia. A few years later the same woman occupied the first official position ever held by a woman in all of Persia's thousands of years history.

This woman was Mme. Zorah Khanoum Heidary, now in this country as a special envoy from her government to the Sesquicentennial exposition, and in Washington this week as the guest of Miss Agnes Winn, assistant secretary of the National Education association. The two met this summer on an ocean liner, while en route to this country.

Wednesday, Mme. Heidary will speak at a luncheon of the Zonta club, and next Sunday she will be entertained at a tea given by the Women's City club. Other functions are planned in her honor.

To Study Education.

While in this country she will study the opportunities offered American women in education, and economic and social freedom. She is interested particularly in the privileges and responsibilities of women in America. At the Sesquicentennial exposition she is exhibiting in the Persian building examples of women's work in Persia.

Mme. Heidary is of pure Persian stock and was reared in the seclusion and the conservatism of Mohammedan tradition. She married young and left her native Persia to dwell in Tiflis, the capital of what is now the Georgian Republic, but then a part of the Russian empire. Her husband was a Russian deputy, of wealth and position. After some years they moved to Moscow.

Couple Imprisoned.

Then came the Russian revolution. After the Bolshevists had overturned the Kerensky regime, the couple were imprisoned, their possession confiscated, and the husband later sent into exile. Influential friends persuaded Bolshevist authorities to make Persia Mme. Heidary's place of exile.

Her parents dead, she made her home with an uncle on her return to Teheran, the capital of Persia. She could not resign herself, however, to the isolated life and ancient customs of the Persian woman, after her contact with European and cosmopolitan society. Her persistence in fighting for equal opportunities for Persian women won recognition in the end, and she was appointed to the department of public works of Persia.

When Mme. Heidary came to America, she came under authority of the first passport ever issued to a Persian woman under her own name, to journey unaccompanied.

Trinity to Observe . . . 75th Year Today

The 75th anniversary of Trinity Lutheran church will be observed with appropriate services at the church edifice, 505 Fourth street northwest, today.

At 10:30 a. m. the Rev. Arthur Brunn will preach, and at 7:30 p. m. the Rev. William Kopcatn. Miss Helen Newmeyer will sing and selections will be played by Mrs. Henry Schneider, violinist. Richard Masters is organist of the church. The church was established in 1851 and was officially dedicated in November, 1857.

Damages Asked After Crash.

Samuel Silver, 1024 First street southeast, was sued yesterday in circuit court for $10,800 damages by R. P. Fones, 1405 Four-and-a-Half street southwest, for alleged personal injuries and damage to his automobile. Through Attorney Charles C. Collins, Fones says his machine was collided with on M street southwest, on October 1 by the defendant's machine.

MOVIE TONIGHT DEPICTS HISTORY OF JEWISH RACE

Spectacle, "The Wandering Jew," to Be Given Under Y. M. H. A. Auspices.

LAST SHOWING TUESDAY

"The Wandering Jew," a moving picture spectacle depicting the history of the Jewish race, will be presented tonight, tomorrow and Tuesday in the auditorium of the Jewish Community center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, under the auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew association.

Two performances will be given tonight, one at 7 and the other at 9 o'clock. Tomorrow and Tuesday just one performance at 8:30 p. m. will be presented.

Rudolph and Joseph Schildkraut, two of the foremost Jewish actors, play the leading roles. Many other well-known Jewish actors are in their support. Jewish movies have proved so successful and instructive in this city that David Weiner, president of the Middle Atlantic States Federation of the Young Men's Hebrew Associations, is attempting to broaden the local plans so as to include the entire federation district.

"The Wandering Jew" is based on the life and inspiration of Dr. Theodore Herzl, the founder of modern Zionism.

An interesting feature of the picture is the excellent interpretation given by Joseph Schildkraut. The photoplay also shows Jerusalem reconstructed according to the unfinished plans of Dr. Herzl.

Zionist organizations in Washington have indorsed the picture. They declare it is the most successful attempt at Jewish pictures yet recorded. Edward Rosenblum, president of the Young Men's Hebrew association, has invited all inmates of the Hebrew Home for the Aged to view the picture at its first presentation.

Catholic Charities To Elect Officers

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Catholic Charities of Washington will be held tomorrow night in the City club. Charles W. Darr, chairman of the annual appeal, and Michael Heister, chairman of the annual dinner, will address the meeting.

Arthur J. May will preside. Other members of the board are Henry J. Auth, Dr. H. J. Crosson, Mr. Darr, Mr. Heister, David J. Dunnigan, James H. Johnston, jr., J. Leo Kolb, C. P. L. Moran, Rev. A. J. Olds, John H. Pellen, Allen Pope, B. F. Saul, Hugh Reilly, M. D. Schaefer, Joseph D. Sullivan, John Walsh, Raphael Semmes, Raymond J. Wise, Adam A. Weschler and Frank R. Weller.

U. S. Cow Has High Production Record

Sophie's Ivina, a cow owned by the bureau of dairying, Department of Agriculture, recently made the high production of 798.70 pounds of butterfat and 15,572 pounds of milk during a 365-day official production test.

During some months the cow yielded as high as 91.92 pounds of butterfat, and for four months her yield exceeded 70 pounds of fat per month. At the age of 2 years she produced 611.34 pounds of fat and 11,623 pounds of milk during a year.

SARGENT'S PAROLE ATTITUDE IS UPHELD

Wins Point in Circuit Court; Case Now Up to Appeals Tribunal.

The legal right of John G. Sargent, Attorney General, to refuse to abide by the recommendations of the Federal parole board, was upheld yesterday by Chief Justice McCoy in circuit court. The case now will go to the Court of Appeals.

This right was questioned in a mandamus case by Benjamin H. Covell, a prisoner in the Leavenworth penitentiary. The parole board recommended that Covell be released on parole, but Mr. Sargent declined to order his release.

Peyton Gordon, district attorney, and his assistants, Leo Rover and Neil Burkinshaw, counsel for Mr. Sargent, contended that the Attorney General was vested by law with discretionary power in such cases and that such discretion could not be questioned or reviewed by the courts. The contention was sustained. Emerson & Stohlman, counsel for Covell, noted an appeal from the order of the court refusing a writ of mandamus.

HOPE FOR CONGRESS TO CHANGE RULING ON PARK RULE HELD

REQUEST TO BE MADE TO BUREAU OF BUDGET

Hope that Congress will change its ruling applyng to limitation of condemnation of land for park purposes to prices not in excess of 25 per cent of appraised valuation is now held by officials of the National Capital park and planning commission.

Parking of the Fort Slocum, Fort Stevens and the Piney Branch area west of Sixteenth street, historic and beautiful tracts, is delayed pending the favorable attitude of Congress to a change of the foregoing arrangement.

Carrying out of a park program, with special regard to obtaining new tracts, is meeting with delay because of the action of Congress in forbidding buying of new lands at price in excess of 25 per cent over assessed value as shown by District records.

A request will be made to the bureau of the budget to have the order changed by insertions of a provision in the next appropriation estimates to Congress for its repeal. In the meantime the park and planning commission is facing a barricade in arranging its park extension work at the present time.

One item of the delayed extension is procurement of the site of Fort Slocum, one of Washington's defenses during the civil war, and now a beautiful forest grove. It is planned as a station of the contemplated Fort drive around the city, and is located west of Blair road near Rittenhouse street.

Prompt Action Needed.

Dwelling house construction is encroaching on its old earthworks and if they are to be saved prompt action is necessary. The property is about eight acres in area and the price now asked for it is in excess of the amount which the park and planning commission is allowed to pay by direct purchase.

Should condemnation proceedings bring it down to within 25 per cent of the appraised value, which is doubtful, it could be obtained, but if the latter procedure failed to do this, it could not be acquired, for Comptroller General McCarl held recently that the 25 per cent limitation applied equally to condemnation price and direct purchase.

When negotiations for the purchase of this property were opened it was discovered the owners had paid in excess of its value and were merely asking a reasonable increase on their investment, but the price is far in excess of original value.

It is believed a condemnation jury may bring the price of the cost of the addition to the tract of Fort Stevens, where President Lincoln was under fire during the Confederate attack on the Capital, and that of the Piney Branch land west of Sixteenth street, to within the 25 per cent provision, but owing to the increase in the cost of the Fort Slocum area this is regarded as impossible with reference to the last named territory.

The park and planning commission was authorized $600,000 for its land purchase work this year, and but $150,000 of this has been excepted from the 25 per cent limitation. Unless the restriction is raised the greater part of the remaining $450,000 will revert to the Treasury.

Work Would Be Over.

If Congress rules adversely, however, the work of the park and planning commission, as the official land-buying organization for the Federal government here, is over. It would become merely an advisory body regarding future government planning in the District.

The action of Congress is said to have followed belief that the government was paying too much for land here, when its attention was called to the fact that certain lands were bought at too great a price, and Mr. McCarl held that elimination of the 25 per cent limitation in condemnation proceedings would be contrary to the spirit of congressional direction in the matter.

Before the park planning commission was made the land-buying agency for District parking, Congress failed to act on proposed purchases, and many parking projects were lost. Under this system part of Klingle valley was lost for parking. Most of the Piney Branch territory is now unfit for parking, and the Patterson tract remains unused.

The attitude of Congress seems singular as the commission is made up of government officials, including chairmen of the Senate and House committees on District affairs, who investigate every project closely and are ever alert to see that Congress is not charged excessive price for Federal park land in the District or adjoining it.

Congress undoubtedly will be given the opportunity soon or either retaining the limtiation clause and hampering, or probably abolishing, the immediate park program, or removing it and permitting furtherance of beautification of the National Capital.

TWICE-A-DAY

To Clear Clouded Teeth and Firm the Gums, Dentists Advise this—Before Breakfast, Before Bed; Every Day

RUN your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film—a viscous, slippery coating which ordinary brushing fails to remove successfully.

Film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. That is why, according to leading dental opinion, teeth look dingy and "off color."

Film clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It invites and breeds the germs of decay. And that is why it is judged so grave a danger to the teeth by authorities.

Film is the basis of tartar. And tartar, with germs, is the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is why regular film removal is urged as probably first in correct gum protection.

Most dental authorities urgently advise thorough film removal at least twice each day. That is, every morning and every night.

For that purpose, obtain Pepsodent, the special film-removing dentifrice which leading dental authorities favor. Different from any other tooth paste.

Pepsodent curdles the film, then removes it; then polishes the teeth in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay and scientifically firms the gums. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And meets, thus, in all ways, the exactments of modern dental science.

On dental advice, people are adopting this new way of tooth cleansing. Obtain Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, at drug stores. Two months' supply at a moderate price—or send coupon for 10-day tube. Use twice every day. See your dentist twice each year. Make both a habit.

Tiger Eleven Outplayed, 27 to 13

Middie Backs Plunge Through Line to Touchdowns.

Baruch, Sub for Slagle, Threatens With Aerial Play.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The Navy invaded the Princeton Tiger's domain today and headed southward in the late evening with a 27-to-13 victory over the Orange and Black.

It was Fullback Schuber and Howard Caldwell who accounted for the striped players' downfall. Except for one flash late in the second period when Princeton's aerial attack netted a pair of touchdowns, the Blue had the better of the argument.

Earl Baruch, Princeton halfback, playing in place of Jake Slagle, engraved his name in the Princeton roll of honor by tossing eight forward passes for a total gain of more than 70 yards and two touchdowns.

THE Navy showed the way in the scoring when Quarterback Hamilton's toe sent the ball between the posts for 3 points in the opening period. Ransford accounted for a touchdown in the second period after straight football had brought the leather to the 3-yard mark.

But before the half closed Baruch tossed two passed over the goal line to Strubing and Stinson for a pair of touchdowns.

In the third the Midshipmen regained the lead as they pushed the Tigers back across the goal line by sheer force. It was a battle of brawn and the Navy won. Caldwell made both scores in the final half. The game ended with Princeton making a desperate effort to again open its aerial attack.

Carpentier to Seek Gene Tunney's Crown

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Another man who would like to try lifting the heavyweight championship crown from Gene Tunney's brow is Georges Carpentier, French boxer, who sailed today aboard the liner France.

"I would much rather fight Tunney than Dempsey," Carpentier said. "I would like to be matched with Tunney."

Carpentier said he would return soon to make America his permanent home, bringing his wife and child.

til the final moments of play when West Virginia responded to the pleadings of 3,000 Mountaineer students on the sidelines with the sustained aerial attack that brought the winning points within five minutes of the end of the game.

The battle was waged through the air in the main. Passes were thrown with seemingly utter abandon but countenanced by the carefully conceived formations from which they were launched. When yardage was needed it was the pass which was called upon as the only dependable ground gainer.

One of these throws by Georgetown came to naught early in the first period. Nork, standing near mid-field, launched the ball on its intended flight to Waite, Georgetown end, but "Big Ed" Morrison, West Virginia quarterback, sped within line of the throw, gathered it in with no visible let-up in speed, and the resultng 60-yard run and touchdown was a matter of course, a course unimpeded by any member of the Georgetown team.

The aerial attack rebounded to the benefit of Georgetown soon after. With the first period still marking the play, Georgetown obtained the ball on West Virginia's 15-yard line, the result of a kick blocked by Gormley. Thompson wrenched himself free near the side lines on the next play and, cleverly catching a throw from Nork, sped 5 yards for Georgetown's goal.

Georgetown assumed the lead a moment later on O'Neil's placement kick for the added point, and O'Neil's toe sent the Hilltoppers 3 points farther in front with another placement kick, from the 25-yard line, in the third quarter of the game.

Georgetown led the Mountaineers during the first three quarters, holding the upper hand throughout but failed to add the points that would have insured victory. The sustained attack that

Holy Cross Passes Beat Rutgers, 21-0

Newark, N. J., Oct. 16 (By A. P.). Displaying a superior brand of football throughout the four periods, Holy Cross defeated Rutgers, 21 to 0, today. Rutgers threatened once in the first half when runs by Lorenz placed the ball on the 3-yard line, but a fumble gave the ball to Holy Cross.

Daly scored twice for the Crimson. He carried the ball from midfield in the first quarter in a series of line plays, and in the third quarter took a forward pass from Ryan for a 36-yard gain and his second touchdown. Shanahan crossed the goal line in the second quarter on a 35-yard forward pass.

Andy and John Bowen On Youngstown Card

"Johnnie" Bowen, youngest member of the fighting Bowen family, together with his big brother Andy, will fight in Youngstown, Ohio, this week.

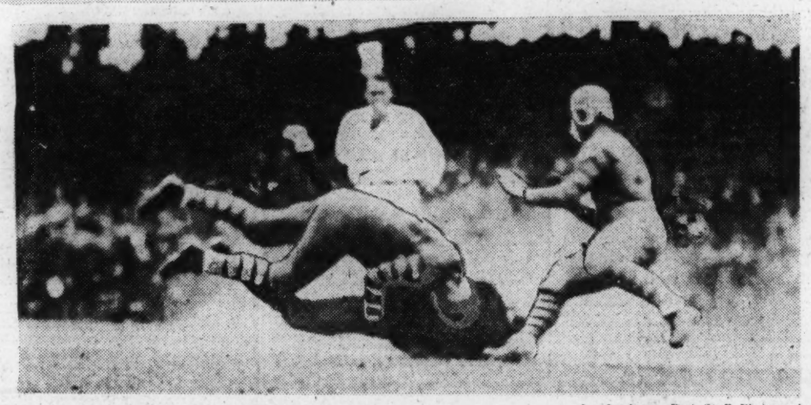

Andy will meet Dick Conklin, one of Pennsylvania's leading lightweights, in the main bout, while Johnnie will show his wares in the semifinal. This will be Johnnie's second professional bout.

McGrath in Hospital Following Grid Game

Although not discernible to the eyes of spectators, Capt. Frank McGrath, of the Georgetown eleven, was "out on his feet" during the last quarter of yesterday's game, which was won by West Virginia by a late rally. Suffering a head concussion and cuts about the face, McGrath was removed to Georgetown hospital immediately after the contest, and not until he was revived under treatment did he become aware of the result of the clash. Three stitches were taken in his wounds. He will be confined to bed for two or three days, doctors said.

IOWA BEATEN BY ILLINI, 13 TO 6

Nick Kutsch Scares Homecoming Crowd of 50,000.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Revealing a galaxy of backfield stars to operate behind the veteran line that shielded "Red" Grange last season, Illinois passed and kicked its way to a 13 to 6 victory over Iowa today before a homecoming crowd of 50,000 in Illinois Memorial stadium.

The Illini were forced to exert the combined efforts of their new backfield quartet to match the individual brilliancy of Nick Kutsch, the rough-riding Iowa cowboy. Kutsch scored one touchdown and came within 2 inches of crashing over with a second that might have tied the score. Kutsch, playing left half, gained two-thirds of the total Hawkeye yardage, carrying the ball 160 yards in 27 attempts.

KUTSCH gave the Illinois rooters a shock at the very start of the game when on the second play after the kick-off he raced 60 yards around the Illinois left end for a touchdown. Later Daugherity upset him when he was only 2 inches from the line. On the next play Schmidt failed to break through, Iowa losing the ball on downs.

Peters, Illini quarterback, became the new idol of Illinois fans as the result of his kicking and brilliant running. He scored two field goals, the first from the 16-yard line and the other from the 33-yard mark.

The Illini touchdown came when Lanum hurled a forward to Daugherity that enabled him to run 27 yards.

Illinois made nineteen first downs to Iowa's eight.

Colgate Pushes Pitt Before Losing, 19-16

Pittsburgh, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). The University of Pittsburgh football team, through a steady succession of line plunges and end runs, with a few passes beat down Colgate's spectacular aerial attack and won the annual football game today, 19 to 16. The result was in doubt until the last minute, Colgate repeatedly taking the ball to within a few inches of the Pitt line only to be thrown back by an infuriated Panther.

Pitt took the lead in the first period and was never overtaken. The Panthers made two touchdowns in that period and added another in the third. Colgate scored a touchdown in each of the third and fourth quarters and was in addition given a safety as a penalty for Pittsburgh when Rooney, sub for Fisher, was out of bounds behind the goal line on a kick to midfield.

Catholics Crippled, But Score Easily Over St. John's.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The Catholic university eleven romped off with an easy 19-to-7 victory over St. John's College at Ebbetts field today. The Washington lads took the field with a makeshift line-up of five regulars and six scrubs. The hospital toll of the Boston college game last week hindered the Capital City aggregation for the first half, but in the final half the regulars, Harvey, Foley and Manfreda led the volunteer Catholic eleven to triumph.

In the first two quarters the Catholic squad found the Brooklyn line well-nigh impregnable and resorted to the aerial attack. The pigskin was always in St. John's territory, but Ray Foley insisted on bucking the Red line, with no success. Twice the Washington lads lost the ball on downs on the 5-yard line.

Catholic University jumped into the lead in the first period when Harvey whipped a 20-yard forward to Manfreda, who waited, unguarded, over the last white line. Foley missed a drop-kick for the extra point.

THE Brooklyn eleven went to the fore in the second peiod, when Greenberg blocked Foley's punt. Motley recovered and raced 30 yards for a touchdown.

The last two touchdowns, both by the Washington outfit, were the result of line plays after the ball was brought to within striking distance of the Brooklyn goal. Manfreda and Harvey scored. Foley made the point after the touchdown in the third chapter. The playing of Harvey for the Washington eleven stood out. With no interference Bill smashed the line, sliced offtackle and threw and recovered forward passes with equal dexterity.

INDIANS BOW TO HARVARD, 27 TO 7

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—A greatly improved Harvard team romped through the William and Mary eleven on Soldiers' field today, running up a score of 27 to 7 for the Crimson's first victory of the season.

Harvard had possession of the ball most of the game, making gains almost at will through and around the line and by the forward pass. In the latter department Sayles and Putnam were the outstanding performers.

Harvard scored one touchdown in each of the first two periods and two in the third. William and Mary's attack got under way in the fourth when Eason took a long pass from Ryan and ran 15 yards to cross the Harvard line.

Movies Show Dempsey In Draw, Say French

Paris, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Boxing experts, referees and boxers, who witnessed the first showing of the motion pictures of the Dempsey-Tunney championship fight at Philadelphia, today were agreed that Jack Dempsey would never have received worse than a draw had the fight been held in Paris.

"You could never have found three boxing judges in France to take the championship away from him on his showing against Gene Tunney," one expert said after viewing the picture. In a country where the aggressive boxer is given the shade, as is customary here, Dempsey received a bigger cheer than Tunney at the end of the film.

"Perhaps the film does not give an exact idea of the fight, but Dempsey certainly was not beaten so badly as reported," said Francois Deschamps. "Tunney had a shade."

"So this is what they call murder in Philadelphia," shouted one spectator as the film came to an end.

Stagg's Team Helpless In East

Quakers Penetrate Line and Skirt the Ends for Goals.

Rogers, Fields Star; Thayer's Tackling Is Feature.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—A fellow named Murphy and a fellow named Rogers and several other fellows named Fields and Scull and Wasconolis and Thayer made play of a football game this afternoon that was intended to be one of those historic battles. These fellows wear the dark blue and red jerseys of the University of Pennsylvania, and they were prominently connected with the defeat of the Chicago Maroons, 27 to 0, in the presence of some 40,000 people who had been advised that the Maroons would make a mighty attempt to turn tradition upside down.

The tradition is that the University of Chicago can't lick the University of Pennsylvania, and as the young men ran off the field it was still one of the most reliable traditions in a sedate and conservative city where traditions seldom are turned upside down.

Murphy scored one touchdown against the Maroons, and Rogers made another and Fields made two, besides just missing one by a fumble as he churned the lime-streak of Chicago's 5-yard line with his cleats and then let the ball pop out of his arms.

Wasconolis kicked three goals after the touchdowns and between times busied himself with billy-goat charges through the Chicago team.

SCULL was sent on a number of excursions through the line or around the ends, and Thayer, the Pennsylvania captain and right end, set the example for a line that broke holes in the Maroons' defense and widened them into graceful avenues as the Pennsylvania backs came on.

On the other hand, when Chicago had the ball, the Pennsylvania front line smashed through and the Chicago backs were always in trouble before they could get on their way.

Pennsylvania began crowding the Maroons before the players had worked up a perspiration and it wasn't until the last minute of play at Stan Rouse, the Maroons' left half, slid through an opening in a 17-yard run to Chicago's 34-yard line for the first and only first down that Chicago scored all afternoon.

The Maroons had been warned to watch Charlie Rogers, Pennsylvania's holdover halfback, who participated in the 1925 defeat of A. A. Stagg's team, but when they did cover Rogers in the first quarter, this Paul Murphy, the quarterback, appointed himself to carry the ball and when they rallied round him he delegated the work to Fields, then to Wasconolis and so on.

MURPHY seemed to be working his associates in the backfield by the hour, calling on Fields, for instance, for several dashes in succession, the switching to Wasconolis, then to Scull, then back to Rogers.

Pennsylvania was using a hidden ball play that looked more like sleight of hand than football and if the Maroons were puzzled by the swiftness of the play and the fake dashes of the backs who ran hither and thither with their arms full of nothing whatever, it may be some consolation to them to know that the people in the stands looking on the scene, usually had no idea which back was really carrying the ball until he was brought down under a pile of exasperated Maroons.

Army-Navy Mascots To Be Done in Bronze

Chicago, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Mrs. Clay Judson, sculptor, has been appointed to model an Army mule and a Navy goat for presentation to the West Point and Annapolis teams after the service football classic here, November 27. The figures of the mascots will be cast in bronze.

German Heavies Fight To Draw in Title Bout

Dortmund, Germany, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Hans Breitenstraeter, German heavyweight champion pugilist, and Louis Haymann, fought a 15-round battle tonight to a draw. The fight was for the heavyweight championship of Germany.

Elis Triumph As 53,000 Attend

Big Green Beaten for First Time in Three Years, 14 to 7.

McGunigle's Playing Is Turning Point of Thrilling Game.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Dartmouth's high-geared eleven, generally recognized as the 1925 national champion, was stopped short today by Yale and sent down to defeat for the first time in three years.

The Elis tossed away a half dozen opportunities to score by loose handling of the ball, but still packed sufficient punch to overcome the Big Green by a margin of one touchdown, 14 to 7, in a battle that thrilled 53,000 spectators in the Yale bowl.

Yale's victory was as decisive as it was sensational, in upsetting the Indians from the north, who entered the same strong favorites. Except for a brilliant drive in the second quarter, a 65-yard match that resulted in Black scoring its only touchdown, Dartmouth was outgeneraled and outplayed by a Blue team that exhibited power, speed and versatility in abundance.

THE Elis beat Dartmouth at the latter's own game, as a matter of fact, for both Blue touchdowns came on well-executed forward passes of the type which have figured in Dartmouth's sensational performances over the past few years.

A short toss, Noble to Kline, resulted in Yale's first touchdown in the third quarter, and a 15-yard heave, McGunigle to Scott, produced the winning tally in the final quarter, with less than four minutes to play.

Yale, supposedly, started the game handicapped by the absence of several regulars but her subs more than made up for this with an unheralded figure, "Doc" McGunigle, of Winthrop, Mass., as the hero of the game. McGunigle did not get into the game until after the final quarter but he was the main factor in scoring the decisive touchdown.

With the rivals apparently hopelessly "deadlocked" as the end drew near, McGunigle snared an attempted pass by MacPhail, Dartmouth halfback, on his own 38-yard line and raced 47 yards to the Green's 25-yard mark. After two line plays found Dartmouth unyielding, McGunigle tossed a 15-yard pass over the line to Scott who raced 7 yards more for the touchdown.

MCGUNIGLE'S efforts were the crowning touches of a game filled with spectacular plays and pulled out a victory that Yale apparently had tossed away by making seven fumbles, several of them at critical moments. Four of them were recovered, but they broke up promising drives by the Elis, particularly in the second and third periods.

Yale completed only five out of a dozen forward passes but intercepted two of the Green's tosses at vital moments. Dartmouth completed only four of fourteen and the finish saw Dooley heaving wildly from midfield in a desperate attempt to score. The Elis also outshone the Green at rushing, registering 14 first downs to 12 for Dartmouth. Dartmouth's record was its first since 1923, when the Green bowed to Cornell at Hanover.

Lafayette, Ind, Oct. 16 (By A. P.)—Purdue upset the Western conference dope bucket here this afternoon when they put up a brilliant battle against Wisconsin, to claim a 0-to-0 tie. The Boilermakers, after failing to consistently gain with their running attack in the early stages of the game, came to life in the final period and marched to the Badger 10-yard line. Purdue's hopes of scoring went flying, however, when Wilcox missed an attempted drop kick.

Late Attack Scores For Northwestern

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 16 (By A. P.). For three quarters today, Indiana University matched with smart defense the strong attack of Northwestern, but in the fourth period the Hoosiers' wall crumpled and the Wildcats romped to a three-touchdown victory, winning 20 to 0.

Capt. Mdon Baker, "Tiny" Lewis, Gustafson and Colin made up the backfield which enabled Northwestern to hit its stride. But they continually fumbled throughout three-fourths of the contest.

Crusader Out Of Money In Race

LAUREL PARK, Md., Oct. 16.—Croyden, first; Sarazen, second; Mars, third. This was the order of the finish in the $10,000 added Laurel stakes, the feature race of the Maryland State fair's meeting at Laurel this afternoon. Ridden by L. McAtee, and leading his field from the rise of the barrier, Croyden never left the result in doubt, and at the finish he led Sarazen by a couple of lengths. Then followed Mars another head away, and a length in front of the favorite, Crusader.

A tremendous gathering turned out to witness the sport. The grand stand was filled to overflowing, as were the clubhouse balconies and lawns. The attendance was exceeded in point of numbers only on the day the French horse, Epinard, ran here.

There were eleven starters in the Laurel, and the major portion of the play was divided between Crusader and Chance Play.

THE big field, which contained several fractious horses, caused a delay of six minutes at the post, and when they were finally sent away Crusader left with the tailenders.

Coltiletti was forced to go wide with him until entering the home stretch, where he cut down to the inside. He made up ground but in the final furlong hung. Chance Play was shuffled about going to the first turn and Sande was in close quarters with him most of the trip. The race was not a true one.

The winner was lucky in getting the break, while the two choices had bad racing luck. The winner's portion of the stake was $10,850, which boosted the Harry Payne Whitney stable up to the $400,000 mark for the season.

H. P. Whitney's speedy filly, Maid of the Mist, had things practically her own way in the running of the Ridgely handicap, framed for 2-year-olds, which she annexed without trouble from a rather good field which included J. E. Widener's good gray colt Kiev. The latter raced second throughout the journey and wound up in that position, beaten out a length and a half by the Whitney starter and just an equal distance in the van of Bit O' Love, while Willie K. proved the better of the remaining two starters.

THE Severn claiming handicap, the last of the features of the day to be decided, resulted in a stubbornly fought battle and for which B. E. Chapman sent the winner to the post for D. L. Rice in his good long-distance racer, Dancing Fool.

It just managed to stagger in a half length in the van of the Arden farm's Rejuvenation, with J. K. L. Ross' Wheatstick third, beaten a length for the place award. This event was contested over the mile and one-half route and speculation on the result was well divided among the five entrants.

The Gov. Ogle steeplechase at two miles and one-half and worth $4,430 to the winner fell to the prowess of the Greentree stable's Erne II, America's premier fencer, when he beat a field of clever fencers that vied with him for supremacy. Although the field was a small one compared to other runnings of this important stake, it brought about one of the best contests witnessed in many a day.

Crawford on the winner had much to do with the victory as he rode a masterful race throughout and his keen judgment and able handling was largely responsible for his mount's easy win.

When Lorenzo took a cropper at the last fence while racing head-and-head with the winner, Erne II finished without being troubled to win by 20 lengths. Tassel saved the place by 15 lengths from Brightness, who managed to stand up and finish the course. Brantome lost his rider at the fourteenth fence. Byers also got a spill, but both jockeys were taken to the track hospital, where they were given medical attention and suffered no ill effects.

WOODCO, the unsexed son of Honeywood-Carico that raced for the Nevada Stock farm, attempted to make a runaway affair of the second race, which brought to the post a rather good lot of juveniles to test their speed over the three-quarter course.

After opening up a long lead on his opposition from a start that was marred when the barrier was caught by several of the starters and had some effect in eliminating their chances, Woodco just lasted under a rousing ride to get a neck verdict over Long Joe, while a length and one-half further back came Golden Volt. The choice of the contest, Florenda, with Sande in the saddle, finished in fifth position. Following the running, Starter Milton imposed a five-day suspension on Jockey G. Hudgins for attempting to prejudice the start.

The Oriole handicap, the second of the afternoon features to be decided and the third event on the card, brought out a real shifty lot of speedsters to sprint over the 5½-furlong route, and with the running came an unexpected surprise when Rolls Royce, sporting the colors of the Seagram Bros., of Waterloo, Ontario, was returned the winner without being fully extended. After gaining the lead from Polly McWiggles and Sunsard on making the turn into the home stretch, Rolls Royce opened up a two-length lead at the furlong pole, and for the remainder of the journey Bourassa had him under slight control to have him winner by a length and one-quarter. Easter Bells and Montferrat tried desperately to cut his lead down, but were forced to divide the remainder of the purse between them, while Polly McWiggles and Sunsard were unplaced.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Erne II (Greentree entry), $4.30. No place or show mutuels sold.

Erne II, fencing in faultless fashion, was kept close to the pacemakers from the start, responded with good speed the last half-mile and, finishing with tremendous speed, outjumped Lorenzo at the last fence and won without any trouble. Tassel displayed good ability for the first two miles, but was unable to keep up. Brightness was never a factor.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Woodco, $9.90, $5.30, $3.80; Long Joe, $11.50, $5.90; Golden Volt, $4.10.

Woodco sprinted into a long lead the first half-mile; saved ground until reaching the top of stretch, where he bore out, but held on gamely to outstay Long Joe. Latter, badly outpaced the first half-mile, improved his position steadily and closed stoutly on the outside of the winner. Golden Volt saved ground at stretch turn and closed gamely.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Croydon, $21.60, $11.40, $6.50; Sarazen, $14.30, $12.00; Mars, $9.40.

Croyden dashed into the lead at first turn, shook off keen opposition from Sarazen and held on his task gamely. Sarazen moved up stoutly when straightened out on back stretch, moved to within half-length of winner but the weight told at end. Mars closed an immense gap.

DANCING FOOL GAINING CLOSE DECISION IN SIXTH

SIXTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,500. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:33. Winner, Mrs. D. L. Rice's br. h. (5), by Huon—Cherdlah. Trained by H. E. Champman. Time, 2:34 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Dancing Fool, $14.90, $4.60, $2.80; Rejuvenation, $3.50, $2.00; Wheatstick, $3.00.

Dancing Fool moved into the lead with rush and was up to outlast Rejuvenation. Latter drooped back but came again and finished with a belated rush and was going fastest at end. Wheatstick was taken under choking pull in the early stages, made a bold move when released from restraint but tired badly the last furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,300. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $200; third, $100. For 3-year-olds and upward. Claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:16. Winner, Maryland Spring stable's ch. h. (5), by Corycra —Santoi's Sweetheart. Trained by U. S. Wishard. Time, 1:53 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—Corinth, $5.00, $4.50, $3.20; Midinette, $9.10, $4.40; Mysterious, $3.40.

Corinth was put to severe punishment the last three furlongs and, continuing gamely, wore down leaders to get up in final strides. Midinette raced Flying Al into submission, but was unable to get clear and she faltered right at the end. Mysterious was allowed to drop too far out of contention. She closed full of run.

Nittany Lions Never in Running

Register Only Three First Downs and Gain But 64 Yards.

Rockne Eleven's Varied Attack Is Puzzle Throughout.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Knute Rockne's Notre Dame juggernauts crushed the Pennsylvania State eleven here today, 28 to 0. Notre Dame scored a touchdown in each period. Bewildered, the Nittany Lions were unable to stop the off-tackle drives, the twisting end runs and passes which figured in Notre Dame's scoring.

Notre Dame's forward wall completely smothered the Penn State rushes. Penn State made only three first downs. Notre Dame made 461 yards from scrimmage to Penn State's 64.

In the first period a long pass from Parisiene was snagged by O'Boyle, who stepped across the line for a touchdown.

A FIFTEEN-YARD penalty for tackling Edwards after he had signaled a fair catch led to Notre Dame's second marker. Neimic on the next play shot off-tackle for a touchdown.

O'Boyle and Dahman rushed the ball deep into Lion territory during the third period, the latter circling the end for a third touchdown.

The fourth touchdown came soon after a 55-yard run by Chivigny. A pass, Roach to McNally, placed the ball on Penn State's 15-yard line, from where Chivigny dashed across with the last touchdown. Neimic kicked three goals after touchdown and Roach one.

A fake crisscross was the only Penn State tactic that gained ground and it was never good for more than a few yards. Rockne used 35 men, frequent substitutions not changing the consistency or effectiveness of the Irish attack, nor reducing its defensiveness when the Nittany Lions had the ball.

Cristy Flanagan, Rockne's star back, was used only 10 minutes. All injury he received during practice has not entirely healed.

Haskell Indians Beat Dayton; Mayes Stars

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 16.—The University of Dayton Flyers went down to defeat here today at the hands of the Haskell Indians by a 20-to-14 score. Half of the game was played in a sea of mud, and the aerial attack of the Flyers was hampered by a driving rain.

The game was featured by the sensational performance of Mayes McLain, the Indian's plunging fullback, who time after time crashed through the line for big gains. He was credited with four touchdowns, and in the final quarter a beautiful 35-yard placement kick completed his perfect day. Robello and Bacrinha were the outstanding players for Dayton.

Kaplan to Organize District Pro Eleven

A Washington professional football team is being organized by Sam Kaplan, former Central High, Lehigh and Catholic University player. Kaplan, who played Red Grange here last year, expects to obtain many of the players who represented Washington in that game. All players have been requested to leave their phone numbers and addresses with Cy McDonald at Spaldings, 1338 G street northwest.

THE RUNNING OF THE $10,000 LAUREL HANDICAP WON BY CROYDEN

Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Army's powerful eleven, which was the underdog for two periods, made a strong finish to defeat Syracuse today by 27 to 21 before 20,000 spectators in the Military Academy's new stadium.

While "Biff" Jones' pupils swept back the Orange horde in well-earned victory, Syracuse went down fighting and yielded only after stubborn resistance in the closing period. Army displayed midseason form today in a wonderful ground-gaining attack which was more of the orthodox order than heretofore characterized the Cadets' offensive.

In the third period the Cadets went from their 40-yard line to a touchdown on thrusts off tackle and through center. The West Pointers could not successfully turn the Orange wings where both Hanson and Krchoskaz played brilliantly. Sprague, Schmidt and Daly were outstanding in their fine line play today.

In the third period, Army's fine ground offensive wore down the Syracuseans. Harding crashed over through Friedman for a touchdown, from which Wilson kicked the goal, making the score 14 to 13, in Syracuse's favor.

In the final period the Cadets scored twice, Harding running to a touchdown from an intercepted pass, and Wilson going over on a line plunge for another. It was then that Syracuse unleashed its air attack which netted its final touchdown.

Catholic U. Freshmen Beat Calvert Hall, 6-0

The Catholic University Freshmen eleven opened its season yesterday with a 6 to 0 victory over the Calvert Hall team, of Baltimore, in the Catholic University stadium.

The Baltimoreans were completely outplayed throughout the game, making only one first down to eight for the yearlings.

The lone touchdown came in the last period, Murphy taking the ball over after Malevich had gained 20 yards on successive plunges off tackle.

Champa and Malevich were the stars for the Freshmen, while Govianni and Ellis did the best work for Calvert Hall.

Ball, Striking Post, Robs Missouri of Win

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 15 (By A. P.).—Sensational passing and heavy line plunging by both teams marked the 7-7 tie grid battle here today between the University of Missouri and Southern Methodist University of Dallas, Tex. Missouri missed victory by inches when, in the last minute of play, Stuber's boot for a field goal struck a goal post and bounder back to the field.

Missouri swept to a touchdown early in the game, only to be tied up by the Southerners a few minutes later.

SAMOSETS TRIUMPH.

The Samoset eleven defeated the Spalding team yesterday, 12 to 0. Geno and Fowler accounted for the winner's two touchdowns.

Navy Soccerists Win Over Swarthmore, 3-0

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 16.—The Naval Academy soccer team played brilliantly and exhibited a thorough understanding of trick plays to defeat Swarthmore kickers here this afternoon, 3 to 0.

The Middies scored once in the initial period, when Young booted his first two goals. In the second period Freeman shot a close boot into the net and Young added the final marker near the close of the period.

In the second half neither side registered. Navy had possession of the ball the greater portion of the time, but owing to the fine defensive play of Siekert, the Tars were unable to shove over another marker.

Marquette Defeats U. of St. Louis, 28-0

St. Louis, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Outweighing St. Louis University twelve pounds to the man, the Marquette University gridders whitewashed the home team today, 28 to 0. The visitors ripped through the St. Louis line at will. Joe Leary's run of 64 yards for a touchdown in the first period featured the battle.

5 STRAIGHT FOR CARLYLES.

The Carlyles made it five straight yesterday when they trounced the Perry Preps by a 31-to-0 score. Frank, Anderson, McVean and McCullough scored touchdowns for the Indians. Today the winners will ramble with the Northerns. For games telephone Manager Capt. Anderson at Lincoln 3113.

Violet Line Repulses Attack of Southern Eleven.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The great Green Wave of Tulane, sweeping up from Southern football seas, battered itself to pieces today against the defense of a stanch New York University eleven. The Violet, playing its first major intersectional conflict, plowed through the New Orleans line at will for a 21 to 0 victory.

Tulane could muster scarcely a half dozen first downs and two of these came from long passes hurled in desperation as the game drew to a close. Only at this point and for a few moments in the first period did the 1925 cochampions of the South threaten to score. Frequent off-side penalties marred Tulane's play.

THE kicking, passing and plunging of Strong, Violet halfback, and the smashing line drives of Capt. Briante splintered the Tulane forward wall for gains that rarely fell below 5 yards. Lasman, Giant tackle,, starred in almost every play.

Connor, Violet quarterback, tossed a long forward to Riordan for the first touchdown in the second period. The plunge of Strong and Briante carried the ball on marches of 83 and 40 yards, respectively, to pave the way for the final scores. Wilson's defense at end was the feature of the Tulane play.

PALACE VS. MARINES.

The Palace A. C. eleven will strive to upset the Navy Yard Marines when the two teams clash on the Washington barracks field today at 1 o'clock. Palace players are requested to report on the field at 10 o'clock.

MOHAWK PREPS PLAY.

Cornell Wins, 24-14, In Last Half Over Michigan State

Westerners Make Stand in Third Period. Ithacans Take Lead But Are Hard-Pressed to Stave Off Aerial Attack.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Michigan State threw a bad scare into Cornell today but the Red and White emerged victorious on the long end of a 24 to 14 score. After Cornell got the jump on the westerners by rushing two touchdowns in the first period, Michigan State came back fighting mad, held Cornell scoreless in the second period and nearly won a spectacular contest in the final periods.

After Capt. Carey had added three points to Cornell's score with a field goal in the third period, Michigan State suddenly opened up an effective aerial attack. A forward pass, Smith to Deacon placed the ball on Cornell's 8-yard line. After two smashes, Smith hit the line for a touchdown, the first score to be made on Cornell this season.

Cornell stiffened in the fourth period, but relaxed again as Michigan State opened up another aerial offensive. Smith sent another long pass to Deacon, who raced for a touchdown. Smith kicked the goal, and the score stood 17-14.

Within striking distance again of Cornell, Smith was in a position on his own 30-yard line to drop over an easy goal and tie the score. A bad pass from center went by him, and he was thrown in mid-field.

Cornell regained the ball, and her backs plowed toward the Michigan State goal in a march which sent Gassner over for a touchdown. Carey kicked the goal. Michigan State tried vainly for a touchdown through the air route, but their time was limited.

Ten thousand persons, including President Butterfield, of Michigan State, whose son started the game as Cornell quarterback, saw the game. The line-up and summaries:

Cornell.	Position.	Michigan State.
Schumacher	L. E.	Christensen
Anderson	L. T.	Wenner
Carey	L. G.	Ross

Butterfield	Q. B.	Boehringer
Balderston	L. H.	Schultz
Hoekelman	R. H.	Kurrie
Molinet	F. B.	Smith

Cornell	14	0	3	7	—24
Michigan State	0	0	7	7	—14

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Several long, lean years of football blight were swept away today and the Farmers from Oregon harvested a bountiful victory from the green turf of California's memorial stadium. The final score was Oregon agricultural college, 27; University of California, 7.

The tremendous driving power, coupled with a bewildering aerial attack, could not be denied, and the Aggies carried up the field twice in the third period and once again the closing few minutes of the game.

The play of the Bears was characterized by the same sort of tackling that lost the St. Mary's game last week.

WAVERLYS MEET FIREMEN.

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 16.—The light but fast Waverly A. C. team, of Washington, will visit the Dreadnaught park here tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock for a game with the Alexandria Fire Department eleven.

Four Penalties Handed Out In One Play

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

"Coe had carried the ball by line smashes to Drake's 10-yard line, when Coe's center passed low to the fullback, who fumbled, and the ball was kicked far to one side in front of Sloan, Drake's right end, who picked up the ball and started toward Drake's goal line. Strong, Coe's fullback, started after him fully 25 yards behind, with no chance in the world of overtaking him. However, he kept after him until just as the Drake end crossed the goal line the Drake fullback clipped Strong from behind, and Strong got up and took a swing at him.

"The officials took the touchdown away from Drake, put Coe's fullback out of the game and penalized Coe half the distance from the goal line from the spot the foul occurred and then penalized Drake 15 yards for clipping. This all happened on one play, and there has been much discussion as to whether proper decisions were rendered. I believe they were O. K."

OHIO DOWNS COLUMBIA, 32 TO 7

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). In a game featured by the broken field running of Fred Grim, a substitute, and Captain Marty Karow, Ohio State defeated Columbia, 32 to 7, here today. The winners could not gain consistently through the Columbia line, but ran to advantage in the open.

Grim, who scored three of his team's four touchdowns, intercepted a Columbia pass and ran 55 yards for a touchdown, and clipped off 29 yards from scrimmage to score another. Karow ran 55 yards to score after intercepting a pass.

THE Buckeyes also made two field goals, Clark and Uridil booting the ball between the goal posts from the 15 and 24 yard lines, respectively.

Columbia scored when Alkoff blocked an Ohio punt and fell on the ball on the 3-yard line. Norris scored the touchdown on the next play.

Tiger Cubs Again Win From Plebes, 16 to 13

Annapolis, Oct. 16.—The Princeton Freshmen triumphed for the second consecutive year over the Naval Academy Plebes today, while the Navy Varsity was trouncing the Big Tigers, but the cubs were fortunate in coming out on top side of a 16-to-13 score.

The Tiger yearlings got off to a fine start, shoving a touchdown over in the first quarter, when Scarlett recovered a fumble and ran within a yard of the goal line and then plunged over on the next play. In the second quarter Vogt intercepted a Navy aerial and raced 60 yards for a second touchdown.

Howard Eleven Wins Over Morehouse, 52-0

Howard University's eleven ran over, under and through the Morehouse College team, from Atlanta, Ga., yesterday to a 52-0 victory in what had been predicted a hard-fought game.

Howard completed eight of fifteen forward passes for a gain of 139 yards, and made 23 first downs to one for the visitors. The home eleven skirted the ends and tackles virtually at will.

Simpson, Coles and C. Smith were prominent for Harvard with Deson, Cooke, Lattimer and Archer doing the best work for Morehouse.

Next Saturday Howard plays West Virginia Institute.

LEHIGH LOSES TO MARINES BY 13-0

McQuade, Pugh Cross Goal in Bitter Struggle.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Oct. 16.—Defeated, but not disgraced, a fighting Lehigh university football team lost to the Quantico Marines here today in a bitterly fought struggle by the score of 13 to 0. Lehigh, defeated in every previous game this season, surprised with a brilliant defense against the well-groomed and powerful Quantico attack.

Twice the Marines went across for a touchdown. Jack McQuade, the backfield star of the Marines, ripped through tackle shortly after the start of the second period and with a beautiful straight arm, bowled over all Lehigh players in his path. McQuade raced 40 yards to give the Devil Dogs their first score, and Rickman's placement, scarcely passing over the cross bar, annexed the extra point.

The second touchdown came late in the third quarter and was directly due to a long, successful pass. On Lehigh's 30-yard line McQuade heaved a pass straight to the arms of the running Buckoway, who was tackled from behind on the Brown and White 6-yard line.

TWICE previously the Marines had the ball on Lehigh's 12-yard line on the first down, but the defense braced and held against the vicious thrusts of the Marines to take the ball on downs.

However, the effort taxed the Lehigh forwards who fought valiantly to prevent the second score. McQuade twice hit the line and on the third down advanced the ball to within inches of the coveted goal. Then Pugh bounced off left tackle and when extricated from the mass of humanity piled in the vicinity of the Lehigh goal post, had the ball across by a scant margin.

Offensively, Lehigh didn't have a look in. Thrusts at the line failed to net but one gain of any importance. That was an 8-yard plunge by Hayes. The Brown and White registered but one first down and that the result of a completed pass. The 20 or more first downs registered by the Marines describes the bitter struggle of the Lehigh line in holding down the score.

Taylor and Hockman were outstanding players for Shenandoah and Stonestreet for Charlotte Hall. The well directed attacks of Shenandoah were almost impossible to stop and the defense was impregnable. Shenandoah made ten first downs to Charlotte Hall's two.

Terrapin Line Battered by Gobblers

March to Touchdown Follows Opponents' Early Safety.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 16.—Superior in almost every department of the game and aroused by the roar of 12,000 fans, Virginia Polytechnic Institute defeated the University of Maryland eleven today, 24 to 8.

Maryland opened the game with a drive that carried it within the shadow of the V. P. I. goal posts only to have Virginia Poly brace and take the ball on downs. The V. P. I. kicker, however, stepped outside the end zone and Maryland was awarded a safety.

The Gobblers were conquerors from that point to the final whistle. They took the ball down the field, the bulky opposition of the Marylanders, who outweighed them several pounds per man, was a tailless kite in a hurricane. Three more minutes and Esleeck had carried the ball over, McArthur had place-kicked for the extra point, and the score was in favor of the Techmen, 7 to 2.

RIGHT back at the task of humbling their opponents the Gobblers started on the opening of the second quarter and made a second touchdown. This time the ball was carried over by Halfback Peake, and a little later a field goal by McArthur boosted the V. P. I. magin of lead to 17 to 2.

The Blacksburg coaches then yanked their entire backfield and the boys battled Maryland to even terms for the remainder of the quarter.

Tech sent the first team back to the firing line at the opening of the second half and immediately began to rip and tear the Old Liners' defense for notable gains, and once within striking distance Peake again carried the ball over, McArthur place-kicked the extra point and the score was 24—2.

This series of plays marked the final appearance of the Tech regular backfield for the remainder of the game.

Substitutes were rushed in until the stars of the game were all bench warmers.

In the fourth quarter the visitors made their best showing, with their substitutes really doing the best work. Twice they marched down the field within scoring range, only to lose the ball, once on a fumble and the second time on an intercepted forward pass.

THE third time they made the journey Snyder broke around the end and, dragging several Tech tacklers, passed over the goal line for the lone touchdown of the Old Liners. The drop-kick for the extra point fizzled.

V. P. I.'s backfield, every one of them, stood out in the game, with Miles and Moran showing the prettiest kind of defensive and offensive work in the line. Their work was rarely faulty and the interference a pleasure to witness. Snake field runs brought Esleeck into the limelight repeatedly.

Maryland displayed an excellent team on the offensive, but seemed to lack something on the defensive, and in addition, still were pursued by the fumbling habit. The Old Liners were especially poor in handling punts.

GEORGETOWN BEATEN, 13 TO 10, BY PASS IN FINAL QUARTER

West Virginia had produced in time of need was not forthcoming from Georgetown when in scoring position. Georgetown gained first down after first down but once a fumble and again a grounded pass checked its advances.

The waning moments of the game found Georgetown still fighting to no avail. A few passes were completed for short gains and again Georgetown was forced to surrender the ball by punting. The long heaves of low trajectory, the one savior of a losing team, failed and the running attack, noticeably impotent throughout, was of no use in the final summons.

Connaughton a Bulwark.

Glenn scored the winning touchdown; Thompson tied the score for Georgetown; Waite and McGrath smothered the attempted runs of Hamilton and Glenn, West Virginia's threats, but it was "Babe" Connaughton in the main who distinguished himself in the contest.

Connaughton, Georgetown's 270-pound right guard, was alternately immovable and moveable. When the play was directed at his position it was then that he gave no ground. When West Virginia's backs hurtled themselves against another sector of Connaughton's side of the line then he moved with surprising agility, fastened his hamlike hands on some portion of the runner and tossed him somewhere in the general direction of Georgetown's goal.

Connaughton even was seen to desert his position to take part in the checking of more than one attempted end run. His play and that of Mosko, chiefly, resulted in West Virginia's abandonment of its running attack in favor of the more useful passing game.

The 1926 edition of the forward passing rule which imposed a penalty of five yards on two successive forward passes that failed in the same set of downs, did not serve to check the overhead play. The teams accepted the penalties with little feeling in an attempt to uncover the decisive stroke.

Following is the play-by-play account of the game:

FIRST QUARTER.

West Virginia won the toss and defended the west goal. Capt. McHenry kicked off to Nork who returned to Georgetown's 33-yard line and fumbled, Meisel recovering for West Virginia. Line rushes by Hardy and Ryan were halted by Connaughton and Waite. A pass failed. Waite threw Hardy for a 12-yard loss and Georgetown obtained the ball on downs on its 44-yard line. Thompson and Nork hit tackle for first down. O'Neil made 2 and lost 2 at tackle. Morrison intercepted Nork's pass intended for Waite and ran 60 yards for a touchdown. A poor pass from center by Latham cost West Virginia the extra point. Score—Georgetown, 0; West Virginia, 6. Hardy returned the kick-off to his 33-yard line. West Virginia was penalized 5 for off-side. Hardy made 13 in two rushes. Connaughton stopped Ryan at guard. Georgetown was penalized 5 for off-side, giving West Virginia first down. Glenn and Ryan were halted in their tracks and West Virginia was penalized 5 for off-side. A pass failed and Glenn dropped back to punt. Gormley blocked the ball and Ryan recovered on West Virginia's 18-yard line. Thompson failed and then made 3 at tackle. A pass, Nork to Waite, failed but the next was successful, Nork to Thompson, for 10 yards, and Thompson ran 5 yards for a touchdown. O'Neil place-kicked the extra point. Score—Georgetown, 7; West Virginia, 6. West Virginia was thrown back after receiving the kick-off and Glenn finally punted to his 33-yard line. Georgetown was penalized 15 for holding. Two first downs were made by Georgetown before the quarter ended, on a pass, Nork to Waite, for 22 yards and gains of 6 and 3 yards made by Thompson and O'Neil, respectively.

SECOND QUARTER.

Thompson and Nork gained 7 yards but the next two thrusts failed to gain for G. U., and the visitors took the ball on their 22-yard line. Morrison carried the ball four times but failed to make the needed 10 yards and Glenn punted 30 to the G. U., 42-yard line. G. U. failed on two successive forward passes and was penalized 5 yards, thereby. Gormley punted 35. Hamilton replaced Ryan, and Glenn punted 25 yards out of bounds. Morrison smeared a pass and Thompson fumbled another, G. U. being penalized 5 yards. Gormley kicked 27. Two offside penalties forced West Virginia to punt, Glenn sending the ball 31 yards. Nork passed to Waite for a 24-yard gain. Another pass and Nork's tackle-thrust gained 6. Latham intercepted a pass on the West Virginia 24-yard stripe. Hardy took a pass from Morrison for 15 yards. Morrison made first down, the first West Virginia obtained without the aid of a penalty. Keefer replaced Hardy. Two successive off-side penalties on G. U., gave the visitors another first down. O'Neil halted West Virginia's rush by intercepting a pass. Nork passed to McGrath for 16. Gormley received another for 12. The half ended as a pass, Nork to Waite failed.

THIRD QUARTER.

Ryan and Hardy went in for West Virginia. Grigsby kicked off over the goal line—a touchback. Off-side penalty and losses at the line forced Glenn to punt, 30 yards. Thompson made 6 at end and O'Neil followed with 20 at the same place. Small gains were made by Nork and Thompson, and O'Neil place-kicked a field goal from the 25-yard line. Score: Georgetown, 10; West Virginia, 6. After the kick-off an off-side penalty on G. U. and Hardy's short gain gave W. Va. first down. Hardy shot through tackle for 17. Hardy passed to Garrett for 11. Morrison heaved to Glenn for 4. G. U. held for downs on its 34-yard stripe. Gormley punted 40 to Ryan, who came back 15. Morrison took Hardy's pass for 45 yards, but an off-side penalty brought the ball back to midfield. Glenn punted to Georgetown's 8-yard line. Gormley kicked 40. West Virginia was penalized 5 yards for two successive pass failures. Garrett snagged Hardy's pass for 28. Hardy lost 4 at McGrath's end. Hardy and Glenn negotiated a pass for 12. O'Neil knocked down the next pass over the goal line for a touchback as the quarter ended.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Nork broke through tackle on a 27-yard gain. O'Neil, Nork and Gromley made first down. Thompson lost 6 and then fumbled the ball, Latham recovering for W. Va. in midfield. Glenn was stopped and two passes failed. Vacheresse replaced Murrin. Hamilton took Ryan's position and Keefer subbed for Hardy. Hamilton stopped past tackle for 14. Keefer added a first down as G. U. was penalized. Keefer passed out of bounds. From the 15-yard line Morrison passed to Glenn, who took the ball 5 yards and across the line for a touchdown. Hamilton drop-kicked the extra point. Score—Georgetown, 10; West Virginia, 13. Thompson returned the kick-off 28 yards. Nork heaved to McGrath for 11. Nork, O'Neil and Gormley each lost ground and Gormley punted 38 yards. Glenn kicked back to O'Neil, 45 yards. McCabe went in for O'Neil. McGrath caught Nork's pass for 10 yards. McCabe received another for 14. Three more passes failed and W. Va. obtained the ball on downs. Keefer and Glenn made 4 before Glenn punted to McCabe. McHenry intercepted a pass on G. U's 22-yard mark as the game closed.

Weakened Idaho Team Bows to Huskies, 26-0

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Showing ability to make line gains only in the first and fourth quarters, the University of Washington football team defeated the University of Idaho, 26 to 0, on a muddy field here this afternoon.

Deprived by injuries of four of the players who last Saturday beat the University of Montana, 27 to 12, without using a forward pass, Idaho showed no power against the Washington line, still a point of uncertainty with Seattle fans. The Husky touchdowns followed brilliant runs.

What tips would you give about the thickness of clubs at the grip? How should this vary with the individual?

By ABE G. ESPINOSA.
One of America's Leading Professionals.

THE thickness of the grip depends upon the size of the hand and the length of the fingers.

The grip of the club should be of the proper thickness so that the fingers wrap around it. The club must not settle down into the palm of the hand as a finger grip makes for a more exact shot. Long, thin fingers need a club with a thicker grip than short fingers do.

HORSE SHOW LISTED FOR SATURDAY

10 Events on Program Booked for Rock Creek Parkway.

THROUGH the courtesy of Maj. U. S. Grant, in charge of public buildings and grounds, permission has been granted for a field day in the form of a horse show to be held next Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock on the Rock Creek parkway at the north end of the Connecticut avenue bridge.

This event is being sponsored by John O. Gheen, of the Wardman Park Saddle club, who has arranged an attractive program.

IT will be free to horse lovers of the city and it is hoped that they will take advantage of the opportunity, not only in attending, but also in participating.

Amateur riders are especially invited to enter their horses or ponies in competition for the handsome prizes which have been donated by prominent horse lovers of the District. The Army band will be on hand to help liven things up with a concert before and during the show.

The program, which includes ten classes, follows:

1—Ladies' saddle horses.
2—Saddle ponies up to 12-2 hands, to be ridden by children 12 years of age and under.
3—Hunters. Open (performance, 60 per cent; conformation, 40 per cent).
4—Saddle ponies, 14-2 hands and under, to be ridden by children 15 years of age and under.
5—Ladies' hunters (performance, 60 per cent; manners and conformation, 40 per cent).
6—Pairs of saddle horses.
7—Touch and out.
8—Saddle horses (open).
9—Corinthian class. (Performance, 50 per cent; conformation and appointments, 50 per cent.)
10—Cavalry remount, for suitable cavalry mount, mare or gelding, 4 to 8 years, capable of carrying 250 pounds, to be shown under saddle by an enlisted man in uniform. (Officers' mounts not eligible.)

Alabama Trounces Georgia Tech, 21 to 0

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 16 (By A. P.). Alabama advanced another step today toward its third consecutive Southern conference championship by administering a setback to Georgia Tech by 21 to 0, before 20,000 spectators.

Scoring in every period except the third, when the Golden Tornado made its only bid for a score, Coach Wallace Wade's eleven took the offensive throughout. Alabama's first score resulted from forward passes.

The forward passing of Winslett featured the Alabama attack, with Caldwell and Brown coming through with the greatest gains on line plunges and end runs.

Alabama's victory placed it in the conference lead with three victories and no defeats.

Triangle Club Active Lenglenn Is Different Poolo Officers Named New Slogball League

THE Red Triangle Outing club, composed of more than 250 young people, who hold weekly outings, will meet today at 7:30 a. m. at the east entrance to the Capitol grounds, First and East Capitol streets, for a 2-mile walk, which will be followed by a breakfast party.

In the afternoon the group will meet at Chevy Chase circle at 3 o'clock for a hike to Glen Echo and a campfire party for those who wish to stay out for the evening.

New officers of the organization who were elected at the annual meeting at the Y. W. C. A., October 4, are: President, W. B. Couiter; first vice president, Mrs. Elsie L. Parker; second vice president; Florence Hendershott; corresponding secretary, Inez Cooper; recording secretary, Nellie Mason; treasurer, Charles F Blakely; trail leader, W. C. Greenley; directors, Ruth Wylie, W. F. Allen and R. E. Myers.

SUZANNE THRILLS CUSTOMERS.

The most amazing thing about Suzanne Lenglen is the fact that she was cut from a pattern which never before produced an athlete. She is as essentially an artist in type and a dancer when in action as is Anna Pavlowa, and the crowd which witnessed her third professional appearance in Baltimore Thursday left the matches with the impression that they had witnessed something new in tennis.

The French star dazzled her audience by her grace, speed and perfect execution of every play and her technique was so perfect and without effort that it seemed almost a secondary thing.

It is more than possible that the forming of two definite groups, the amateurs and the professionals, will in the end be beneficial to tennis. Professionalism is not only making it possible for large numbers of people to see the game as played by the leaders, but it is making it easier for the player who would like to do it in a professional way to enjoy the fruits of professionalism and at the same time it enables the bona fide amateur to enter tournaments without the stress of trying to compete with players whose game is kept at the "boiling point."

WASHINGTON POLOISTS ELECT.

Officers were elected and plans for the fall tournament completed at a meeting of the Washington Polo club which was held Friday evening at the home of Miss Lydia Archbold.

Miss Archbold was elected president of the club, Miss Elizabeth Jackson continues as captain and Miss Maud Preece is the secretary and treasurer.

The club's first match will be played this afternoon between the Reds and the Whites at 3 p. m. on the Fort Myer field. Next Sunday the local team will be hostess to the Chestertown, Md., team in a game to be played on the Potomac park field, and the following Sunday the Washington club will play in Warrenton with the Warrenton club, of which Miss Peggy Keith is captain.

WORKSHOP GROUP MEETS.

A meeting of the basketball committee of the local workshop group of the N. A. A. F. has been called for tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Women's University club on I street by the chairman, Miss Hazel Sayre. Plans for a bureau of accredited basketball officials will be discussed, and all members are requested to be present.

FOLK DANCERS VISIT.

Miss Elizabeth Burchanel, president of the National Institute of Folk Dancing, will be in Baltimore next week where she will conduct a class of 300 members at the Baltimore Y. W. C. A.

Tuesday, October 26, has been designated as Washington day, and all people interested in entering the classes, which will be held at 4:30 and 8:30 p. m. that day, may do so by notifying the Marjorie Webster school of their intention. Many Webster pupils will make the trip in a chartered bus and arrangements can be made for others to go by machine.

Miss Burchanel is the author of many books on folk dancing and is considered the outstanding authority on the subject in this country.

HOCKEY GAME TODAY.

The Washington Field Hockey club will figure in the first match game of the season this afternoon at 3:30 on the Ellipse, when they play the Independents, of Baltimore.

DODGEBALL LEAGUE FORMED.

Garfield division will not be entered in the Elementary School basketball league this year according to the announcement of Miss Maude N. Parker, director of girls' activities of the playground department, but a four-school dodgeball league has been organized and will open its schedule this week on Garfield playground.

Wallach, Amidon, Dent, Smallwood and Van Ness are the schools which will be represented by teams. Miss Evelyn Howard, director of the ground, states that she has some good basketball material and that Garfield will enter a team in the interplayground series.

October 21, Wallach vs. Amidon; 22, Dent vs. Van Ness; 25, Wallach vs. Smallwood; 26, Van Ness vs. Amidon; 28, Dent vs. Smallwood.

November 2, Wallach vs. Van Ness; 4, Amidon vs. Smallwood; 5, Dent vs. Wallach; 8, Van Ness vs. Smallwood; 11, Dent vs. Amidon.

GALLAUDET'S GRIDMEN LOSE

Schuylkill Swamps Local Team, 50-13; Scarvie Stars.

READING, Pa., Oct. 16.—Long runs featured the attack of both teams in the contest won here today by Schuylkill college, over Gaulaudet college, of Washington. The final score was 50 to 13, in favor of the Parsons. Mose Barkman, with races through broken fields of 75 yards and 45 yards, both on direct line plays, punctuated the offensive for the Schuylkill eleven, which sustained its attack until the final quarter.

Capt. Scarvie, of Gallaudet, contributed to the sensational running of the afternoon, with a race over 75 yards and a touchdown after gaining the ball on a fumble.

FRANK WHITE, former Lebanon student, played a good game at quarter for the winners. He accounted for a touchdown with a sprightly dash around his right side for 25 yards in the first quarter. Aerial play was executed in systematic fashion by the Julia pupils.

Kingstry and Petrolenis each contributed touchdowns on terrific line plunges, and White hurled an overhead to Clemens in the final period.

Rose was thrown for a safety after trying to punt behind his goal line. Capt. Tom Boyle displayed steadiness on the defensive wing for his team. Yetzer and Lilly played well on the line.

By WALTER HAIGHT.

THE first touchdown is always the hardest. George Washington university's eleven pulled, hauled and battered its way across the Blue Ridge college goal line yesterday and took a full period to do it. But for the remainder of the game, the Hatchetites filled the air above the Central stadium with forward passes, and marched off the field the winner by a 39-3 margin.

Forward passes were not the only thrillers for the 500 spectators. Several brawls broke out in the third period and Referee Brooks Brewer was forced to send five players to the bench to keep the situation in hand.

As is often the case with small colleges, Blue Ridge and only one topnotch player. That was Capt. Slaughter. He called the signals, did the kicking, ran back the punts, made the passes, and did the majority of the tackling.

ABOUT the only thing that Slaughter did not do was catch his own passes. His grogginess in the latter part of the game eased George Washington's way to a couple of touchdowns.—Even with Slaughter, Blue Ridge was hardly a match for the Hatchetites.

Capt. Sapp clicked off steady gains around the ends from 10 to 15 yards, while Stehman and Lopeman seldom failed to gain through the line, but it was George Washington's forward-pass combinations of Lopeman and Haun and Lopeman and Sapp that produced the most yardage.

Coleman, who led a second backfield into action, proved a neat ball carrier. Sapp, for G. W., and Slaughter both kicked sensationally.

Blue Ridge's only score was a 38-yard drop-kick from the toe of Capt. Slaughter, which followed George Washington's stone-wall defense after penalties and gains by Slaughter and Michaels had brought the ball into Hatchetite territory.

AMERICAN U. WINS OVER DEVITT

Safety in Last Period Gives Collegians 2-0 Victory.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY'S eleven defeated Devitt Prep yesterday, 2 to 0, on the Georgetown university field. The only score of the game came in the last period, when Head fumbled a brilliant punt from the toe of Leon Schloss, behind the Devitt goal line, and was tackled by Caples.

Both teams displayed strong defense and scoring opportunities were few. Devitt had the best chance for a touchdown when Hartigan recovered a fumble on the American 13-yard line. The collegians held, however, and Schloss booted out of danger.

Moyna, Hartigan and B. Kennedy did the best work for Devitt Prep.

LOCAL SOCCERITES OPEN LEAGUE SEASON TODAY

Walford Club Seeks Post Cup Again

Champions to Oppose German-Americans in Inaugural.

Four Other Contests Listed Today; Boys Fill Ranks.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

THE Washington Soccer league will inaugurate its second season today when five games will be played on local fields. The teams will be matched as follows: German-Americans vs. Walfords, on the Monument grounds at 3 o'clock; Monroe vs. Fort Myer, at Fort Myer at 3 o'clock; Rosedale vs. Rockville, on Rosedale playground at 3 o'clock; Concords vs. Marlboro, on the Monument grounds at 1 o'clock, and Army Medical Center vs. Clan MacClellan, on Rosedale playground at 1 o'clock.

The Washington Post cup is up for competition for the second year and is now one of the most coveted trophies in local sports world. Walford holds it at present, having captured it the first year of play, and expects to make a strong bid for it this season, although the other teams are capable of better opposition this year than last.

With the exception of one position Walford will open the season with the same team that it had last year when it did not sustain a defeat, the only blotch on its record being a tie game played with Fort Myer. The change in the Walford personnel is one that should prove of considerable value to the champions, as the new player, Andy Whitehead, is considered one of the best forwards in local soccer ranks. He played with the German-Americans last year.

FORT MYER'S prospects for the season are a puzzle. In preliminary games it has shown flashes of strength, but Lieut. Charles D. Palmer, coach and manager, hadn't struck a winning combination up to last Sunday. However, he has some exceptional material and the Soludiers will no doubt give the Monroe boys all the trouble they want today.

Several changes have taken place in the German-American line-up and little will be known about them until the season is well under way, as they have had little opportunity to practice and need about three or four games to get tuned up.

Monroe will be a big disappointment to its coach, John Malloch, sr., and to its followers if they do not show a much improved team over last year.

Although using the same line-up, the schoolboys have profited by a year's experience and have had the capable Malloch to point out their mistakes. Having the advantage of youth over the majority of teams in the league, Monroe should flash real strength this year.

The German-American Reserves will hardly show much improvement over last year, as it has not obtained any players of exceptional ability during the off-season. It was dealt a staggering blow when many of its members deserted during the summer and formed the Concord club. But the "Little Germans" won a reputation for spunk and sportmanship last year by going through a hopeless schedule without forfeiting or grumbling, and this spirit has made every club in the league respect them.

THE Rosedale club is similar in composition to the Monroe team. It is composed chiefly of boys who played soccer in Northeast graded schools on the playgrounds, and while it lacks experience it has plenty of dash. George Youngblood, Walford, manager and coach, is handling the Rosedale eleven.

Army Medical Center played independent soccer in 1925, and ranked with Monroe, British Embassy and teams of that class, but this year the Soldiers got off to an early start and had a large squad on the field under the able guidance of David Adamson, genial Scotchman and soccer expert extraordinary.

Clan MacClellan has kept its line-up and all information an absolute secret, so little can be said about this eleven. Rockville and Marlboro are composed of boys who played soccer on high school teams, and should give a good demonstration of the kicking game. Rockville has as its coach, Robert Lee Tolson, who piloted six Gaithersburg high teams to county soccer titles. Marlboro has defeated old Washington Soccer league teams with annoying regularity in practice games so far.

Members of the league point with justifiable pride to its officials who they credit with the splendid shape that the league is in. William G. Birch, president; Lieut. Charles D. Palmer, vice president, and William Oram, secretary, have worked untiringly to make the league a success.

The public of Washington is invited to attend the contests without charge.

JOHNSON AND PLANSKY PRESENT POST'S PRIZES

Shriver, Feresta and O'Neil Post Skate Event Winners

CONDUCTED with all the touches given a national sporting event The Washington Post roller skate tournament, held at the Washington barracks yesterday, was pronounced a huge success by the throngs who witnessed it, and the near three score youngsters who participated. Starting at 9:30 o'clock, when the Army band began its concert, the youngsters cavorted on the barracks walks and showed every sign of enjoying the freedom of the army post.

Walter Johnson, the idol of every American boy, was there, not as a distant hero to gaze at from a bleacher seat, but a real person who moved in and out among the merry skaters who fought for the possession of his hands, seemingly unmindful of the fact that the arm that six tried to cling to at once, has been touted by sportsmen as a million dollars worth of flesh and bone.

TO make the day perfect, Walter proved that he is the sport that he is reputed to be by putting on roller skates and doing a few fancy steps (frantic attempts to hold his balance, but viewed by the youngsters as maneuvers that were well worth learning) with his partner and fellow-official, Tony Plansky.

Plansky proved to be just as affable to the youngsters as big Walter and he came in for his share of idolization. Tony looks much better on a running track than on skates.

Every move of the youngsters was broadcast from the field by W. R. C. and, previous to the first race, Johnson and Plansky greeted the unseen audience with a few well-chosen words. Then Tony and Walter took their places at the finish line, Tony picking first and Walter second.

As interesting as were the side shows, the skating races held their own as the main feature. Competition was keen in every heat and finals.

ONLY in the 125-pound class did one youngster show marked superiority. Oliver Schriver won all of his heats, the semifinals and finals of this class, his spurt starting with the flash of the starting gu and continuing to the finish gun and continuing to the finish

Vincent Feresta, winner of the 100-pound class race, showed real generalship to capture the honors in his class. In no heat or semifinal was he first, contenting himself with second places until the final dash, when he used all of the energy that he had been conserving to breast the tape ahead of his competitors.

Philip O'Neil, winner of the 85-pound race, got off to a bad start, but put on steam about midway and showed the way to the field.

After the races Johnson and Plansky presented the first boy in each class with a silver cup awarded by The Post and the second and third boys in each class gold and silver medals, respectively, also Post trophies. Naturally the day would not be complete if the fair sex did not play a hand in some way and as a final gesture two young ladies flashed up to Walter and Tony with nice new autograph books to be signed. Both smilingly complied with their wish.

The summary:

Gun Club Handicap Title to H. H. Shelton

H. H. Shelton, shooting from 17 yards, won the handicap championship race of the Washington Gun club yesterday by breaking 94 targets out of 100. Fawsett, who shot from 22 yards, turned in an excellent score of 93 out of 100 and was Shelton's closest rival for top honors. Fawsett is already the 16-yard champion of the District and Maryland. Williams and Blundon shot from the 20-yard mark and tied for third high honors with totals of 92 apiece. However, in the shoot-off Williams won the trophy with 23 breaks to Blundon's 21.

Burrows annexed two legs on the yearly handicap trophy when he scored 25 and 23 breaks.

MICH. WINS, 20-0, OVER GOPHERS

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The Little Brown Jug stays in Ann Arbor. Michigan defeated Minnesota, 20 to 0, at Ferry Field today in the first of two scheduled meetings between these schools this year and the first Western Conference game of the season for both teams.

It was a versatile Michigan that outpassed and outplunged Minnesota. Forward passes played their parts in two Michigan touchdowns while a trick play aided by smart interference from the Michigan line scored the third.

Minnesota made one brave but late drive toward the Michigan goal line but could not break through the Wolverine defense when a touchdown was only 16 yards distant. Gopher passes were smothered by the Michigan defense, only one being completed during the entire game.

MICHIGAN'S versatile attack measured her victory. Friedman, Rich and Gilbert formed a trio of backfield men capable of accurate forward passing. The Michigan line held solid when the enemy threatened.

Molenda scored the first Michigan touchdown after a forward put the ball in position in the opening period. Two more were added in the second, one on a blocked punt and the other on Coach Yost's aged "Statue of Liberty" criss-cross play. Despite much rain that continued up to game time, a capacity crowd of 47,000 saw the game.

Generals Nose Out Kentucky, 14 to 13

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 16.—The Washington and Lee Generals, who held the Princeton Tigers to a 7-7 tie last Saturday, had a narrow escape from defeat at the hands of the University of Kentucky Cats here this afternoon but emerged victors by 14 to 13.

The winning margin came on an off-side penalty in the third period as Rauber attempted to kick goal after scoring a touchdown. The kick was wide but the Cats, who were off-side, were penalized the extra point. The Cats outplayed the Generals in every department except in generalship. They out-passed the Generals by 144 yards to 13, completing seven passes to Washington and Lee's two.

War White Poloists Win Fall High Goal Tourney

Capture Second Cup of Season by Downing 16th Field Artillery Four, 14 to 11. Capt. Kilburn Stars.

WAR DEPARTMENT WHITES received their polo tournament cup of the season yesterday when they won the fall high goal tourney by defeating the Sixteenth Field Artillery of Fort Myer in a spirited contest, 14 to 11. Possibly made overconfident by the three goal handicap they received, the Artillerymen did not play their usual game until after the third chukker, when the Whites scored four goals and took the lead.

Capt. Kilburn, playing in number one position for the winners, came out of the slump that he has been under for several weeks and through his individual efforts, punctured the hopes of the Fort men. He dashed to every corner of the field covering plays and hit the white pellet with uncanny accuracy, his goal total for the day being five.

Col. Margetts teamed well with Kilburn, driving with his usual force and accuracy. Maj. Parker and Col. Morris did not score as frequently as their teammates, but their defensive and team play was above reproach.

CAPT. TATE'S work was one of the bright spots of the Artillery defeat. His mighty drives kept the losers in the running when the Whites threatened to overwhelm them. In the final three chukkers, when the Sixteenth Field made its strongest bid, and the fans were furnished the best polo of the season, Capt. Tate dominated the field.

His best play of the day was in the seventh chukker when he carried the ball to the White goal, where the defenders blocked. Getting the ball on the rebound from an enemy mallet, Tate back hooked it between the uprights. He was at a bad angle to try for a marker and was forced to put a slight twist to the ball, which he did perfectly.

Lieut. Benson, while not up to his best game, ran Capt. Tate a race for individual play. Hooking an opponent's mallet and driving with one motion was Benson's best play yesterday, and he used it whenever the occasion arose.

Yesterday's game practically ends the polo season on the Potomac park oval where, according to figures compiled by the public buildings and grounds, 60,000 people have watched the army men play. No charge is made to witness the matches, the only means of support being the annual polo ball held during Easter week, and leaders of the various teams claim that the game will be played on an even larger scale next year if receipts from the ball next spring come up to expectations.

Apache A. C. Eleven Battles SOLDIERS SEEK HONORS Battery B, of Ft. Myer, Today

FORT MYER sends the Battery B eleven to Union park today in an effort to gain gridiron recognition in this section. The task confronting the Soldiers is the taking of the scalp of the Southeast Apaches, guardians of the Fifteenth and H streets field.

Beating the Apaches is something that the best unlimited teams have found a tough assignment and a feat which promises to be even more difficult this year. The "Little Indians" are being coached by Lionel Levvy, who in 1923 drilled them for their sensational showing against the Mohawks and Mercury.

The same "corner gang" spirit that steered the Apaches to championships in the 125-pound, 135-pound and 150-pound division is still with the team as are the majority of players who helped annex those titles.

FORT MYER has also tasted a championship. Its baseball team won the Arlington County league banner this year and the Post has gone about football as earnestly as it did about baseball.

While the Battery B eleven has not played a game, it has been drilling hard for over a month and will carry the support of the post when it takes the field today.

The Apaches will probably rely on their open game which has made them feared in all circles. The Soldiers are reported to be a driving eleven, tricky and fast as well as adept at the old army game of line-plunging.

The game starts at 3 o'clock.

Stantons to Engage Kenilworths Today

The Kenilworth eleven faces a hard game this afternoon, meeting the Stanton A. C. eleven, of Northeast, which tied the Georgetown A. C. team last Sunday. The game will be played on the Kenilworth field and is booked to start at 3 o'clock.

YANKEES SEEK GAME.

INDIANS PLAY ANACOSTIA EAGLES

Good Game Booked at Nats' Stadium This Afternoon.

THE Mohawk Athletic club's football team will oppose the Anacostia Eagles at American league park today at 3 o'clock. The boys from across the bridge have always made the Indians step, and they are more than likely to worry the Hawks not a little today.

After the Hawks' defeat at the hands of the Waverly club last Sunday, Coaches Licarione and Hagerty have had them working every night during the past week in an effort to iron out the wrinkles, and the Birds will encounter a somewhat different eleven when they face the revamped Hawks today.

ON November 2 the Indians will open with out-of-town teams, meeting the Fort Humphreys eleven, which annexed the independent championship of Virginia last season. The Apache aggregation was a victim of the Soldier machine last season, while the Hawks took the measure of the Doughboys.

Incidentally this was the only setback the Humphreys eleven suffered. Following this tilt with the Soldiers, the Hawks will endeavor to wallop the strong Reina Mercedes team from Annapolis. The Sailor Boys scrimmage every day with Navy's first-string men, and to date have not tasted defeat. Last year the Tars went through the season and finished with a spotless slate. What is expected to be a game worth watching will be when the Hawks get a return smack at their conquerors, the Waverlys, November 7.

Mercury Grid Team In Practice Today

The Mercury A. C. eleven will practice today on the Plaza field in preparation for its opening game with the Marine Barracks team, on October 24. Coaches Zube and Jack Sullivan have requested all candidates to report. Vic Gauzza is managing the team and games may be arranged by writing him at 927 D street northwest, or by phoning Franklin 2408.

ARCHERY POPULARIZED.

Reginald Denny is credited with introducing archery to the Hollywood movie colony. Denny's prowess with the bow and arrow is common talk about the studios and formation of an archery club has been proposed.

PIRATES AT SEAT PLEASANT.

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 16.—Bill Hammond takes his Pirate A. C. team to Seat Pleasant tomorrow, where it will meet the Seat Pleasant A. C. in the local's second game this fall. The first was lost to the Southern Preps in Washington last Sunday by a 12-to-6 count.

PARKWAYS PLAN QUINT.

Practice for the Parkway Motor Co. basketball team will get underway this week. Manager Athey is anxious to communicate with senior and unlimited teams having gymnasiums. He can be reached at West 640.

Friendship Eleven Meets Parks Today

The Friendship A. C. will face the Park A. C. today on Fairlawn field, at 1 o'clock. All Friendship players are requested to report to the field at 12 o'clock. Padgett was again elected captain of the Friendship team for the third consecutive year at a meeting of the club last week. Teams in the 125-pound class desiring games with the Friendship eleven may telephone Lincoln 515-J.

ALL-STARS VS. WHITE SOX.

Hyattsville, Md., Oct. 16.—Hyattsville All-Stars will meet Maryland White Sox, strong colored nine, on the Mount Rainier diamond today at 3 o'clock.

DEVERE BURR WINS COLUMBIA CLUB GOLF TITLE

John Brawner Defeated at 37th Hole

Hufty Leads Field in Congressional Club Qualifications.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE championship of the Columbia Country club was won yesterday by DeVere Burr, the 18-year old son of A. D. V. Burr, who defeated his young opponent, John F. Brawner, on the thirty-seventh hole of a strenuously-contested match. The consolation in the championship flight was won by W. Carlton Evans, who defeated Martin R. West on the eighteenth green.

Burr staged two remarkable come-backs in the morning and afternoon rounds. Playing the first nine in the forenoon in 41 strokes, he was 3 down, but by virtue of a fine 36 for the homeward journey, one stroke over par, he squared the match at the conclusion of the round, both players finishing with a card of 77.

IN the afternoon, although the brand of golf was not of the same high character, the match was still all even at the end of the first nine, with Burr 2 up when the contestants stood on the sixteenth tee.

Then Burr took three putts on the sixteenth green, securing a half, and lost the seventeenth when he overapproached the green and the eighteenth when he encountered a double stymie. On the nineteenth hole Brawner sliced his drive into an almost unplayable lie in the far ditch, and when he was not on the green in 3, Burr meanwhile being only a few feet from the cup on his second shot, Brawner conceded the hole as his fourth shot was still some distance from the pin. Their cards:

MORNING ROUND.

Out
Brawner	5	4	5	4	5	3	4	4	5	41—85
Burr	5	5	4	3	4	4	4	5	6	40—83
In
Brawner	5	4	5	4	5	3	4	5	5	39—77
Burr	4	4	4	3	4	4	4	4	5	36—77

AFTERNOON ROUND.

Out
Brawner	4	5	6	3	7	6	5	3	5	—44
Burr	4	4	4	4	5	4	5	3	5	—38
In
Brawner	5	4	5	4	5	5	4	4	5	—41—85
Burr	5	5	4	3	5	4	4	5	6	40—84
Extra hole
Brawner	5

In addition to the extra hole played by Burr and Brawner, there were two extended contests, J. S. Jullien winning the consolation in the third sixteen on the twenty-first hole when his opponent, J. Albert Shaffer, missed a short putt which would have resulted in a half, and E. L. Bono winning his second 19-hole match of the tournament when he defeated Paul J. Frizzell in the second division. The summary:

FIRST DIVISION. (Handicaps, 8 and under.)
Defeated eight—W. Carlton Evans defeated Martin R. West, 1 up.

SECOND DIVISION. (Handicaps, 9 to 13.)
Final round—Bono defeated Frizzell, 1 up, 19 holes.
Defeated eight—Semifinal round: Myron G. Clear defeated H. F. Ellwood, 2 and 1; Sidney E. Kent defeated Clark C. Griffith, 3 and 2.

THIRD DIVISION. (Handicaps, 14 to 18.)
Semifinal round—A. S. Gardiner defeated Frank S. Appleman, 4 and 3; Dynum E. Hinton defeated Charles Selden, jr., 4 and 2.
Final round—Gardiner defeated Hinton, 1 up.

FOURTH DIVISION. (Handicaps, 18 to 22.)
Semifinal round—G. M. Ferris defeated R. L. Taylor, 4 and 2; J. C. McLaughlin defeated D. E. McVaap, 4 and 3.
Final round—Ferris defeated McLaughlin, 3 and 2.
Defeated eight—Semifinal round: John C. Walker defeated Arthur J. May, 4 and 2; Horace Dulin defeated R. J. Murphy, 3 and 2.
Final round—Walker defeated Dulin, 4 and 3.

FIFTH DIVISION. (Handicaps, over 22.)
Semifinal round—Ralph A. Shepard defeated C. L. Conradt, 1 up; Edw. W. Gableman defeated G. Y. Worthington, 2 and 1.
Final round—Gableman defeated Shepard, 6 and 4.
Defeated eight—Final round: A. M. Nevius defeated Robert S. French, 6 and 5.

The tournament, which reached high-water mark in the history of the club with interest and attendance, came to a conclusion last night with a dinner at which all the members were guests of the club.

There were songs and stunts a la gridiron, but the main feature was the presentation to D'Arcy Banagan, the popular assistant professional at the club, of a handsome gold watch, suitably inscribed, with a chain and knife attached, in addition to which he was handed a leather pouch containing over $1,000 in gold. The presentation speech was made by A. J. Cummings. The toastmaster was Herbert T. Shannon, chairman of the dinner committee.

Seventeen members of the Congressional Country club participated yesterday in the first round of medal play for the club championship. The qualification round consists of 36 holes, and owing to the small number of players yesterday, it is expected that a large proportion of the membership will play 36 holes today in order to qualify in the two sixteens for match play between today and the 31st of October. The scores yesterday, with Page Hufty leading the field, were as follows:

Athletics Get Boley For Players and Cash

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). Joe Boley, star shortstop of the Baltimore International league club, realized a seven-year major league dream today when Manager Jack Dunn formally announced his sale to the Philadelphia American league club for cash and players.

The amount of cash the Athletics will part with for the services of "Silent Joe," for whom Dunn once refused $100,000 was not divulged, nor have the players yet been named. The deal is complete, however, Dunn announced. Baltimore won seven straight pennants with Boley at shortstop. He reports to Connie Mack in the spring.

91-Yard Dash Wins For Colorado Aggies

Denver, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—A 91-yard run by Glen Davis, Colorado Aggie quarterback, in the closing minutes of play enabled the 1925 Rocky mountain champions to defeat Denver university, 7 to 6, here today.

With but six minutes to play, Davis took a punt on his own 9-yard line and raced through the entire Denver eleven for a touchdown, and the Aggies rode to victory on the toe of Ament, substitute back, who added the point after touchdown.

Washington Ladies' League Bars Nonresident Bowlers

Presence of Baltmore Star in Washington's Line-Up Causes Decision—Club Quits Circuit—Other Races Tighten.

By W. CHARLES QUANT.

WHEN Madeline Zorbach, champion woman bowler of Baltimore, rolled with the Washingtons last Tuesday night, in the 1926-1927 season of the Washington Ladies duckpin circuit, the issue of allowing a nonresident bowler to participate in a local league was raised.

After careful consideration of the question the league directors held a special meeting and adopted a resolution that prohibits any one participating in the circuit's matches that does not reside within a 20-mile radius of Washington. Incidentally, this is the same rule that governs the bowlers in tournaments directed by the American Bowling congress.

The directors of the league contended that there are several bowlers in Washington as good, if not better than, Miss Zorbach, and that it would be possible for the Washingtons to strengthen their club from the local ranks.

FOLLOWING the adoption of the resolution Capt. Lowd, of the Washingtons, announced their withdrawal from the circuit. Unless some change is made in that club's decision before next Tuesday night one of three other teams that have applied for franchises will take over the vacant franchise.

The directors of the league are to be commended on their stand in this action, as it is only fair to local participants of the duckpin game that Washingtonians be permitted to participate.

The Beeques, Commercials, Kumbacks and Washingtons are tied for the league lead with three wins each.

TEMPLE TIES G. P. O.

Temple moved into a tie for first honors in the District loop when they swept their match with Cornell's Lunch, while the Printers were taking but two from the treacherous Meyer Davis five. King Pin remained in second place with six wins by taking two from Petworth with scores of 524 and 526. Megaw, Campbell & Co. had considerable luck in this match.

Convention Hall and Stanford furnished the real fireworks of the week, with the former taking two games, though the latter rolled the record set of 1,784 and record game of 661. McPhilomy, of the losers, also came into the limelight with nine perfect boxes only to miss a complete game when he left No. 5 pin standing and missed it. His 173 game and 411 set, however, are new marks in the circuit.

CORDELL IN LIMELIGHT.

Capt. Cordell, of Golden Rule, is leading his teammates a merry race with an average of 115 for the first six games. He also holds high set of 372, while Tobey has high game of 135. With such individual performances concentrated on a single club, it seems that they should be topping the circuit, but the won-and-loss column shows but a .500 standing. Arlington, Fred D. Stuart and Mount Pleasant lead the loop with five wins in six starts.

UNION PRINTERS LEAD.

The Union Printers gained undisputed first-place honors in the athletic loop by taking three from Hugh Reilly, while the Smithfield were losing one to Nomands. Croghan turned in a 140 game for the latter and this proved a stumbling block for the "Hams."

Despite that loss Smithfield's 1,713 is a new record, while their 586 ties the Printers for game honors.

KING DAVID LEADS.

The Masonic league has at last found an undisputed leader in King David with a record of 13 and 2. Gompers, St. John's and Lafayette are but a single game behind and in a threatening position.

Hap Burtner still tops the individual field with an average of 119.1, which is a trifle better than Rosenberg, 1925 champ.

ECONOMICS GET 1,613.

Economics rolled a 1,613 set for a new mark in the Agriculture Interbureau circuit and easily won three games from Plant Bureau. This triumph however, gained but a single game on Accounts, who won a pair from Solicitors. Barber's 351 set for Economics was the best in this quartet of teams.

Property and Entomolgy each took a single game from Interbureaus and So-Kems, respectively, when it seemed that these clubs were set for a clean sweep.

FOREIGN MARKETS HOLD WHEAT FIRM AS PRICES ADVANCE

Corn Weakens Slightly Under Report of Favorable Crop Conditions.

FAIRLY STEADY PRICE ON ALL OTHER GRAINS

Higher foreign markets held the domestic wheat market firm during the week ended October 16, and prices made further advances at most markets, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States Department of Agriculture. The corn market weakened slightly as crop conditions became more favorable and the movement of the new crop in the Southwest increased. Prices of other grains held fairly steady.

The Liverpool wheat market advanced 3 to 4 cents, but this was largely the result of increased ocean freight rates. In general, however the world's wheat market situation continued firm. A revision of the estimate of the French wheat crop reduced the September estimate about 10,000,000 bushels. Estimates from other countries also were reduced slightly; making the total northern hemisphere crop virtually the same as last year. Weather conditions in Canada were improved, but harvesting operations and marketing were interrupted occasionally by rain and snow. Canadian movement to date has been restricted by unfavorable weather.

The United States crop, according to the October 1 estimate, will total around 840,000,000 bushels, of which about 213,000,000 bushels is spring wheat. This spring wheat estimate includes approximately 48,000,000 bushels of durum wheat produced in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana. The spring wheat crop is about 58,000,000 bushels smaller than last year, but the winter wheat crop is about 230,000,000 bushels larger than last year.

Lighter receipts and improved demand advanced cash wheat prices 2 to 4 cents. Premiums for high protein hard winter wheat, however, were lowered about 2 cents a bushel and the principal demand was for the lower protein types. No. 1 hard winter 12 per cent protein was quoted in Kansas City at 4½ cents to 5 cents over the December quotations, which closed October 15 at $1.33⅞. 12½ per cent protein was quoted at 5½ cents over, and 13 per cent protein 6 cents over the December.

Over Chicago Price.

Export bids for No. 1 hard winter f. o. b. the gulf, were quoted at about 9½ cents over the Chicago December price. This would be about $1.48 to $1.49 a bushel. Soft winter wheat prices were up 2 to 3 cents, but the advance was generally in sympathy with the advance in hard winter wheat prices and there were no new features in the market. Mills were only moderate buyers.

Moisture continued to be a more important factor than protein in the spring wheat markets, and heavy-weight dry wheat, even with low protein content, sold in many instances at higher prices than high-protein wheat of light test weight and heavy moisture content. No. 1 dark Northern, 12 per cent protein, sold in Minneapolis at 2 to 5 cents over the December quotations; 12½ per cent protein, 3 to 7 cents over, and 13 per cent, 4 to 9 cents over. December wheat advanced 1½ cents for the week and closed October 15 at $1.43⅛. Durum wheat of good milling quality was firm with offerings small. Premiums were further advanced and No. 1 amber was quoted at the wide range of $1.34@1.54 a bushel.

Export demand in the Pacific Northwest continued heavy, notwithstanding that ocean freights were advanced. Both soft and Western white wheats were selling at the close of the week in Portland at $1.39 a bushel. Europe and Japan were the principal buyers. Shipments from the Pacific Northwest established a new record in September and indications are that October shipments will also be large. Country movement has increased with the advance in prices.

The weather was more favorable for the corn crop during the week, and this, together with the increased receipts, held the market relatively weak. Losses from frost damage during September were not as severe as feared, and the crop, according to the October estimate, will total about 2,680,000,000 bushels. Only about 7 per cent of the crop in Nebraska and 14 per cent in Iowa had failed to reach the hard-dough stage at the time of the killing frost.

Severe Farther North.

The damage was more severe farther North, however, and about 20 per cent of the crop in South Dakota, 45 per cent in North Dakota and from 30 to 40 per cent in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin was reported as immature when the frost occurred. The demand for corn at the principal markets was fairly active and has been sufficient to absorb the current receipts.

The oats market held virtually unchanged. Receipts at the market continued light and the supply of oats of choice quality was inadequate for market needs. Heavyweight dry bright oats sold at premiums of 2 to 3 cents a bushel over the ordinary quality of the corresponding grades. The outturn of the crop was slightly larger than indicated a month ago, and, according to the October 1 estimate, the production this year will total about 1,282,000,000 bushels. This is about 230,000,000 bushels less than last year's crop. The quality, however, is much poorer than last year, and nearly 10 points below the 10-year average.

The rye market was slightly firmer with scattered export sales reported. Receipts were light and were taken readily. Milling qualities were in active demand by the mills at the various markets.

The barley market developed a weaker tone and prices declined 2 to 3 cents from the high point reached last week. Best malting types were selling in Milwaukee at 76 to 78 cents a bushel at the close of the week. The Pacific coast markets were steady, with export demand fairly active. Further increase in ocean freight rates, which are now around $9 a ton from San Francisco to Europe, restricted export trade. Malting barley was quoted in San Francisco at $1.40 for 100 pounds. European markets were still unsettled, but there was virtually no change in prices, which were quoted at $2.28 to $2.29 for 100 pounds for new crop California barley on spot sales.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The easier tone which developed in the cotton market late yesterday was in evidence again today. January contracts selling off to 13.00, or 42 points net lower, under continued Southern and Wall street selling. Closing prices were at the lowest of the day, with the market barely steady at net declines of 30 to 44 points.

The opening was steady, but 24 to 36 points lower under overnight selling orders, which included further hedging by the South. Initial offerings were readily absorbed by weekend covering and trade and investment buying, but rallies of 10 or 15 points appeared to meet more selling, particularly by brokers with Wall street connections. This was attributed to the liquidation of long contracts purchased earlier in the week, and probably was influenced to some extent by weakness in the stock market.

The Southern selling continued also, while demand tapered off to some extent after the early buying orders had been supplied, the forenoon market becoming rather weak and unsettled.

December broke to 12.91, while March sold off to 13.25, net declines of 40 to 44 points on active positions and reactions of about 70 points from the high prices touched on the rally yesterday morning.

Reports of further showers in the Southwest were accompanied by complaints of damage to grades, and additional advices were received here, stating that low grade cotton was being abandoned in the fields owing to the scarcity and high costs of labor for picking. These advices evidently had little immediate effect on sentiment, and some of the local traders took the reports of increased hedging to mean that the rallies of the past few days had brought out increased offerings of spot cotton in the South.

Private cables reported trade calling and covering in Liverpool, but said the market was lower under hedge selling and local or continental liquidation.

Trade interests were credited with buying quite heavily here on the late forenoon break believed to be partly for foreign account.

$425,000 IN SATCHEL GONE AFTER FRAUD

McCrady told detectives Knapp approached him several weeks ago with a proposition to buy liberty bonds at a big discount, and quoted the bond salesman as saying he had similar deals pending, involving $8,000,000 of bonds of a bankrupt banker, whose identity could not be disclosed.

The bank president related that Knapp appeared at the bank yesterday and was given the cash, which he first told detectives amounted to $320,000 and later placed the figure at $425,000. Of the fund, $150,000 was said to have been contributed by a Pittsburgh broker, and the remainder was represented by the sum obtained from the bank and smaller amounts from individuals.

Both men left the bank in a taxicab, Knapp taking the money with him, according to McCrady's report to police. At a nearby corner McCrady left the automobile with the understanding, he said, that Knapp was to get the bonds and return to the bank within a short time. When the specified time passed and the bond salesman failed to appear, McCrady said he did not become immediately alarmed, believing that Knapp had been unavoidably detained. After police were notified, some hours later, it was learned that Knapp's wife also was missing from their apartment.

Detectives said they were told Knapp had been given the money a week ago to make the deal but returned it later with the explanation that he could not close negotiations at that time. Police were seeking to trace the bonds and their ownership but some of the officers were skeptical whether any such securities existed.

The Brotherhood Savings & Trust Co., was organized in 1913 with representatives of various labor unions as directors. It was capitalized at $158,400 and had assets and liabilities of $728,619, of which $522,616 was in deposits, mostly those of working people.

Charges of conspiracy were filed against McCrady, Kelly, Nelson, Redman and Knapp by Bank Examiner Ferguson. Later in the day charges of conspiracy and larceny were filed against all of them by city authorities with additional charges of embezzlement and fraudulent misappropriation against each of the bank officials. McCrady was released on $125,000 bail but the others were unable to obtain bondsmen.

Not Enough Advertised Brands, Says Bank Head

John Poole, of Federal-American-National, Sees Fine Educational Value in Paid Publicity and Attributes Success Largely to It.

"Are there too many advertised brands?" This interesting and vitally important question prompted John Poole, president of the Federal-American National Bank, to prepare an answer for Printer's Ink, which was published, and which, by reason of the soundness of the arguments presented, is reprinted herewith.

Poole attributes much of the success of the institution of which he is president to thoughtful advertising and says in this connection: "The bank with which I am associated has been constantly advetised since its organization, and the development and success of the institution largely are due to the paid publicity we have used in making our service features known to the public."

By JOHN POOLE,
President, Federal-American National Bank.

Questions as to the propriety of increasing the number of advertised brands on the market are not new by any means. I have heard them repeated many times during the 26 years that I have been a banker and, most of that time, a student and practitioner of advertising. And now such questions are more persistently asked than ever, although they are adequately answered by the new and successfully advertised brands which appear on the market from month to month.

To me, all questions of the kind are inconsistent. In no other profession or business activity are so many thousands of clever, well-informed minds engaged as in advertising. Never in the history of the world has so much money been invested in the work of merchandising by means of the printed word. Never before has the economic power of paid publicity been so successfully demonstrated by the advertising salesman. But regardless of the fact that brands or trade-marks are a necessary means of identifying all kinds of manufactured products, we hear business men asking the question:

"Are there too many advertised brands?"

As a banker, I am deeply interested in all that lies back of that question and vitally concerned in its logical answer. In the first place, the bank with which I am associated has been constantly advertised since its organization, and the development and success of the institution are largely due to the paid publicity we have used in making our service features known to the public.

Banks Like Advertising.

Furthermore, we are interested in the advertising of our customers and our prospective borrowers. In this respect, bankers are giving more careful consideration than ever before to the advertising of their customers, for the reason that the right kind of advertising has a favorable influence on banking risks and the security of commercial loans. There is no doubt, all other factors being equal, that the prospective borrower who is a successful advertiser will receive more favorable consideration from the average bank than will a non-advertiser. And yet, when the item of advertising is missing from a statement, or when it is so small as to indicate that it is a mere receptacle for charitable and policy contributions, its omission or diminutive size is explained, usually, by something of this kind:

"We do not advertise because we do not think it would pay us to do so. You see, there are already too many advertised brands in our line."

Not infrequently the prospective borrower goes on to explain that he is able to sell his goods without advertising because of their superiority over the products of his competitors. Sometimes he dwells on the attractiveness of his brands or packages, and insists that the perfection of his selling method makes advertising unnecessary.

Obviously, any argument of this kind is based on a misconception of what advertising really is and what it should accomplish. The average manufacturer of 40 years ago knew little about advertising. He strove to keep ahead of competition by making better and more attractive goods, and he built up his business by inducing jobbers and retailers to feature his selling points. Then he relied, very largely, on the word-of-mouth praise of consumers to enlarge the general demand for his brands. Naturally he branded all of his merchandise so that those who liked it might readily identify it when repurchasing.

Speeds Up Selling.

Today the average successful manufacturer is using the economic power of advertising to speed up and to simplify the old and natural process of selling. Business moves so rapidly today that our jobbers and retailers haven't the time to push the sale of all of the goods they sell. Stocks have multiplied, items in demand have doubled and doubled again and in large measure consumer demand created by the manufacturer has proved to be a time-and-money saving substitute for selling effort on the part of jobbers and retailers.

This development, resulting not only in a tremendous increase of business and prosperity but also in a marvelous improvement of all kinds of manufactured products, has been brought about in a comparatively short time mainly by means of paid publicity. Without advertising I have reason to believe that our present state of industrial development would have been impossible. Advertising has accelerated all of the processes of business, and it has undoubtedly brought to us, in a single generation, all of the benefits and social advantages of 100 years of unassisted business evolution.

Advertising has been able to accomplish this not only because it is profitable to the advertiser but because it is readily accepted and followed by the public. Of course, profits and the firmer establishment of business are the primary motives of practically all advertising, but I think that the by-products of advertising furnish its vitality. Advertisements, today, are interesting, instructive and educational. The wonderful story of business is effectively told by both pictures and the written word. When we look over the newspapers and magazines, the poster panels and street car cards, the electric signs and other mediums, we marvel at the vision of those who conceive the ideas set forth and the courage of those who invest their money to publish and set forth the ideas. The entire proposition bears impressive testimony to the initiative and courage of the American business man, but viewing the subject from the broadest possible angle it is apparent that the public benefits from our great and growing volume of advertising reach far beyond the mere promotion and sale of merchandise.

Valuable as Educator.

It is because of the fine educational value of advertising that I am convinced that there are too few advertised brands today. Furthermore, it is my conviction that there never can be too many consistently advertised brands, for reasons which I shall state presently.

Thousands of business men are competing with each other in improving their merchandise, in offering better values, and they are employing advertising specialists and buying advertising space to inform the public of the advantages provided. Each one of these individuals is attempting to increase his profits and stabilize his business; but to accomplish this each is adding to the sum total of invaluable information which advertising furnishes to the public.

Our advertisers are telling millions and millions of people how to keep healthy, how to live long, how to enjoy life, where to go, what to do, what to see, what to wear, what to eat and drink, how to farm, how to raise flowers, how homes should be built, where to go to church, and thousands of other useful and beneficial things, and, in the main, they are telling the truth. All such things are good for people to know. They make for a healthy, prosperous and happy America.

One of the most effective series of advertisements we ever published appealed to the public to save for the better things of life. Of course, the primary object was to induce people to start savings accounts. To do that, we encouraged them to begin saving for a specific object.

Our books contain the names of hundreds of people who opened their first savings account in order to buy some advertised service, necessity or luxury. Perhaps some of them never bought the article the desire for which prompted them to save; they changed their minds and kept their money in the bank, and a large percentage of the others continued to save after they made their purchases.

The great majority of all of the savings accounts in the country were started in this way. We have more savings accounts in our banks than ever before in the history of American banking, and the great mass of the people never before have enjoyed so many useful things. Hence, to me the conclusion is obvious, that the advertising of many and still more brands is beneficial for the individual, the family, and every village, town and city, for the very simple reason that such advertising promotes industry and thrift.

The educational value of advertising can not be overestimated. The other day I overheard a remark to the effect that the large number of brands of tooth paste now being advertised is bewildering and makes intelligent selection difficult. The speaker went on to argue that much of the advertising was unnecessary, hence wasteful, and that it added to the burden of the consumer. But the remarks, I am sure, were the result of a shallow understanding of the real facts.

Many People Benefited.

Can there be too much advertising of different brands of tooth paste when only about one-third of the population uses it? Every advertisement of a tooth paste brand increases the number of people who brush their teeth. No one will question the advisability, from a health standpoint, of keeping teeth clean. Hence, there is a direct educational value, of great benefit to the people, in all tooth paste advertising, and there is a secondary value which should not be overlooked.

Every tooth paste advertisement, intending to emphasize the importance or oral hygiene, also creates more interest in the subject. This means that, due to the advertising, a great many more people than ever before are adopting measures to preserve their teeth. Every advertisement of the kind is a strong urge to people to visit the dentist, and I am satisfied that a great many elderly people who are now chewing their food with their own teeth should give advertising the credit.

The educational value of automobile advertising is beyond question. Surely but a small fraction of the cars now owned would have been sold had it not been for the large and continuous volume of automobile advertising. Hence we can credit advertising to a large extent for the fact that thousands of Americans, who could not afford to travel before, are now able to visit many of the cities of their country, to meet and talk with people of various sections, to broaden their minds, to educate themselves, and to become better and more loyal, as well as happier Americans.

The phonograph has taken beautiful music, artistically reproduced, into the homes of rich and poor, and I do not think that anything has done more to educate the average American to the appreciation of good music.

The radio also is doing its part in the educational field. Even a farmer boy in some remote section of the country may now listen to the voice of the President. The world's greatest musical artists sing and play for those in the poorest homes, as well as for the families in mansions. And, so far as its educational value goes, the radio has hardly begun its development.

It would be possible to spend many hours and cover innumerable pages in listing the educational advantages resulting both from advertising and from the use of advertised products. These products, in the main, are good; they add to the enjoyment of living. You may select a group of them and class them as luxuries; but I think our modern idea of luxuries considers them as such only for people who haven't the money to buy them and won't work to get them.

Advertising, in picturing and describing these things, creates a desire for them which, in turn, creates an ever-increasing demand. Every man or woman who works, works for an object. In fact, most of us are working for a multiplicity of objects. Advertising certainly increases the number of objects for which we are willing to work, and in creating demands it is unquestionably encouraging our people to work harder and more intelligently.

Intelligent Competition Results.

A great deal of intelligent competition naturally results in an increasing number of advertised brands and in a continuous improvement. Business men strive to improve their products and their advertising specialists find it necessary to sharpen their wits in order to convince the people that they should buy and use the product for their own good. People buy what they want, but unless they are intelligently guided they do not always want the things that are best for them to have. Therefore, in setting forth the uses, advantages and economic value of merchandise, the right kind of advertising creates the right kind of wants, and it gives a great variety of information in the simplest and most direct manner possible to enable people intelligently to supply their wants. The more brands that are advertised, the more information of the kind will be placed before the public. Hence, I say that there are not enough advertised brands.

And now as to my second conclusion—that there never can be too many consistently advertised brands. Those who question the propriety of more brands usually have much to say regarding saturated markets and the like, but I do not think that such a thing exists for most products. But let us suppose that it does, and that right now it is impossible to increase the total volume sold of a certain widely advertised list of competitive products.

Then let us suppose that a new product enters that field. If it is not as good as the existing products it will not be consistently advertised, for the reason that advertising will not sell it in profitable volume and the advertiser can not afford to advertise unprofitably. Consequently, it is obvious that the question of the number of brands will be answered by the operation of economic law. Advertising will not sell an unsalable product. Therefore, it is conclusive that so long as our manufacturers improve their products and bring out better and more economical products, there can not be too many advertised brands.

Activities in D. A. R. Circles

The State chairman of entertainment, Mrs. Jeter C. Pritchard, held a meeting of her committee Thursday to complete plans for the reception to be given by the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution in honor of the president general, Mrs. Alfred Brosseau, Wednesday, at 9 p. m. in the Washington club.

Other guests of honor will be the national officers and State regents from all parts of the United States. A section of the Army band will play. This is the first reception to be given the new president general. All Daughters of the American Revolution in the District and visiting D. A. R. are invited.

The Samuel Gorton chapter held its regular meeting Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Frederick F. Schaller. Mrs. Schaller was assisted by Miss Eva Jackson. Miss Jean R. Phillips, chapter regent, resigned, and Mrs. Schaller was elected regent. Miss Frances A. White was elected recording secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Mrs. Schaller. A program was given, including music, by Miss Carolyn Schaller at the piano.

The Judge Lynn chapter held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Charles C. Haig, Battery Park, Bethesda, Md., recently. The assisting hostesses were Miss Laura Silsby, Mrs. H. H. Eliott and Mrs. S. B. Hardwick. The regent, Mrs. Charles S. Schermerhorn, presided. Mrs. E. J. Vann, secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting. Those appointed on committees were: Mrs. Charles C. Haig, chairman of the State committee on the Children and Sons of the Republic; Mrs. Harry B. Gauss, State committee for the new Constitution hall; Mrs. Clarence Exley, jr., chapter historian on State historical committee; Miss Betty Larimore, State Americanization committee; Miss Gladys Sinclair, chairman of chapter membership; Mrs. J. M. Jester, chairman of chapter entertainment.

Miss Corita Hunter, the color bearer, is to have a new flag with a telescope staff. Mrs. E. A. Cobey, the chaplain, resigned, as her husband, Commander Cobey, an aid to Secretary Wilbur, has been ordered to the command of the new airplane, the Lexington, which is being built at Fore River, Mass. Miss Asha L. Wells was elected to take her place. The chapter voted its contribution for the reception, which is to be given by the State in honor of the new president general, Mrs. Alfred Brosseau. Mrs. Clarence Exley, jr., is the new president of the Lieut. John Shaw society of the Children of the American Revolution, which is the kindergarten of the Judge Lynn chapter. This C. A. society is composed mostly of the children of the members of the chapter. The twins of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Leith, jr., are new members. Mrs. Exley is planning a junior and senior division of the society. The chapter's committee on finance will hold a card party at the Hotel Roosevelt, the evening of November 9, for the benefit of patriotic work of the chapter. The regular funds for Arthur place, student loan, Americanization, immigrant manual, and Ellis Island will be sustained. Personal contributions were made in addition to two former sums which have been given toward the dormitory at Oxford college, Ohio, for the Caroline Scott memorial.

John Lindsay chapter held its first meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. H. W. Dowling. Mrs. Dowling and Mrs. Emma L. Chapin were hostesses. The regent, Mrs. H. W. Dowling, presided. The regent announced the death of Mrs. Samuel D. Barnes, one of the chapters members. The regent gave a report of her work on the chapter home, Constitution hall, finance and other committees. Mrs. James Mooney reported on the work of the Americanization committee. Mrs. Charles J. Hunt, of the patriotic education committee, also reported. Mrs. Emma L. Chapin, vice regent, told of her visit to Kenmore, Fredericksburg, Va., last spring and of the work accomplished by the Daughters of the American Revolution in their efforts to restore Kenmore, the home Betty Washington Lewis. All other committees reported progress in their work. A card party followed the business. Guests of the chapter were Miss Marion Stewart, Miss Eire Mooney, Miss Peggy Bartle and Miss Mary Beall.

Our Flag chapter held the first of a series of card parties Tuesday afternoon in the Hecht auditorium clubroom. Guests of honor were Mrs. James M. Willey, State regent of the District; Mrs. David Caldwell, State vice regent; Mrs. Frank T. Shuil, State treasurer; Mrs. Harry H. Thompson, State historian, and Miss Helen Harmon. These parties are to be held the second Tuesday of each month under the auspices of the ways and means committee of Our Flag chapter.

Descendants of '76 chapter, Mrs. Daisy K. Murphy; regent, met Tuesday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell, near Rixey, Va. The reports of officers and chairmen of committees were made. Mrs. Mae Tarring, the delegate, gave a report of the two State executive meetings she attended and also of the chapter house corporation, of which she is the chapter's representative. Miss Walton gave an account of the student loan fund committee meeting and solicited support of the chapter for this work. The State committee meeting on patriotic education was attended by Mrs. Topping, who gave an account of it. (Mrs. Holzberg, chairman of the ways and means committee, reported.

Deborah Knapp chapter met at the home of the vice regent, Mrs. Gertrude Moser, last week. Mrs. H. L. Parkinson and Mrs. A. B. Carter assisted. The regent, Mrs. George T. Smallwood, assisted by the chaplain, Mrs. Frank Fuller, conducted the opening exercises and extended greetings to the members, who included Mrs. James M. Willey, State regent.

The first fall meeting of the Dolly Madison chapter was held Tuesday evening at the home of the regent, Mrs. Arthur D. Call. The regent presided, and the meeting opened with prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. William K. Cooper, followed by reading of the American creed. Plans of the work for the chapter during the winter were discussed. Mrs. Norman Elliott was elected representative on the students' loan fund.

The meeting of the Emily Nelson chapter was held at the home of Mrs. Francis A. St. Clair Monday. The meeting was opened with prayer. Mrs. Sylvanus Johnson, of Honolulu, gave a talk on the life and customs of Hawaii and the work of the Daughters of the American Revolution there. She exhibited a box of Hawaiian products, photographs, and historical sketches which is similar to those the Daughters of the American Revolution in Hawaii are sending out in order to develop a truer knowledge of the islands among the residents of the United States.

STOCK PRICES CONTINUE DOWNWARD MOVEMENT

Five Motors Recede to New Lows; Pressure Spreads to Carriers.

OILS HOLD FAIRLY WELL

Special to The Washington Post.

New York Oct. 16.—The process of readjusting security prices to lower levels was continued in active trading on the stock market today. With only minor interruptions prices continued downward, the professional drive sparing only the railroad shares. Even some of these were not too gently treated. Fresh lows for the movement were reached in all parts of the market. Speculators for the decline dominated the situation, throwing large blocks of stock on the market when any of the favorites showed signs of rallying. New setbacks uncovered stop-loss orders, which added impetus to the reaction. Losses throughout the list ranged from 1 to 7 points.

Concentrating their early fire on the motor stocks, traders succeeded in carrying five separate issues down to new low records for the year. These were Hudson, Jordan, Mack Trucks, Paige-Detroit and Willys Overland preferred. General Motors dropped to 144¼, but regained some of the loss in the last hour, closing 3⅝ net lower.

United States Steel, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Foundation, Electric Refrigerating, Davison Chemical and other issues fell to new low levels for the movement. Woolworth, Warner Brothers, Burroughs and the baking stocks were weak. Oils were dull and only fractionally lower.

Pressure directed against the industrials and specialties finally spread to the carriers, especially some of the Southern roads, as a reflection of renewed selling in the cotton market. Atlantic Coast Line, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pere Marquette, Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Railway and others lost ground. One hundred shares of Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis were sold at 160, which was 20 points below the last previous sale.

It was apparent that a good deal of forced liquidation was going on. This was inevitable after the heavy decline of the last two weeks and many small traders who had been hanging on by a hair were forced to withdraw from the market today and throw in their holdings to increase the supply of stock offered for sale. The decline, however, was stubbornly resisted at times. Many short sellers of recent sessions were covering and taking short profits and some traders were picking up what they considered to be bargains.

Sterling exchange was easier but unchanged for cables. Italian advanced 3 points, Spanish reacted 7 points and Norwegian declined 4 points. Silver exchanges were heavy in tone.

BOND MARKET CLOSES AT DAY'S BEST LEVELS

French 7s Among Strongest in Foreign Group; Others Are Firm.

FRISCO ISSUES ADVANCE

New York, Oct. 16 (By the Associated Press).—The bond market today ignored the bearish influences which dominated trading in stocks and some of the principal commodities. Under the impetus of investment buying, prices gradually worked their way to higher ground, closing at the best levels of the week.

Much of the buying, which was well apportioned among the well-known foreign and domestic issues, was attributed to a diversion of funds frightened away from the stock market by the collapse. High grade bonds, which recently have eased off to more attractive levels, were quickly snapped up by both small and large investors.

French 7s were among the strongest of the foreign bonds today, advancing on a large turnover to the highest price of the year. Other European issues were firm.

The current rise in Frisco income 6s, based on the plan to established these bonds on an "interest" rather than a "flat" basis in stock exchange dealings after November 1, was carried a step further and a corresponding advance took place in the road's adjustment 6s. Moderate improvement was noted in Baltimore & Ohio, Atchison and other standard rail issues. Long Island 5s jumped nearly 2 points.

Bank Clearings Show Fractional Decline

Bank clearings at leading cities of the United States for the week ending October 14, a holiday week, aggregated $8,589,726,000, a loss of 21.5 per cent from last week, a full week, and 1.6 per cent from the like week of last year, which also was a holiday week. Outside of New York the total was $3,864,726,000, a decrease of 13.9 per cent from last week and 3.2 per cent from this week a year ago. New York showed a loss of two-tenths of 1 per cent from last year, according to Bradstreet's. Eighteen cities reported increases over last year, while 29 disclosed losses. Boston reported a rise of 4.4 per cent, San Francisco four-tenths of 1 per cent, Pittsburgh 10.6 per cent, Los Angeles 12.9 per cent, Kansas City three-tenths of 1 per cent, Cleveland 5.7 per cent and Cincinnati one-tenth of 1 per cent. Chicago displayed a drop of 12.2 per cent, Philadelphia 5.6 per cent, Detroit 2.2 per cent, St. Louis 8.9 per cent, Baltimore 8.2 per cent, Minneapolis 13.4 per cent, Atlanta 36 per cent and New Orleans 1.6 per cent.

Southern Asks Stock Issue of $10,000,000

The Southern Railway sought Interstate Commerce Commission permission yesterday for the sale of 100,000 shares of new common stock to its present stockholders, by which method $10,000,000 will be obtained for future investments in additions and betterments to the system. The company proposes to increase the size of the stock equity in its railroad as compared with bonded indebtedness, it was announced, and will follow up the present application with others to allow a total sale of 300,000 shares of new common stock.

Present stockholders of the Southern will be given the right to subscribe to one share of the new stock at par in proportion to each 18 shares of old stock which they now hold. They will be allowed to pay for the new stock in installments spread out over a year and the par value which they will pay is considered below the prevailing market value for the old stock.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Oct. 16 (By the Associated Press).—Buying based largely on Argentine reports of frost gave the wheat market today a decided upward trend. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1c to 1¾c net higher, with corn ¾c to ⅞c down, oats at a shade to ⅛@¼c advance and provisions varying from 20c decline to 5c gain.

Notwithstanding rather general opinion that the frosts in Argentina had as yet done but little actual damage, the wheat trade appeared uneasy because of accompanying reports of unseasonable cold weather over the South America wheat region. In this connection, too, notice was taken of an unofficial forecast of snows in Canada and the Dakotas the coming week and of rains across the corn belt. The forecast said also that the frosts in Argentina pointed to an adverse spring and to a short summer as well.

Strength of wheat values developed in the face of sharp breaks in the stock market and likewise in cotton. A noticeable feature was that houses with Eastern connections led the purchasing movement in wheat. Meanwhile, however, new export demand from North American wheat was relatively slow, and deliveries of wheat at interior points in the Canadian Northwest were the largest of the season, totaling about 4,500,000 bushels for 24 hours. The wheat crop in 32 countries of the northern hemisphere was estimated at 52,000,000 bushels less than last year, but above a five-year average.

Prospects of continued heavy receipts of corn had a bearish effect on the corn market. On the other hand, supplies of choice oats were inadequate.

Provisions reflected weakness of cotton values. Decrease of lard stocks here was also considered disappointing in some quarters, as being less than was looked for.

ALEXANDRIA MAN GIVEN CHARTER FOR BUS LINE

NO LOCAL PASSENGERS

Robert L. May, owner of the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Rapid Transit Co., has been granted a charter by the State corporation commission to operate a bus line between Washington and Fredericksburg, Va., with the stipulation that no passengers are to be carried from Alexandria to Fredericksburg or from Fredericksburg to Alexandria. The authorization, therefore, is for interstate traffic only, and does not permit the handling of local passengers.

The application of Mr. May, which has been under consideration by the corporation commission several weeks, was for the establishment of a line between Washington and Richmond, with the privilege of handling passenger traffic between all intermediate points. This application was opposed by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac railroad and others.

A charter was granted to him about a year ago for the operation of an interstate bus line between Washington and Richmond, but this has never been used, it being considered that the through bus traffic would not justify the outlay.

Mr. May now operates a bus line between Washington and Fort Humphreys, a distance of approximately 17 miles, and this line, it is understood, will be extended to Fredericksburg.

A petition of C. G. Paris, of Quantico, operating as the Safety bus line, for a charter to operate passenger buses between Quantico and Washington, was denied by the corporation commission. This application was opposed by Mr. May.

Mayor and Society Folk Replace Building Labor

Chicago, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). The mayor and socially elite of St. Charles have turned out to the unaccustomed task of making concrete because of a labor shortage.

Mayor Henry Rochik tonight shoveled gravel; Lester Norris, husband of the former Dellora Angell, niece and heiress of the late John W. Gates, likewise worked with sand and gravel while Sheriff Vierke trundled a wheelbarrow.

The were doing the foundation and basement work for a new hotel, and expect to work more nights to complete that task before freezing weather. A labor shortage resulted from a building boom.

CALLED TO DOORWAY, MAN, 66, FATALLY SHOT

Richmond Realtor's Assailant Flees After Firing Bullet in His Neck.

KIN FIND PISTOL NEARBY

Richmond, Va., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Walter R. Robins, 66, real estate dealer, who was shot through the neck at his home here this morning, died at a local hospital shortly after 2 o'clock. He failed to recover sufficiently to disclose the name or give a description of his assailant.

Robins was called to the door of his home shortly before 8 o'clock and after a brief conversation with an unknown white man was shot. Two shots were fired, but only one took effect.

Robins was taken to a hospital within a few blocks of his home in the fashionable West End residential section and physicians, after a superficial examination, declared that although the bullet had entered one side of the neck and lodged in the opposite side, it had not struck a vital spot. They at first expected the aged real estate operator to recover.

Robins had dressed and was ready for breakfast when the door bell rang and he answered it. Members of his family told the police afterward that he talked with his assailant for several minutes and then two shots rang out. They rushed to his assistance and found him crumpled on the floor near the door, with a .38 caliber pistol nearby. The man who had shot him had gotten away.

100 ON TRAIN BRUISED AS IT LEAVES THE RAILS

Dennison, Ohio, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Four mail clerks were slightly injured and more than 100 passengers slightly bruised when the westbound Pennsylvania flier "American," New-St. Louis train, jumped the track at Fisher near here at 5:30 a. m. today.

The mail car and seven sleepers were derailed when the tank car on the second locomotive of the double-header struck a defective rail. The mail car plunged down a 35-foot embankment, turning over several times. None of the sleepers went over the embankment.

The two locomotives and the observation car, the last car on the train, remained on the tracks.

Passengers on the sleepers were severely shaken up and in some instances thrown from their berths, but none of them were injured. They were transferred to another train which took them West.

Dougherty Raps Plan To Bar Statue Parking

Disapproval of the plan proposed by Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, to prohibit parking around the Columbus memorial, was expressed yesterday by Commissioner Proctor L. Dougherty.

Maj. Hesse had said he wanted the space directly in front of the Union Station plaza clear of vehicles so the first view of the city by visitors would be that of an orderly community. Dougherty said he believed that was not as important as permitting persons to park close to the station. The matter was referred to M. O. Eldridge, director of traffic.

When Struck by Autos Two Children Injured

Two children were injured by automobiles yesterday. Elizabeth Bieser, 6 years old, 1661 Park road northwest, received cuts on the head when she was knocked down by an automobile driven by Herman J. Bounds, 4909 Illinois avenue northwest, while crossing the street near her home. She was returning home from school.

David Kalmus, 10 years old, 1212 Sixth street northwest, was struck by an automobile driven by Daniel Crawford, 1619 Seventeenth street northwest, when he ran from behind a parked automobile on D street, near Eighth street northwest, according to police. He was treated at Emergency hospital for a fractured right leg.

TAX RELIEF.

The demand for immediate tax reduction is voiced by business men in all parts of the country in rapidly increasing numbers. As to the manner in which the reduction shall be made there is much difference of opinion. Possibly failure to agree upon a plan of reduction may prevent any reduction at all.

Corporations generally are asking for a reduction of the corporation tax from 13½ per cent to 10 per cent. Plausible arguments are advanced in favor of this reduction. It is suggested that the consumer pays this tax several times over, as each corporation handling a commodity from its raw state to its delivery to the consumer must exact a profit. But when it is borne in mind that the corporation tax is on profits only, and that the profits of manufacturers will not average more than 10 per cent on the price of an article, it is seen that the consumer is not heavily burdened by the corporation profits tax.

The heaviest tax falls upon individuals earning small incomes. These persons pay the bulk of the corporation profits tax besides their individual income tax. As the most numerous class on the tax roll they are the burden bearers; and the tax upon their incomes is a heavier load, proportionately, than that borne by any corporation, however large, because the individual income tax in the smaller brackets is a tax upon earnings, exacted from a man who is also paying his share of the corporation profits tax.

The reduction of the corporation tax would bring the accusation that Congress and the administration favor the rich as against the poor; but a reduction of individual incomes under $7,500 would relieve several million individuals and would be very popular. The cost of collecting small income taxes is proportionately much greater than the cost of collecting taxes from corporations. The government, by removing the tax from small incomes, could materially reduce the personnel of the income tax division.

If the Democrats in Congress are wise they will press for early tax reduction and insist that the reduction shall be effected by exempting incomes of $7,500 and under, leaving the corporation profits tax where it now stands.

AIR MAIL BY CONTRACT.

Announcement is made that the government proposes to relinquish operation of the transcontinental and the overnight New York to Chicago air mail lines to private enterprise. From the start there never has been any intention on the part of the government to operate these services permanently. Now that Congress has placed control of civil aviation in the hands of the Department of Commerce, the sooner the air mail is placed on a contract basis the better it will be for all.

No air mail line can be operated at a profit today on its income from postal revenue alone. The original operator of the Chicago to St. Paul and Minneapolis air mail contract route found this out to his sorrow some time ago. In August he gave notice of abandonment to the government, stating that the route had been operated at a large loss. The use of air mail is not yet extensive enough, especially on the feeder lines, to enable it to stand independently. The railway mail service would be a losing proposition, too, if an attempt were made to operate it upon any other than a contract basis. If, however, the air mail operator is prepared also to handle passengers and express, the probability is that the venture will pay its way. The government has no right to be involved in, and has no intention to enter into, the general transportation business. Since it can not make the air mail a paying proposition, it is economically sound to turn over the air mail to an air transportation company.

The Postoffice Department has on hand about 85 airplanes, 15 hangars, located at flying fields throughout the country, and several million dollars' worth of shop equipment. This plant, operated by a corporation actively exploiting the passenger and express advantages of air transport, could afford to carry the mail more cheaply than if it were confined to mail transport alone. The mail, in short, must be an adjunct of air transport and not the sole source of revenue.

WHY NOT COMBINE?

The producers of corn, cotton and silver are in a bad way. There is overproduction and underconsumption of these desirable commodities. Prices are falling in consequence.

The average annual production of corn in the United States is about 2,500,000,000 bushels. Only 24,000,000 bushels were exported during the year ending July 1. All but 4 per cent of the corn crop is usually consumed in this country. Instead of keeping the usual number of hogs to be fattened on corn, Western farmers last year sold too many hogs and then found themselves loaded up with too much corn. Ever since then they have asked the government to take over their surplus and guarantee them a profit on the whole crop.

The average production of cotton is around 14,000,000 bales. During the year ending July 1 exports were about 7,900,000 bales, a drop of about 1,000,000 bales. This year the crop is estimated at about 16,675,000 bales, and foreign demand is still shrinking.

The world production of silver is about 285,000,000 ounces, an increase of 40 per cent since 1920. The price of silver has gone down to about 55¾ cents an ounce. The restoration of the gold standard in several countries is believed to have hammered down the price of silver. Producers are afraid that China and India may abandon the silver standard. A few years ago Mr. Bryan asked Congress to raise the price of silver by law, just as the corn belt politicians are now asking Congress to raise the price of corn.

Word comes from the corn belt that another effort is to be made this winter to pass the McNary-Haugen bill. The western corn interests are trying to find a method of enlisting the hard-pressed cotton interests in a concerted attack upon Congress for the purpose of "stabilizing" corn and cotton prices by putting the Treasury under both commodities. The favorite plan is to have the government take over the surplus, hold up the price, market the stuff and pay the farmers the proceeds, leaving the farmers free to supply the domestic demand at full rates.

Why shouldn't all producers of all commodities that are overproduced, or for which there is a decreasing demand, combine in this plan to have the Treasury finance them? Are Americans losing their genius for organization? Surely the silver, cotton and corn producers have something in common, and no one interest has first call on the Treasury. Everybody should be treated alike. If the manufacturers of cotton breechclouts for the heathen have a surplus, as is now reported, why should they not join hands with the corn, silver and cotton producers in the massed attack on the Treasury? There is an oversupply of cheap books, also—a glut of overripe fiction, a purely domestic product. Shall American fiction producers be left out in the cold, merely because of a shrinkage of consumption?

Fall in! To the Treasury! March!

EDISON ON THE SOUL.

A few years ago Thomas A. Edison expressed the opinion that what is called the soul of man could not be distinguished from the brain, which, so far as he could ascertain, was as perishable as any other part. He could not bring himself to believe in the immortality of the soul. Now he gives out an interview in which he suggests that it is unreasonable to deny that the spiritual part of man is immortal.

This scientist is on the right track at last. He no longer disbelieves. When a scientist expresses disbelief in man's immortality of soul he casts doubt upon the quality of his scientific bent of mind. The little that is known, compared with what is unknown, is as a grain of sand compared with the ocean. The true scientist does not close his mind to what is unknown, but keeps it open and speculative. He is a searcher; if he does not hope that he will discover something he soon gives up the search. The great scientists have been men with imagination. Edison's imagination, which might be called unscientific because it was not knowledge, has always outstripped his knowledge, and has enabled him to bring treasure trove from the unknown.

"If a man die, shall he live again?" This question by Job proves that he was a true scientist. Every seeker after truth is consciously or unconsciously trying to find the answer to Job's question. The rich finds made by Edison and other delvers into nature's secrets are a spur to further research. It seems improbable that increased knowledge of material things will give man an inkling as to the secret of his soul; but it is up to him to learn everything that is knowable. It is well that a scientist of Mr. Edison's standing should frankly say, "I don't know, but I don't deny," instead of saying, "I don't believe."

THE LEGION AND THE COURT.

The American Legion by a vote of 618 to 298 has refused to reaffirm a resolution urging the United States to enter the world court. The resolution in question was virtually smuggled through the convention at Omaha last year. Now, when legionnaires are on their guard, they make short work of the propagandists who used the legion for political purposes.

Politics and religion are two jagged rocks upon which the American Legion could split, if it were not guided by pure patriotism and fraternalism. The Legion will never be dashed to pieces by politics or religion if it is vigilant against propaganda and bigotry.

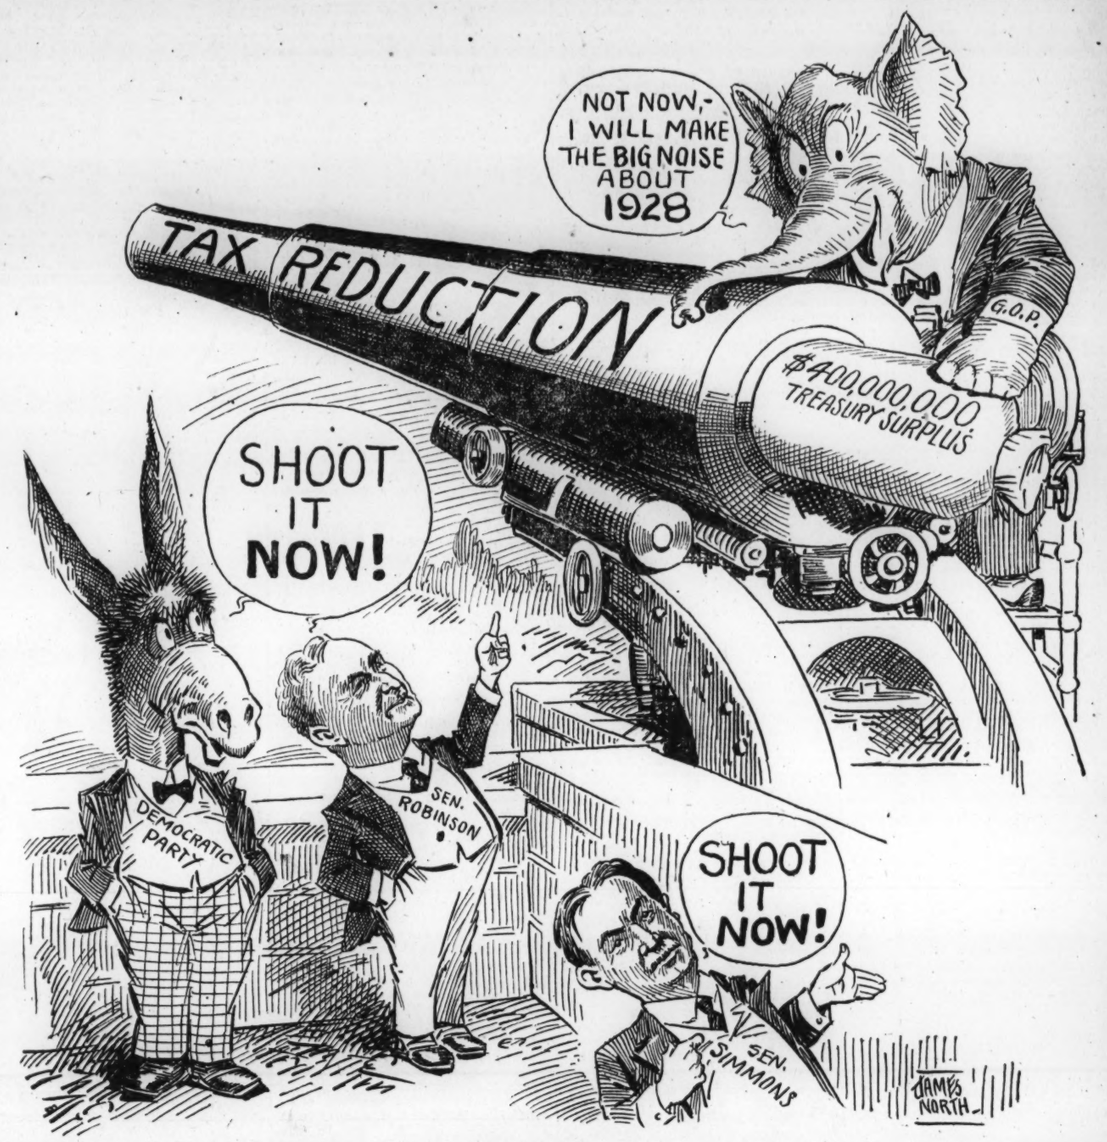

The interests which seek to embroil the United States in European politics are resourceful, persistent and unscrupulous. They do not hesitate to distort facts, deceive churches and fraternal bodies, and mislead the public. At one time a large proportion of the public was led into the belief that opposition to the world court was opposition to world peace. The political nature of the alleged court was carefully concealed, and its subordination to the league of nations was unblushingly denied. Many Americans honestly believed that the league's court was a true world tribunal in which nations could be brought to account and compelled to do justice. But the developments of the last few months have opened the eyes of most of these citizens, and they now see the court as it is, an adjunct of the political scheme whereby a few great powers in Europe are enabled to dominate other nations that have been drawn into the league.

The American Legion could not be what it is, a stalwart champion of Americanism, and at the same time advocate American intermeddling in European politics. Its course in erasing the world court resolution from its records is proof of its Americanism.

LORD OXFORD'S RESIGNATION.

Many of the persons who were privileged to hear the maiden speech of Herbert Asquith in the house of commons left the chamber with the impression that so finished an orator and one displaying such a thorough grasp of affairs was destined to high place not only in the councils of his own party but also in the government of the British nation. These optimistic prognostications were speedily fulfilled. Having first attained cabinet rank, Asquith ultimately achieved the ambition of every British statesman by becoming prime minister of his country, and that great position he held for a longer consecutive period than any of his predecessors for 100 years. It will be freely admitted, by friends and foes alike, that he shed luster on his lofty office by his intellectual attainments and by the perseverance and assiduity with which he pursued the ideals and policies of the liberal party, of which he was the head. During his administration many legislative reforms were brought about, and measures of a far-reaching character were enacted into law.

When the war broke out, Asquith was still prime minister, and under his auspices and general direction its initial stages were carried on; but, by the end of 1916, the feeling became general in Britain that more energetic leadership was required, and accordingly, in December of that year, Asquith was practically forced out to make room for Lloyd George and a coalition ministry. Such transferences of power and authority do not take place without leaving a sting, and some, at least, of the misfortunes and disasters that have since befallen the liberal party are, directly or indirectly, traceable to the bad feeling then engendered between these two outstanding liberal leaders.

Differences between them on various points of policy and practice broke out rather unpleasantly on some occasions during the last ten years, but the climax was brought about by the attitude of Lloyd George toward the general strike last May—an attitude which, in the opinion of Asquith, was contrary to the policy of the liberals, and for which, in his celebrated letter of June, he endeavored to read Lloyd George out of the liberal party. The dispute was, however, again patched up, and Lloyd George was, despite some opposition, reelected to leadership of the liberals in the house of commons, Asquith, who has for some time been Earl of Oxford and Asquith, retaining the leadership in the house of lords, as well as the general leadership of the party throughout the country. Ever since, however, there has been a divided allegiance, accentuated by the fact that the Lloyd George wing has a separate political war chest of its own, which is not available to the general body of the liberals. It is to these circumstances that Lord Asquith, who has decided to retire, alludes in his letter of "irrevocable" resignation to J. A. Spender, president of the National Liberal federation, in which he says he is convinced that unity "can not be effectively maintained under a system of rival authorities with separate organizations and separate funds."

It is a pity that a great historical party, of noble traditions and an extended range of accomplishments, should be thus rent in twain by the rivalry and squabbles of its own leaders. At the present moment liberalism in Britain is in evil case enough, and there are many who think that it will be unable to survive, in any organized form, the newest shock it has received. There are others, however, faithful to principle, though few in number, who believe that liberalism contains within itself the spirit that revivifies and recreates, who feel that the party of Cobden and Gladstone and Morley was not destined to die, and who will labor, in season and out of season, to restore it to its pristine pride of place. Whether their beliefs and feelings are justified, and whether their efforts will be successful, it remains for the events of the next few months to decide.

BIG FOREIGN TRADE.

Export trade for September, valued at more than $450,000,000, was the largest for any one month this year. The gain is attributed largely to increased exports of cotton and coal. If the increase in exports of cotton continues it should help to relieve the situation in the South. Total exports of commodities for the first nine months of this year were valued at more than $3,410,000,000, slightly below the same period for last year. However, it is expected that the difference will be made up during the remaining three months of this year. It is anticipated that the total commodity exports for the calendar year will reach a value of approximately $5,000,000,000. Last year they were valued at $4,909,000,000.

For the first nine months of this year imports of commodities were valued at more than $3,323,000,000, while the total imports of the year are expected to reach a value of more than $4,500,000,000.

The country's foreign commerce has now reached the peak season of the year, and there is no reason to doubt that the total of this year's foreign trade will exceed $9,500,000,000. This is a larger volume of trade with foreign countries than in any year prior to the world war, or since 1920.

If foreign trade is any criterion the United States is in the midst of a period of unusual prosperity.

WORLD TRUSTS.

Are the big industries of the world preparing to form international combines instead of competing among themselves? Will American "trusts" join vastly greater trusts and divide the world markets amicably, or will they stand apart and fight the international trusts now forming in Europe?

The steel rail manufacturers of Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium and Luxemburg are forming a combine. "Its purpose," says an expert in the London Times, "is regulation of prices, safeguarding of home markets and division on an agreed basis of foreign markets." This significant remark is added: "The U. S. A. regards this with 'benevolent neutrality.'"

The same writer states that the wooden screw manufacturers of Europe are united in a price convention, "to which it is expected that the U. S. A. and Japan will shortly adhere." The makers of incandescent mantles are also organizing on a world scale, under an arrangement "which assures the exchange of technical information and patents and safeguards each member in the possession of its home market."

International trusts are now forming for the control of enamel ware, bottles, copper, rolled wire, steel tubes and other manufactures. The agreements almost invariably provide that each nation's group shall be freed from outside competition in its home market. In the case of potash, French and German interests undertake to keep out of each other's home market and to divide the rest of the world equitably between them.

"The second quarter of the twentieth century," observes the Times' correspondent, "is evidently going to be characterized by intensified organization of industry over an ever-widening field." He asks whether it is wise for British industries to keep aloof from these world trusts. He thinks "the advantages of freer movement" by remaining aloof "may well be outweighed by the disadvantages of increased competitive power on the part of other nations."

Probably American industries will find that their interests are best conserved by "paddling their own canoe." They have a virtual monopoly of the American market, thanks to the protective tariff, and their system of mass production enables them to compete successfully in outside markets with foreign industries, either separate or combined. The international industrial combinations now forming in Europe seem to have little to offer to American industry, while the foreign interests may have much to gain by inducing Americans to cooperate and share business with them instead of competing against them.

It is easier to admire a quitter than to admire those who won't quit until they get their faces slapped.

VIEWS OF READERS ON LIVE TOPICS, LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Right of Student to Enter College Has Become the Main Question in Higher Education Centers, It Is Pointed Out By Reader.

The the Editor of the Post—Sir: The evidence given to the sub-committee of the House District committee last spring on public school conditions, and such evidence as was given a few days ago to the new subcommittee which is to make a survey of the District government, brought out two facts, or what is claimed to be facts, namely, that school property and its upkeep is costing too much, and that the District has not sufficient school facilities.

At this time I shall not comment on the cost of school property and its upkeep, but confine myself to the lack of school facilities.

The American people are completely sold on the advantage of public schools. There seems to be no complaint about providing needed public school facilities, the limit being only the financial ability to provide everything necessary.

Practically every American believes that all children should be given an opportunity to secure an education at the cost of the community; and the same persons are probably a unit against child labor. Child labor laws and the greater use of the public schools for community service and the teaching of adults in the public schools, etc., I shall consider beyond the scope of this letter.

The crux of the situation appears to me to be, Up to what age should the child be compelled to go to school? The obvious answer to me is, so much of schooling as the child can intelligently absorb and benefit by.

The question and answer are short—but the entire subject has "staggered the best minds." Yet the best minds are gradually solving the problem in the only possible way until the best minds shall be allowed to tell the whole truth about educating the child—that may be a century in the future.

At least the best minds have been allowed to tell the American nation that all children are not born equal without shocking the more conservative old-fashioned people.

A movement that reflects what will later take place in public school circles is now operating to clear up and clean up colleges and universities which are also overcrowded because of lack of facilities.

The time was when in the higher educational circles every parent was urged to send the child to college—no particular attention was given to the mental and temperamental qualifications of the child to benefit by a college education. The situation was quite similar to our thought prior to the world war on the problem of making good Americans out of any old kind of a foreign emigrant merely by virtue of his being in this country. So too, we were thinking—just put the child in college and, presto, out comes a scholar and a gentleman at the end of two, four or six years.

Now the higher educational institutions are beginning to demand proof that the "child" is competent to benefit by a higher education—the "child" must prove its right to enter the particular higher educational institution; and the right is a question of the "child's" intellectual ability to absorb and constructively to use the advantages of the education there to be acquired.

That is an almost revolutionary change of front, an almost right-about, a totally different viewpoint. Instead of the "child" demanding that the educational institution prove its ability to educate the child, the educational institution is now demanding that the "child" prove its fitness even to enter as a student.

Recently I read a list of 100 questions sent to 100 college students who had from two to four years of work in the most advanced institutions. It was a general test list for the average student. The answers, or lack of answers, to particular questions, compel the query "How come?" The questions were:

Who is Plato? Correct answer, 5; incorrect, 60; no answer, 15.

Who is Napoleon? All answered correctly.

Who is Bernard Shaw? Forty-two said American writer, fifteen said he is dead.

Who is H. G. Wells? Twenty said he was an American historian.

Who is Confucius? Correct answer, 4; incorrect, 6; no answer, 90.

Who is Bismarck? Eighteen had never heard of him, 1 said "sort of doughnut."

Which great men do you admire most—tell why? Some named Lincoln because he was so devoted to his country. Washington, because he saved America from England. Edison, not because he invented the electric light, but because he can "do without sleep." W. J. Bryan, because he is very patient, he ran three times for President.

Locate the Luxor. Fifty-four correct answers. One girl said it was a cosmetic.

What State has the largest population to the square mile? Seventy-five thought it was New York, others named Texas and Washington.

What is a mausoleum? Most students did not know the meaning of the word.

Where is the Eiffel tower? Fifty answered correctly, others said in Italy, in Versailles in Eiffel (Germany).

Name a book written by Thomas Carlyle. Most of the students had heard of him but could not name a book; 1 gave him as an American novelist, 7 called him "still alive." 1 had heard him lecture a year ago "at a woman's club."

Who is Oliver Cromwell? Sixty answered correctly, 37 incorrectly, of which number 34 called him an American. One said he was prohibitionist.

The highest grade among the 100 students in answering the 100 questions was made by a 22-year-old boy of Slavic descent, with 98. The second, a Russian, 97 per cent. The highest grade among the American natives was 89, the lowest 19 per cept.

It is reasonable to presume that our public schools would show about the same general results. But with this difference, that those who go to the colleges and universities have, to a degree, done so of their own free will—as free agents, so to speak, with some knowledge and conviction that an education is desirable, of course, leaving the motive of the individual out of the problem.

Probably one-half of the children at all ages attend public school under compulsion. Probably after graduation from what is now called the grammar school, the child goes further of its own volition, convinced that an education is desirable without any mixed or complicated motives urging him or her.

The thing to find out about the child of school age under the present law is whether or not the individual child should go any longer after it has learned how to read, write and to do the most elementary arithmetic. Many a good mechanic is spoiled by attempting to make a Greek scholar out of him—and the child loses valuable time in getting a start in the world.

Only the other day a man of more than ordinary ability and experience said that most of the adults in New York city had the intellect of a child of 12. He did not speak of education—he said intellect.

Public school authorities should take a hint from the higher educational institutions. Yes, every child should have an education, but how much, is the crux of the problem.

GROVER W. AYERS.

Serving Butter Substitute in Army and Navy Draws Criticism—Product Is Held to Lack Vitamines—Use Is Called Unfair to Farmers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your timely editorial of October 9 on "Pure Food," and the letter of Dr. Wiley on whole wheat bread are of great educative value.

I take the liberty of calling attention in the interest of public health to the value of pure milk and butter in lieu of the substitutes, notably oleomargarine. I was surprised in reading the daily menu of the inmates of St. Elizabeths. The government expends $3,000,000 per annum to feed the 4,000 unfortunates. The menu gives oleomargarine and no butter at any time.

Again, in one of the Washington journals in a Sunday issue containing an illustrated full-page article, the writer told of the extreme care the government took in providing wholesome food for the doughboys and sailors in the military and naval forces of the United States. The writer gave a full account of textbooks and special training of the men who inspected the food purchased for the army and navy; that these experts even inspected the dairy farms that produced the butter; but nowhere in the article could I find any inspection of the oleo factories, which, according to the army regulations, furnish one-fourth of a pound of oleo daily for each soldier. The article says: "Cream, milk, butter and cheese are tested under laboratory conditions. Mounted skeletons of dairy cows and confirmation charts are scrutinized carefully. Eventually the class goes on inspection visits to the great dairy plants in Chicago, and travels into southern Wisconsin, where it visits dairy farms, cheese factories, condensing plants and evaporated milk plants. When the dairy course is completed each officer has extensive and intensive knowledge of the great industry. He is qualified to go forth as a food expert to purchase dairy products."

May I suggest that in accordance with President Coolidge's desire of coordination the Department of Agriculture could readily furnish trained food experts who have passed years in studying food products or that any number of young men who come from the farms pass four years at the agricultural colleges of the nation in studying dairying in all its features, would be better qualified to select foods from dairy products than army officers who take up "sixteen specialized courses" in a few months.

Congress prescribes the classes of food furnished to the navy and marine corps. The President prescribes the classes of food for the army. In the navy and marine corps butter is prescribed, no substitutes permitted. In the army half the butter ration is oleo. Scientists have by experiment shown that vitamines play an important part in nutrition; they are essential to growth, health and life. Lack of vitamines in the diet is soon followed by serious consequences. Young animals will fail to grow normally and adults will rapidly decline in weight and develop certain characteristic affections known as deficiency diseases. Dr. Breese Jones, chemist, says, "Vitamine A is abundant in butter, cream, cheese and whole milk."

Dr. McCollum, of Johns Hopkins, after long and numerous experiments, has demonstrated that "oleomargarine is totally lacking in vitamines, that children fed on oleo suffer from rickets and other diseases." Oleo is manufactured from cocoanut oil, an imported article, cottonseed oil and some other substances lacking in vitamines. Butter is human food; its constituents can not be used to make soap or fretilizers which can be done with the oleo constituents. The dairy farmers of America work from 12 to 14 hours per day, 365 days in the year. Their product, the most healthful and life-giving, should receive the consideration of the government. Their taxes go to support the army.

Berri-berri is most frequently found among soldiers, sailors and travelers who live on artificial substitutes for real food.

Oleomargarine is a substitute for butter. The dairymen, however, want a systematic system of cooperation that will give them a fair chance in protecting their product from the unfair competition of a substitute which is lacking in the most important element for the growth and health of the users.

Washington, Oct. 11.

Venezuela Held, in Report, to Be Among Healthiest Lands in South America.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. Carlos J. Bello, chief physician in charge of epidemics in the Venezuelan public health service, has recently made a survey of his country, and in a report submitted to President Gomez states that during the past fifteen years there has been notable improvement in sanitary work, which has reacted on the general health conditions of the cities, towns and country places and in every private dwelling, so that Venezuela stands today one of the healthiest countries in all South America.

Systematic work performed by the Venezuelan public health service, under direction of Dr. Chacin Itriago, now engaged in the construction of two large crematories in Caracas, has entirely done away with yellow fever since 1917 and bubonic pests since 1920, and there has been no indication of a smallpox epidemic for years. This statement is corroborated by Dr. Hannonn, chief of the investigation commission of the Rockefeller Foundation, who visited Venezuela in 1924.

The Rockefeller Foundation, by contract with the Venezuelan government, is now supplying a sanitary engineer and an assistant, as well as an expert on malarial diseases, for the campaign against "paludismo." Vaccination is compulsory in Venezuela, and the health service supplies vaccine without cost. F. G. YANES.

Miss Ellis Bostrom

By BERTHA R. MARTIN.

WITH Spartan devotion to his labors as chief executive, President Coolidge refrained from accompanying Mrs. Coolidge to Mercersburg, Pa., last week for the pleasant and yet sad duty of attending the dedicatory exercises of the Memorial chapel at Mercersburg academy, the altar cross of which was given by the President and Mrs. Coolidge in memory of their son, Calvin Coolidge, jr., who died in Washington several years ago and who, with his brother, John Coolidge, had been a student at Mercersburg academy.

Two years ago Mrs. Coolidge dedicated the ground on which the chapel stands and in her academic robes she walked at the head of the impressive procession with the president of the academy at the time of the dedicatory exercises.

Mrs. Coolidge went to Mercersburg and returned from there by motor, accompanied by Col. Cheney, White House military aid, and Dr. Joel T. Boone, the President's physician, who is also a graduate of Mercersburg. After the exercises Mrs. Coolidge held an informal reception for the student body, giving each lad a gracious smile and a warm hand clasp which endeared her to their boyish hearts.

"ENTER the Queen" is the next cue on the stage of Washington society and all the Capital City is awaiting with ill concealed eagerness the arrival of H. R. H. Queen Marie of Roumania, whose ship is fast approaching American shores.

There is no doubt of the heartiness of the welcome in store for the queen, her children and the ladies and gentlemen of her entourage.

In the Roumanian legation on historic Sheridan circle all is in readiness for her majesty. The officials of the legation have achieved wonders of preparation in the comparatively short time since it was first known that the queen would occupy the legation during her Washington visits. Only the queen, her daughter, Princess Ileana, and the ladies of her train will be at the legation. The rest of the entourage will be quartered at the Wardman Park hotel, which also is abustle with preparations. The legation attaches are moving out to the Wardman Park hotel and Prince Nicholas, second son of Queen Marie, who is accompanying his mother to America, also will occupy a suite there.

It is said that the queen's suite at the legation has been entirely redecorated in her favorite colors and so have been the rooms to be occupied by Princess Ileana and her attendants. The charge d'affaires, Mr. Radu Djuvara, is very familiar with court procedure, as he was for many years the secretary to the queen mother, Carmen Sylva. As a pretty welcome to her majesty he has had a little garden made whose blossoms are those of the Roumanian flag.

A GROUP of notable women from all parts of the country will come to Washington on Tuesday and Wednesday to attend the quarterly sessions of the national board of management of the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the D. A. R., is already here for this purpose, and several dinners and receptions will be given to the visiting leaders.

THE younger set of Washington society is eager to know whether the rumor is true that Princess Ileana and Prince Nicholas will attend a dance at one of the country clubs during their stay. If so, it is apparent that it will be of a more or less impromptu nature and unofficial, although the guest list will be, of course, most carefully vised by legation and court officials.

The new Roumanian Minister, Mr. George Cretziano, arrived in Washington on Friday and immediately assumed his duties in connection with the reception of his sovereign. Despite the rumors to the contrary, the charge d'affaires has not resigned and will remain at his present post at least during his sovereign's visit to the United States.

When Prince Nicholas arrives at the Wardman Park hotel, he will be greeted by a friend of his boyhood days, young Mr. Constantin Danielopol, who makes his home here with his cousin, Mr. Dimitri dem Dimanesco, one of the legation attaches. Mr. Danielopol is three years younger than Prince Nicholas, who is 23, and he and his two brothers were playmates of the young prince, going regularly twice a week to play with him in the Cotroceni palace at Bucharest. Many are the fascinating memories that young Danielopol has stored away are of joint boyish exploits. Their daily visits to the young prince's playroom were preceded always by a call of courtesy on her majesty, who received them in her library or reception room, and invariably presented them with some memento.

"THE touch of nature which makes the whole world kin" probably will be felt by Queen Marie and Mrs. Coolidge when they meet, for like our first lady of the land, Queen Marie has lost her youngest child, Prince Mirca, who died of typhus during the world war. This loss, however, has only deepened her interest in humanity and her gallant soul refused to succumb to this crushing blow.

The old doctrine of "noblesse oblige" sustained her in this crisis, for she is of the blood royal of Europe. As the granddaughter of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, she was born to the purple. Her father was the Duke of Edinburgh, Queen Victoria's second son, and her mother was Grand Duchess Marie, only daughter of the Emperor Alexander II of Russia. Queen Marie was the second child in a family of five children. Her brother, Prince Alfred, died in 1899, and her sisters, Princess Victoria, wife of Grand Duke Cyril, of Russia; Princess Alexandra, wife of Prince Ernest Hohenlohe Langenburg, and Infanta Beatrice, wife of Alfonso, king of Spain, are all living.

THE debutantes are not at all discouraged by queens, princesses and lord bishops taking momentary control of the spotlight of social interest, for their days will not begin until next month and they will reign undisputed then until after the new year. In Washington, at least, the early part of the season is cheerfully given for debutantes, their parties, teas, dances and dinners, and the calendar revolves around them to a great extent. New names are being added to the list of 1926-1927 debutantes weekly and the group will be one of the most important and largest in recent years.

WASHINGTON is greatly interested also in another distinguished visitor of the month, the Rt. Hon. and Rt. Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington Ingram, Lord Bishop of London, who will pay a two days' visit on October 28 and 29. This will be the second visit of the lord bishop to Washington, as he was here in 1907 and for part of the time then was a guest of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. Bishop Ingram is one of the leading churchmen of the world. The principal social event in his honor will be the dinner by the Washington branch of the English Speaking union on October 28. During his stay here he will be the guest of the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and Mrs. Freeman, in the bishop's house within the Cathedral Close.

AN outstanding social and diplomatic event at the Sesquicentennial exposition in Philadelphia will be the celebration of Pan-American day there on Friday.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Frank B. Kellogg, and the chiefs of missions of Pan-America accredited to this post will be among the distinguished visitors to the exposition on Pan-American day. The party will go in a special train and there will be a luncheon in their honor at the Bellevue Stratford hotel. Simultaneously with the events in Philadelphia, 1,000 white pigeons, in token of Pan-American peace, will be liberated in 30 American cities.

From Porto Rico comes the news of the engagement of Miss Constance Towner, daughter of Governor and Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, to Mr. Leslie B. Young, of New York. Miss Towner is widely known and popular in Washington society, as her father was representative in Congress from Iowa for twelve years preceding his appointment as governor of Porto Rico. She attended the Friends school here, later going to Wellesley college, where she was graduated in 1924. Miss Towner also visited in Washington last spring, when she was extensively entertained. Mr. Young is a graduate of Cornell university and studied law in Washington. He is a member of the University club.

With the luxurious and tropical setting, the wedding promises to be exceptionally beautiful. It will be the most important social event of the season, as the Towners are very popular here, and their winter palace will furnish a lovely background for the event.

Representative and Mrs. Leonidas C. Dyer announces the coming marriage of their daughter, Miss Martha Dyer, to Dr. D. J. Collins, of Glen Falls, N. Y. The wedding will take place at their Washington residence at 7 o'clock Thursday morning, October 28. The bridal couple will leave in the afternoon for California and will sail November 6 for Shanghai, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, who has been passing several days in Chicago, will return to Washington this morning.

Have Theater Party.

The Secretary to the President and Mrs. Everett Sanders entertained at a theater party Friday evening for Mrs. H. A. R. Merry and a guest of Mrs. Merry.

The dinner dance which Mr. J. Forbes Amory will give Saturday in honor of his debutante sister, Miss Katherine Amory, will not be at the Gibson Island club, as originally planned. Instead, it will be given at the Elkridge Fox Hunt club, called the Kennels, near Baltimore. The guests, who will number about 40, will be mostly from Baltimore with a few from Washington.

MISS CONSTANCE TOWNER, daughter of the Governor of Porto Rico and Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, whose engagement to Mr. Leslie B. Young, of New York city, is being announced.

Miss Florence Keys, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Edward A. Keys, will be presented to society at a dinner dance at the Mayflower Christmas eve. Miss Keys was graduated from the Holton-Arms school last spring, and she now is a student at Smith college. After taking part in the holiday gayeties Miss Keys will resume her studies.

Mrs. Edward Clifford and her daughter, Miss Helen Clifford, returned to Washington last evening after attending the Princeton-Navy game at Princeton, where Mr. Lambert Clifford is a junior. They reached New York Friday on the President Harding after passing summer in Europe, and Col. Clifford met them on their arrival. Col. and Mrs. Clifford will present their daughter to Washington society at a tea Saturday, November 27.

Mrs. Theodore W. Richards and her daughter, Miss Dorothea Richards, temporarily are established at 1126 Sixteenth street, and after November 1 will open up their house at 1724 P street, where they will remain during the winter. Miss Richards, who is one of this season's debutantes, will be presented to society at a tea dance at Rausher's, Saturday afternoon, December 18. Miss Richards has as her guest Mrs. Stockton Reeves, wife of Ensign Reeves, U. S. N., who is en route to South Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Jones have returned to Washington and again have opened their home at 2201 Wyoming avenue for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have been away since July and motored through the New England States and Canada.

Mrs. Glover in New York.

Mrs. W. Irving Glover, wife of the assistant postmaster general, departed Friday for New York to attend the sessions of the International Philatelic exhibition. Mrs. Glover is a member of the ladies' reception committee for foreign guests. She will rejoin Mr. Glover and their family at the Wardman Park hotel the latter part of the week.

Mrs. Josiah A. Van Orsdel, wife of Justice Van Orsdel, of the Court of Appeals, has been appointed by Gov. Nellie Taylor Ross, of Wyoming, to be a member of a committee from Wyoming to take part in the reception to be given her majesty the Queen of Roumania, in New York. Judge and Mrs. Van Orsdel have returned from their home in Beatrice, Nebr., and have taken an apartment at the Roosevelt hotel for the winter.

Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

THE famous "Madame Etiquette" of Marie Antoinette's court would be a welcome addition to Washington society now, when all its members are eager to learn what to do and say and—most important of all—what to wear in case they are the chosen few summoned to be introduced to her majesty, Queen Marie of Roumania.

Great press associations are paying thousands of dollars in tolls to acquaint women of America with what this royal woman is wearing and what she is buying in Paris shops for her American tour. The color of her stockings is a matter of cable comment.

Femininity rather would read descriptions of the royal garments than anything else which might be printed, and it is a proper surmise that her visit will be followed by a flood of Queen Marie clothes fads.

First favorites with the queen are her Roumanian costumes of gay colors and picturesque cut. Then her wardrobe trunks appear to be filled, in part at least, with silver gray and rich golden brown dresses for day and white and gold for evening.

One foreign dispatch goes into detail over a robe of royal purple velvet embroidered in silver, which may be destined to make its Washington debut at the formal dinner to be given in her honor at the White House.

Miss Lane Received Prince.

Those who like to delve into historic happenings about the White House busily are recalling visits of other royal personages. Of course, the visits of the king and queen of the Belgians, and the prince of Wales and the crown prince and crown princess of Sweden are within recent memory. The visit of the king and queen of the Belgians and the impending one of the Roumanian queen mark the only time the reigning monarchs of European nations have visited us.

Except for the visits of the various members of the Bonaparte family in the days of Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, the first royal personage to be received officially at the executive mansion was Prince de Joinville, third son of Louis Phillipe, of France, a young man of 23 years. He came in the administration of William Henry Harrison, and later revisited in Buchanan's administration.

When Edward VII, father of the present king of England, was prince of Wales, he came to this country as his grandson has several times, as Baron Renfrew. This was in the administration of James Buchanan. The niece of the President, Miss Harriet Lane, received the royal guest and his suite with her uncle. Miss Lane also presided at the dinner given at the White House in honor of the prince, to which were invited only the members of the cabinet and their wives. On this occasion Miss Lane wore a white satin gown trimmed in festoons of lovely lace.

Hawaiian Queen Received.

Only two other queens have been received officially by a President and his wife at the executive mansion. The first was Queen Emma of Hawaii, widow of King Kamehameha IV, in 1866. She was on her way home from a trip around the world. She was received by President Andrew Jackson with all honors due to her royal degree. She was dressed in rich black silk with a broad mauve ribbon across her breast, a jet tiara and a white lace veil. She also wore diamonds.

The President had the doors of the White House thrown open and all who went in witnessed the exchange of courtesies.

When Queen Elizabeth of Belgium visited America with King Albert, all the details were most carefully worked out in keeping with the dignity and standing of the United States as a nation. One thing of which Americans can be justly proud, is that during the postwar days when the great of the world visited our shores we had come to the time in our history when the little details which make for dignity and poise were well considered.

Another notable entertainment at the White House for royalty took place in the Grant administration, when President and Mrs. Grant gave a dinner in honor of Prince Arthur of England, the third son of Queen Victoria. President and Mrs. Grant also received Duke Alexis, son of Czar Alexander II.

Infanta Visited U. S.

The Infanta Eulalie of Spain was received at the White House by President and Mrs. Grover Cleveland. The infanta wore a dress of white brocade, trimmed with lace and rosebuds and necklace; girdle and other ornaments of diamonds and pearls.

The visit incognito to this country of Prince Yorihito Komastl, grand nephew of the Mikado of Japan, was the occasion of an informal reception in his honor by President and Mrs. Cleveland.

The most important entertainment of the Roosevelt administration was the dinner given in honor of Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the Emperor of Germany.

A new idea had been brought forward, when it is remembered that after the dinner and call at the White House by the prince, President Roosevelt paid a return call at the embassy.

Will President and Mrs. Coolidge return the call of the Queen of Roumania. This, those who understand such procedure say, will be apt to happen. The queen will, of course, it is understood, call to pay her respects at the White House before the dinner to be given there in her honor. Thus it would appear that before the dinner President and Mrs. Coolidge and the queen will have met several times.

The service used for the royal dinner party will be of interest of itself. Without doubt, the horseshoe-shaped table originated by Theodore Roosevelt as a mean of getting more people into the state dining room and also of partially, at least, solving the seating problem of the guests, acording to precedent, will be used.

The President sits, under ordinary circumstances, at the head of this table at the curve of the horseshoe, and Mrs. Coolidge sits directly opposite to him. The ranking guests are placed at the right of President and Mrs. Coolidge and the next in rank at the left.

Purchased by Mrs. Cleveland.

As a rule, the place plates of the state dinner are the ones purchased. Mrs. Grover Cleveland's were of a soft rose surrounded with gold bands and with the insignia of the United States in the center. Much of the china purchased by the various mistresses of the White House contains the insignia of the United States worked out in gold. It is a fact worthy of note that President Lincoln, who was so well known for his simple tastes, should leave as an example of his discrimination some of the handsomest china in the White House, with handsome crest and gold stars on a field of blue.

Whether Dolly Madison selected the silver gilt surtout de table or whether James Monroe really selected it with her advice does not really matter so much as the fact that the executive mansion is in possession of this handsome ensemble of center piece vases, candle sticks and epergnes to make the state dinner table look royal.

The table centerpiece is of carved and gilded bronze, the decorations being garlands of vines with figures of Bacchus and Bacchantes. This is placed on pedestals on which are 16 figures holding crowns for candles. Sometimes this centerpiece is used flat on the table with a low silver dish for open flowers. There are three baskets each with three figures on a circular base, decorated with ivy leaves and with flowers, having six lights each. These and two ornate tripods and a number of flower vases are placed at intervals about the table.

Cashmere Is Popular.

The materials of winter are as variable as the winds of chance. They range from lustrous brocades, softest velvet, heavy woolens, chiffons and crepes to the revivals of the cashmere weaves or the kindred modern names and creations.

The old-fashioned cashmere, in all its softness and alluring pliability, is being used by some of the leading modistes of the world not only for daytime frocks but for wraps and, in a few cases, for evening gowns.

There was a day when the heroine of the dime novel, poor but proud, would purchase a few yards of soft creamy cashmere, a few yards meaning at least ten, by the way, as against our three or four, and make herself a gown for the ball, and thus excite the envy of the richly-garbed heiresses.

One of the gowns brought back in the trousseau of one of the brides is white cashmere heavily embroidered in a silver thread and with a deep fringed side tunic effect and a shawl-like fringed piece falling from the left shoulder to form a side train.

Fall Gown of Mrs. Coolidge.

Mrs. Coolidge has a white fall ensemble costume of flat crepe and broadcloth. The gown which has a long bloused bodice and a gathered short skirt is made of white crepe banded in the broadcloth. Her coat is one of the new full from the shoulder models with rather large armholes and open sleeves. The plain tailored collar is of the same material, and on it Mrs. Coolidge frequently pins a fresh white rose or a brilliantly contrasting red one. Mrs. Coolidge is taking rather kindly to the prevailing mode in small hats. She has several white ones with high full crowns and one made of bands of satin and velvet fitting close to the head with the halo effect in the back.

Lois Fuller, the well-known European dancer, who is said to be an intimate friend of Queen Marie, arrived in this country several weeks in advance of her majesty. This friend of the queen, who is a woman of high culture and personality, will introduce something new in the way of women's clothes. She wears a variety of uniforms of embroideries made on the smock effect and a unique but artistic headdress of embroideries. Usually she has two strands of pearls about her neck.

One of the new arrivals in the diplomatic corps is Senorita Padilla, daughter of the Spanish Ambassador and Senora Padilla. At one of the luncheon parties of last week Senora Padilla wore a gown of crepe romaine made in one-piece effect with a long bodice on which are shirred, with many rows of shirring, a full skirt. The sleeves are long and gathered in at the wrists by deep rows of shirring, forming a high-fitted cuff.

Gown of Flannel and Silk.

Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, who like Mrs. Coolidge is very fond of white costumes, wore at Hot Springs, Va., recently a sport costume of white flannel and silk. The skirt was of flannel with an overblouse of silk. The wrap was of white flannel with bat wing sleeves and deep full collar banded with white fur. Her hat was a high-crowned creased white felt one.

Miss Florence Keys, one of the debutantes of the season, is wearing a chic walking suit of blue silk and wool material, with a page boy coat and short skirt with pleats at the side. Her hat is of blue felt and velvet, with a high crown.

Miss Elizabeth Fries has a dance frock of silver lace and moire silk in a shade of turquoise blue. This is made in period effect and has tiny garlands of French flowers.

Miss Beatrice Aitchison, the debutante daughter of the Interstate Commerce Commissioner and Mrs. Clyde Aitchison, is wearing a black satin dress made on the new lines with sleeves with armholes coming to the normal waistline and fitted cuff effect holding them in at the wrists. The skirt is short and gathered all around. With this Miss Aitchison wears a high-crowned black hat with a rolled brim.

Miss Nancy Hamilton has a white lace dress made in the period style and combined with white silk.

Mrs. Robert Nelson Stanfield, who has returned to Washington from Oregon and from a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Henry Dunn, in North Carolina, has a costume composed of a dark blue satin dress with a wool coat of the same shade and a high-crowned blue hat.

Mrs. Amos Fries is wearing an afternoon gown of blue chiffon combined with blue lace. Her hat is a smart blue velvet one with touches of blue.

Mrs. Luther Gregory had on at one of the informal recent teas a gown of silver-gray chiffon, with embroidered girdle effect, and with the side flounces also embroidered. Her hat was a wide-brimmed gray felt one.

Mrs. Frank Hight is wearing a costume of black satin faced in silver gray, with a chic black satin high-crown hat with a rolled brim, also outlined in gray.

Miss Barbara Hight, who is to be one of the debutantes of the season, has a gown of red satin crepe, made in two-piece effect. Her hat is of the same shade. With this she wears a smart top coat also of red trimmed with fur.

Will Make Own Wraps.

Many a home dressmaker will be led to try her skill on making her winter wraps herself when she sees the simplicity of those being shown by the smart shops. They look like a few lengths of broadcloth sewed together and allowed to blouse as to waist and sleeves, and with a slight drawing in of the skirt. Alas, it is on such shoals that the amateur bark is wrecked. If these coats are not artistically made they are hopeless and not even attractive fur can redeem them.

This type of coat will be popular. Most of the women who give time and thought to their clothes, and can afford more than one coat, provide themselves with the exact opposite, but quite as smart type of coat, with slender lines and neatly fitted sleeves and armholes. In fact, many of the women who can not afford two coats prefer the latter style because of its air of conservativeness and because they are not as apt to weary of it as of a more "blousy type."

The perfectly plain tailored suit is not discarded for the other variations of the tailored costume at all, as those who make a specialty of "man tailoring" of women clothes will testify. There are some women who insist, with good effect, on always having on hand one plain tailored costume, with hat and shoes and other accessories to match. These are the women all turn to notice as they shop, or are found among the well-dressed traveling public.

Gowns Bought Here.

Mrs. James M. Thomson has in her wardrobe, for the winter festivities in her home in New Orleans, many evening gowns which she got here and in New York on her recent visit. Mrs. Thomson has a gown of silver lame embroidered in pearls and sequins and made with a Vee neckline. She has a coat of black broadcloth made with cut to the waist armholes and full sleeve, very bloused back, and close fitting skirt. The coat has a large scarf collar and cuffs of black pointed fox.

Mrs. Thomson wears with this a suit of black wool crepe made with a plain skirt on a sleeveless bodice formed of three different shades of rose grosgrained ribbon, and a coat-like jumper of the material, fastened low in the front to display the bodice.

Her hat is high crowned and of rose velour. Another dress for the fall is of two-faced satin crepe, made on plain lines, but with the new neckline, something like we have known as a cowl neckline, only with the full part falling in the front. The sleeves are placed in large armholes and are tight at the wrists. Another gown of Mrs. Thomson's is of silver gray velveteen, made on sport lines with tucks running up and down and a wide velvet sport girdle fastened with a buckle in front.

Miss Alice Cutts, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Richard Cutts, who will make her debut December 29, has an ensemble costume of Mediterrean blue, with the coat of velvet and the collar and cuffs of the new fur shading from beige to cream. The dress is of kasha of the same shade as the coat and has fold-like tiers of the velvet from the low hipline. With this she wears a hat of the same shade of blue.

Black Crepe Gown.

Mrs. Duncan Cameron, formerly Mrs. Elsie Quimby, who is spending the winter in Cannes, wore at an afternoon entertainment recently a gown of black crepe satin made with double-tiered skirt banded with the reverse of the material. With this she wore a black taffeta hat with a crown high in the back sloping toward the front.

Mrs. William M. Doellar, who recently returned from France, has a gown of black broadcloth made on straight lines trimmed with a band of velvet three inches deep at the bottom of the skirt. This has a high collar of velvet tied at one side. Her hat is a high-crowned one of black felt.

Mrs. Helen Gwynn, a Washingtonian who has been living in Paris several years, was the center of a group of Americans at tea recently, attired in a sports costume of taupe wool crepe with a skirt of solid color and a blouse of the same tone hemstitched in squares in black. With this she wore a black patent leather belt and taupe felt hat.

Red seems to be the favorite fall color of the younger set and at teas and luncheons this is the dominant color note.

Miss Francesca McKenny has a red costume in a deep wine tone of wool crepe, made in two-piece effect. With this she wears a high crowned red hat.

Mrs. George Pulver, formerly Miss Grace Waggaman, brought back from Paris a costume of wool crepe in a shade of red bordering on orange and of one of the new soft serge like materials. This is made with long sleeves and has a scarf collar tied at the side.

Also Wears Red.

Mrs. Marshall Orme Exnicios also is wearing red in a deep dark tone, made in two pieces with a kerchief effect neckline with the corners tied at the side. This effect is repeated at the wrists of the long sleeves. With this she wears a large black felt hat.

Mme. Vom Rath, formerly Miss Cecilia May, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Harry Black, in New York, before coming to Washington, is wearing a tailored costume of wool twill with bindings of gray at the neckline and the cuffs. The coat is straight with collar and cuffs of black lynx. She wears a small navy blue hat.

Miss Helen Gary has an evening gown of white crepe made on clinging lines and embroidered in sequins in motiff design.

Miss Suzette Dewey recently wore a gown of black crepe with a straight panel-like overtier of heavy embroidery in red and black and silver beads. This embroidery also marks the neckline in a band about an inch and a half wide.

Mrs. George Mesta recently wore in Paris a costume of gray. Her wool coat was made on slender lines with a gray fox collar. Her gown was a simple one of gray crepe de chine and she wore a high-crowned small gray hat.

Another woman known to Washington who was seen at tea in the French capital recently was the Princess of Thurm and Taxis, who passed several months here last winter. She wore a costume of blue crepe de chine with inverted sides pleated about 2 inches deep in the skirt. Her coat was of navy blue twill with fur collar and cuffs and she wore a high-crowned black felt hat.

Baroness de Cartier, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, who is spending some time in Paris before returning to this country, appeared recently at a luncheon in a gown of figured silk navy blue on a white background, made on simple lines with a wide sash knotted in the front. With this she wore a wide-brimmed navy blue hat.

Cantilever Shoe

Lacing draws the flexible all-leather arch of the shoe snugly against the undercurve of the foot. This gives just the support needed by tired or weakened muscles, without appliances of any kind. The natural exercise allowed the foot muscles by the flexible Cantilever arch makes and keeps the foot strong and healthy.

The design follows that of the foot. It allows the toes to reach and stretch freely, and avoids pressure on sensitive nerves and blood vessels.

A few minutes with the shoe on your foot will prove both the ease and pleasing appearance of the Cantilever. Dressy strap pumps, as well

The New Autumn Shades

Dressy Wraps, $79.50 to $395.00
Sports Coats, $32.50 to $189.50

The Blouse
Luxuriously loose and wrappy, yet slender and straight—that is what the new Blouse does to the Autumn and Winter Coat.

The Fur Yoke
Fur was not content this season with its usual straight, even ways; so a fur collar darts down the back in a yoke, quite fascinating and different.

Kathryn Sellers, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Dr. Louise Stanley, Mrs. Bessie Bruggeman, Maj. Julia Stimson and Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle.

Miss L. G. Bew, who has been visiting friends in England, has returned to the Decatur. Mrs. Bew has returned from Canada, where she has been passing the summer.

Commander and Mrs. Samuel J. Zeigler, jr., who have recently returned from a motor trip in Canada, will be among the navy visitors Saturday at the Princeton-Navy football game. They will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight J. Harris, of Chestnut Hill. Commander Zeigler is on duty in the bureau of aeronautics.

Return From West.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Woodland Gates have returned from an extended trip to the Pacific coast, which included Canada.

Mrs. W. C. Harllee, wife of Col. Harllee, has returned from Port-au-Prince, Haiti, to put her children in school in Washington for the winter. Miss Ella F. Harllee, young daughter of Mrs. Harllee, entertained at a party Wednesday in celebration of her tenth birthday.

A dinner is being arranged by the Washington branch of the English Speaking Union for the bishop of London on Thursday. Gen. Henry T. Allen will preside. Bishop and Mrs. Freeman will also be present.

Mrs. V. Marshall Clopton and her daughter, Mrs. Lebrand Dobson Webb, have returned from a motor trip through the Shenandoah valley. Mrs. Clopton was accompanied by Mr. Chalmers Gray and his mother, Mrs. George Fuller, of Los Angeles, and San Diego, who are staying in the Wardman Park hotel while visiting in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Rolfe E. Bolling have with them in the Wardman Park hotel, the latter's niece, Miss Anne Dabney Stuart, of Abingdon, Va. Miss Stuart will depart Wednesday for Westminster, Md., where she will be maid of honor at the wedding of Miss Mabel Weant to Mr. Walter Dana Rudy, October 27. She will pass several weeks in Washington before going to New York for the winter.

Mr. Thomas Dodds is passing some time at the Wardman Park hotel, having come from his home in Dundee, Scotland. He will depart shortly for Cincinnati, where he expects to make his future home.

Relief Branch Meets.

A meeting of the engineer branch of the Army Relief society was held Friday morning in the home of Mrs. Edgar Jadwin, 2540 Massachusetts avenue, and November 16 was decided on as the date for the annual dance for the benefit of the Army Relief Society, which will be held at the Washington barracks.

Mme. S. Zepeda and her two daughters, Marie and Mercedes, have returned from New York city to the Wardman Park hotel, where they passed last winter. M. Zepeda is in Europe for several months.

Lieut. and Mrs. Earle Hill Kincaid, whose wedding took place October 9 in the home of the bride at Ossining-on-Hudson, will arrive in Washington November 10 and will take an apartment for the winter in the Roosevelt hotel. Mrs. Kincaid formerly was Miss Virginia Dorothea Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Morris, of New York city.

Lieut. Kincaid is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ashby Kincaid, of Covington, Va., and the grandson of Henry Gilbert and Thomas Kincaid, officers on Stonewall Jackson's staff. His forbears, since prerevolutionary days, have served this country with distinction in both the army and navy, including the groom's service in the late war in Turkish waters. Since the close of the world war, Lieut. Kincaid has done notable work for the Navy Department, his method of plotting the course of storms by radio having been employed to avoid hurri-

Paris Couple Here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. G. Doty, of Paris, France, are passing a few days at the Willard, having come to Washington from New York, where they recently landed.

Miss Margaret Barker Foster's engagement to Mr. John Turner Dawson, of Virginia, has been announced by her mother, Mrs. May Barker Hannon. The wedding will take place in the early spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Gurry, of New York, are at the Willard for a short stay.

Mrs. L. H. Levy Back.

Mrs. L. H. Levy has returned to Washington after passing ten days in Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Wolf have returned to the city after a three weeks' stay in Atlantic City.

The Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church at Hyattsville, Md., was the scene of a marriage yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Miss Myrtle E. Herberson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Herberson, of Hyattsville, became the bride of Mr. James Gordon Fitzgerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fitzgerald, of Baltimore. Palms, gladioli, dahlias and chrysanthemums formed the setting for the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Herman McKay, pastor of the church.

The bride, who was escorted by her sister, was gowned in pale pink georgette made with a basque waist and full skirt and heavily embroidered in pearls. She had a head dress of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Gladys M. Herberson, who was maid of honor for her sister, was gowned in satin combined with beige lace, and she had a large picture hat and slippers to match.

George Bonesteel, of New York, was best man, and the ushers were Alfred R. Kier and Raymond Stevens, cousin of the bride, both of Hyattsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald later left on their wedding trip, sailing last evening from Baltimore for Norfolk, New York and Boston to pass two weeks. Mrs. Fitzgerald departed wearing a topcoat of checked material in two shades of tan, a tan crepe dress, a red velvet tam o' shanter and alligator slippers. They will make their home in Hyattsville.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, parents of the bridegroom; Mrs. Solan L. Rhode, Reading, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stevens, Miss Elaine Stevens and Mrs. John Clarke, all of Washington.

Arnold—Bailey Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Eunice Bailey, daughter of Mrs. Venia A. Bailey, to Mr. Parke Alfred Arnold was solemnized Thursday evening at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Belt. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles E. Fultz, superintendent of the Pennsylvania district of the United Brethren church, in the presence of some 50 guests, friends, and relatives of the bride and bridegroom.

Mrs. Belt played the wedding march and Capt. Edward J. Hill sang with Mrs. Belt as accompanist.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. William H. Bailey. She wore a sleeveless white taffeta gown, made with a bouffant skirt and a panel of silk lace and ribbons. Her veil of tulle was held in place with a pearl band and clusters of orange blossoms. Slippers of twinkle cloth and matching hose completed her costume and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Kathryn L. Everett, who was maid of honor, wore a bouffant frock of pink taffeta, a sleeveless model, trimmed with pink velvet ribbon, and had silver slippers and hose. Her bouquet was of Columbia roses.

After October 30, Mr. Arnold and his bride will be at home at 1414 Irving street. During their honeymoon they will visit Philadelphia, Atlantic City, New York and other places in the North.

MISS MARTHA DYER,
daughter of Representative and Mrs. Leonidas C. Dyer, of St. Louis, whose marriage to Dr. D. J. Collins will take place Thursday, October 28.

Wise—Moulden Nuptials.

In the presence of a large assemblage, Miss Agnes M. Wise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Wise, and Mr. Charles W. Moulden, also of the Forest Glen neighborhood, were married in St. John's Catholic church, Forest Glen, Wednesday morning by the pastor, the Rev. Charles O. Rosensteel. The church was decorated with autumn leaves, cut flowers and potted plants.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of valencia blue crepe, with hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and ferns. Her maid of honor and attendant was her sister, Miss Mathilda Wise, who wore a dress of forest green crepe, trimmed in velvet, with hat to match, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Edward Wise, brother of the bride, was best man. The music was by Mrs. Barbee, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Helen Bready.

A wedding breakfat was served at the home of the bride's parents, following which a reception was held. Later Mr. and Mrs. Moulden departed for their honeymoon trip. They will make their home at Asheville, N. C.

Kincaid—Morris Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Virginia Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Morris, to Lieut. Earle Hill Kincaid, U. S. N., was solemnized on October 9 on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents, The Trees, Ossining on the Hudson, N. Y. The bride was attended by her three sisters and several classmates from Sweet Briar college, Virginia, while the ushers were the Naval Academy classmates of the bridegroom.

After the ceremony, which united two old Virginia families, Lieut. and Mrs. Kincaid sailed for a European honeymoon and on their return in the early part of December they will take up their residence at the Roosevelt hotel here.

The wedding of Miss Beulah Catherine Christy, of Olney, Ill., to Mr. John B. O'Connell, took place in St. Patrick's parish house, October 5. The Rev. George T. McConachie, of Red Dog, S. Dak., performed the ceremony. Mr. Harry T. Whelan was best man and Miss Helen Crone was maid of honor.

After the ceremony Miss Clara M. Epperson was hostess at a wedding breakfast, the guests being, the Rev. George T. McConachie, and his sister, Mrs. Spurgeon, of Red Dog; Miss Helen Crone, Miss Rose Smith, Dr. E. W. Pritchard, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whelan.

Following the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. O'Connell departed for a wedding trip through Canada. Mr. O'Connell is a law partner of the firm of Whelan and O'Connell, of Washington.

Miss Moore Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Turner Moore, of Willowpool, Warnersville, Pa., announce the engagement of their daughter, Martha Ellen, to Mr. James A. Reedy, of Reading, Pa. Miss Moore is a graduate of Dana Hall and is an accomplished violinist. Mr. Reedy is connected with the Colonial Trust Co., of Reading, and is a graduate of the Reading High school and the University of Pennsylvania. The bride-elect's father is president of the Colonial Trust Co. and senior member of the firm of Moore & Moore, Inc. Mrs. Moore was a resident of this city, having been born and passed her childhood here. This will be the second marriage in the family in a short time, Mr. and Mrs. Moore's eldest daughter, Miss Marguerite Leybolt Moore, married Mr. Charles Sheridan, of Philadelphia, in January.

Mrs. Volney O. Clark, with her two children, will depart on Saturday, October 23, to join her husband, Lieut. Volney O. Clark, U. S. N., in the Orient. Mrs. Clark will make several short visits in the West before sailing from San Francisco November 17.

Mrs. Benton Halstead, who has been passing the past year in Hawaii, with her son, Col. Laurence Holstead, has returned and opened her home on Biltmore street.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarrett Greene, of Mims, Fla., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Leota Deloris Greene, to Mr. Harmon J. Swink, of McLean, Va., the wedding to take place on December 16.

Dance for Halloween.

A Halloween dance of unusual attractiveness as part of the fall reception will be given by the local camp of Sons of Confederate Veterans at the Hotel Washington October 27, Judge John A. Chumbley, judge advocate general, announces. Maj. J. F. Johnson, recently elected camp commander, and Mrs. Johnson will head the receiving line for the camp, and several of the general organization officers from out of town will attend, including Adjutant-in-Chief Walter L. Hopkins and his wife, of Richmond.

With more than its usual interest the camp has started its season with an informal literary and historical evening at the Confederate home every other month, beginning November 9, followed by dancing.

Mrs. G. Carville Bowen was the guest during the past week of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson Richardson. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen have recently returned from their wedding trip. They motored to California, visiting Yellowstone park, and in San Diego, Calif., they were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. George W. Brace, formerly of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen are at home in Hyattsville, Md.

Miss Grace Sweeney, of 1233 Rock Creek Ford road, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sweeney, Woodyard, Prince Georges county, Md.

A Christmas sale and style show will be held at the Willard hotel for three days, November 8, 9 and 10, from 10 o'clock to 5 o'clock, under the auspices of the Epiphany church committee on the board of the Episcopal Home for Children, Mrs. A. B. Duvall, chairman.

Dresses, lingerie, linens, jewelry, lamp shades, children's dresses, toys, books, furniture and candy will be for sale by exhibitors of Washington and from out of town.

The proceeds will be added to the building fund for the new home to be located near Chevy Chase circle on a nine-acre tract recently donated for that purpose by a lover of little children.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Moskey have had as guests in their home in Chevy Chase during the past week Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Hackman, of Seattle, Wash. Mr. and Mrs. Hackman stopped at Washington en route to New York, whence they will go abroad for a brief vacation.

Reception for Mrs. Brosseau.

One of the most brilliant events of the fall season will be a reception given by the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution on Wednesday at the Washington club from 9 to 11 o'clock in honor of their new president general, N. S. D. A. R., Mrs. Alfred Brosseau. It is expected that practically all of the national officers as well as the State regents from all over the United States will be present. A section of the Army band will furnish an elaborate program during the evening. This is the first reception to be given in

Washington society was well represented at the wedding at Katonah, N. Y., Tuesday of Miss Dorothy Iselin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Iselin, and Guy Paschal, son of Mrs. Samuel Scoville Paschal, formerly of Washington.

The ceremony was performed at Bedford House, the ancestral home of the bride's parents, and was followed by a large reception. Among the bride's attendants was Miss Louise Ireland, daughter of Mrs. Davis Ireland, who passed last winter in New York studying at Columbia university.

The bride, a direct descendant of John Jay, the first Chief Justice of the United States, who at one time was governor of New York State, represents the sixth successive generation to live in Bedford House. The bridegroom, who was graduated from the University of Virginia and from the Virginia Law school, is a grandson of the late Judge George Paschal, of Washington, and now is practicing law in New York. The bride is the granddaughter of the late William Jay, once the head of the law firm of Jay & Candler, of New York. After her education in New York the bride went to Paris to study at the Sorbonne, where she received various honors.

Dixie Chapter Card Party.

Dixie chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, announces a benefit card party in aid of the relief and educational work of the chapter, to be given Tuesday, October 26, at 8 o'clock at the Burlington hotel. Mrs. Guillaume Berson Hay, Mrs. George B. King, Mrs. John S. Tomlinson and Mrs. William H. Wooding are in charge.

The following persons have taken tables: Commodore Conrad C. Smith, Maj. and Mrs. Wallace Streeter, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Dr. and Mrs. J. Thomas Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lansdon, Mrs. Guillaume Berson Hay, Mrs. L. N. Waters, Mrs. P. S. Wilmarth, Mrs. Lavinia Farnsworth, Mrs. John F. Gaynor, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Withers, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe E. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond P. Fries, Miss Josephine Daily, Mr. and Mrs. Peter H. Rogaly, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Powell, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge Kenyon, Mrs. Sallie H. Van Antwerp, Miss Virginia Johnston, Mrs. Samuel M. Meek, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Tomlinson, Mrs. Alfred L. Talbert, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Sheetz, Mrs. Helen Watkins, Miss Cecil Stegall, Miss Mabel Uzzell, Miss Laura V. Ruff, Mrs. Cora B. Settle, Mrs. William R. Cole, Mrs. George B. King, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Mitchell, Mrs. Paul Joachim, Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Eliot, Mrs. Goodwin D. Ellsworth, Miss Laura Virginia Smuggs, Miss Margaret Daniel, Miss Lena Daniel, Miss Evelyn Daniel, Miss Mazie McFarland, Mr. and Mrs. George K. Denmark, Mrs. Robert Lee Ettenger, Mrs. David Skinner, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Rose, Maj. and Mrs. W. L. Hazard, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wooding, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Birthright, Mr. and Mrs. J. William Kyle, Mrs. Charles P. Light, Miss Pearl Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Walker S. Martin, Mrs. N. B. Thommasson, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Winstead.

An interesting autumn wedding took place October 6 in the Second Baptist church when Miss Evelyn Mattingly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Mattingly, became the bride of Mr. Wilbur W. St. Clair, the Rev. Ellis C. Primm officiating in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Thomas Mattingly, and she wore golden brown crepe de chine with trimmings and hat to match. Miss Margaret Mattingly attended her sister as maid of honor and wore dark green gorgette. Miss Viola Abel was bridesmaid and wore red satin.

The bridegroom had as his best man his cousin, Mr. J. William Kincheloe, of Rocky Mount, N. C. The musical selections were by Miss Ruby Grimsley, accompanied by Miss Eleanor Henderson.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple departed on an extended trip north and will be at home after October 25 at 416 Crittenden street northwest.

Loehler—Halley Wedding.

A lovely wedding which took place Tuesday was that of Miss Thelma Mae Halley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Halley, and Mr. Paul Frederick Loehler, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Loehler. The ceremony was solemnized at 8 o'clock in the evening at Immanuel Baptist church, the Rev. G. G. Johnson, assisted by the Rev. W. C. W. Altmyer, officiating. The church had a charming decoration of dahlias, chrysanthemums, and palms, and Mrs. Emily Dickinson played the organ, and Mrs. Grainger sang several solo selections. The bride, who was escorted and given in marriage by her father, wore a bridal gown of white satin-back crepe beaded in crystals and trimmed with silver piece lace. Her long court train was banded in the satin and made of the lace, and the tulle veil was held with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bride roses, lilies of the valley and orchids.

Mrs. Charles Sammons, who was matron of honor, was gowned in green taffeta made robe de style, the bodice cut low in the back and the skirt bouffant, and caught with a flower and velvet ribbon. She carried a sheaf of yellow chrysanthemums. Miss Virginia Cooksey was maid of honor, and her gown was fashioned like that of Mrs. Sammons, in orchid taffeta, and she carried yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Berton Bromwell, Miss Ada Swigart, Miss Lillian Fields and Miss Mildred Waldman, and their dresses were made similar to those of the other attendants, in pastel shades in taffeta, and they carried bronze and pink chrysanthemums.

Mr. John G. Loehler acted as best man for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Norman Wall, Mr. Charles Sammons, Mr. Joseph Petty, Mr. Guy Winkjer and Mr. Berton Bromwell.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, at 1290 Kalmia road, Mrs. Halley and Mrs. Loehler receiving with the bridal party. Mrs. Halley was gowned in gold lace made over a slip of honeydew crepe, and Mrs. Loehler was in a gown of wine-colored brocaded velvet. Later Mr. and Mrs. Loehler departed on a wedding trip to New York and will go from there to California by way of Cuba and the Panama canal, Mrs. Loehler traveling in a gown of Lanvin green satin crepe trimmed with deep beige fur, and a large green velvet hat. They will be at home after November 20 at 1314 Kalmia road. Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Halley, Miss Rae Halley, Mrs. W. W. Brown, of Warrenton, Va.; Mrs. Stanton Henry, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Warder and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Cooksey, of southern Maryland.

Nobody Questions the Aristocracy of world famous Swansdown Coats

—In any season!
—For any occasion!
—Light as a feather!
—As warm as a fur coat!

A NEW collection of these luxurious SWANSDOWN COATS has just arrived—as lovely as ever, but presenting many new features of important style interest. Slender models in straightline styles take a cue from Paris and make effective use of stitchings as elaboration. Double-breasted models assume a new air, that may come from their new collars or from the cleverness of the new pockets and yokes and naturally the swagger flared-back, that Paris favors for general outdoor wear, finds its smartest expression in these coats. Beige, rubber, fawn, natural, seaswallow and rosewood-mahogany are in the color range this season.

Nail Heads and Silver Bugles, 49.50
—lavishly elaborate one georgette tunic gown interpreting the spirit of the classic movement in its pure rhythmic lines.

Mirrors and Silver Bugles, 49.50
—give the necessary glitter to another georgette frock presenting the very important deep V decolletage in front and the deep oval back.

Gold Paillettes and Bugles, 49.50
—the most recent Paris version of smart beading, using filmy chiffon in a soft champagne shade as its medium. The Lelong chevron effect waistline and the soft, slightly fulled tunic contribute materially to the graceful effect.

Silver Beads and Bugles, 49.50
—are gorgeous on a black satin dinner frock that takes its deep V neckline from Vionnet and that carries a decidedly subtle touch in the ingenious manipulation of a chiffon godet.

Crystal & Silver Ornamented, 49.50
—velvet in the lovely new surplice mode, cleverly draped at the hip and catering to the Paris desire for uneven hem effects.

This fascinating selection, limited in quantity, will be ready for selling tomorrow morning.

"The House with the Green Shutters"

An Adventure in Turkish Rugs

A desire to give to our customers an unusual and outstanding value led us to contract to take all the Ak Hissar rugs that could be woven to conform to our careful specifications of wool, dyes and workmanship. The standards that we set have been rigidly enforced by the rejection of any and all carpets which did not pass our critical inspection.

The result is our Oriental Rug value which stands pre-eminent —that assures satisfaction, despite its almost incredibly low price.

The Ak Hissar Rug
—a genuine hand-woven Turkish carpet — sells at the following amazingly low prices.

Size 6′ x 9′	$55.00
Size 8′ x 10′	75.00
Size 9′ x 12′	100.00

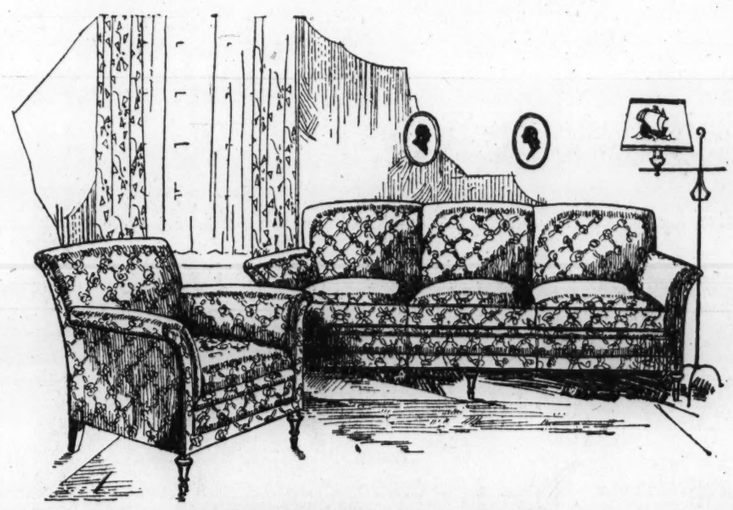

A full selection of other Turkish, Persian, India, and Chinese Rugs at unusually attractive prices are also offered at this time.

The Courtesy of Credit

Constructive credit aids in the creation of cozy homes. It is often a tonic to a discouraged homemaker. Wisely planned credit invests many an old home with new charm, it gives the new home a smiling start.

Constructive credit is a means of systematic saving with no hint of embarrassment, so come in and talk it over without hesitation.

Upholstered Furniture Built for Comfort

The Wakefield Sofa and Easy Chair made especially for the Washington trade of W. & J. Sloane

AN early American Sofa, a masterpiece of our forefathers, inspired the Wakefield group illustrated above. The initial appearance, a few weeks ago, of this sofa and chair met with such marks of approval that it is again being brought to the attention of those who are seeking either a sofa or an easy chair, or both. Here is charm and beauty in full measure—plus a luxurious comfort which indeed will be a revelation. The Wakefield Sofa and Easy Chair are both obtainable in a varied selection of denim, tapestry and quaint old-fashioned chintz. The prices follow:

SOFA		EASY CHAIR
In denim or your own cover	$140.00	In denim or your own cover	$70.00
In chintz	155.00	In chintz	85.00
In tapestry	175.00	In tapestry	90.00
In mohair	195.00	In mohair	98.00

The Sofa and Chair, of standard size and embodying all the high constructive standards of W. & J. Sloane, are of Hardwood, with the exposed parts of Mahogany. Black horsehair of a fine grade is used in both pieces, and the cushions are feathers and down.

50 or More Distinctive Styles—Entirely New—Refreshingly Different —And Moderately Priced

PARIS approved frocks for daytime wear. Approved because they are the most clever adaptations of Paris creations. There are so many different styles that it would seem impossible for any woman to fail to find a model to suit her as well as if it were designed especially for her. The styles are authentically correct—the novel trimming treatments particularly intriguing—especially the great deep yokes of contrasting fabrics that melt into the new Vionnet sleeves. They are not all for daytime wear, however, as there are many handsome dresses of metal laces combined with black, made over contrasting colored georgette slips. Many frocks add the brilliance of a rhinestone buckle.

Misses' and Women's sizes.

Service.

The real estate board desires to be of service not only to its membership, but also to the public and its program of activities contains features of an educational character. It is directing a school to be conducted in connection with the Y. M. C. A. college which will give a course extending over a period of four months, on the principles of real estate practice. This course is available to the general public as well as to members of the board.

The board also conducts the realtor forum which consists of a series of meetings at which are discussed both in lecture form and round table discussion topics of interest to real estate men.

The better homes and building exposition which opens tomorrow night is one of the items on the local board's educational program. The show is designed for the purpose of giving information to the public as to every element that goes into the construction and furnishing of the modern home. It is the hope of the board in sponsoring this project that it will be of material aid to the home maker and that it will stimulate a desire on the part of the public for homes of high type with all modern facilities.

331 Now Members Of Real Estate Board

Under the direction of the membership committee of the active and associate divisions of the Washington Real Estate Board the membership of the board during the last year has increased by 16 active members, 54 associated members and 10 affiliated members, bringing the total membership of the board to 331 members, composed of 144 active, 131 associate and 56 affiliated members.

The affiliated members are composed of builders, lawyers, property owners and persons directly interested in Washington real estate. Three deaths have occurred in the board during the past year, one being John F. Donohue, father of the retiring president, William Corcoran Hill and Jerome Hubbard.

GRADY BOWLERS HEAD REAL ESTATE LEAGUE

Take Three Straight Games From Stone & Fairfax to Increase Lead.

The J. Dallas Grady bowling team increased its hold on first place in the Real Estate league by taking three straight games from Stone & Fairfax this week, and this team is now three full games ahead of the team holding second place, there being a three-corner tie for second place. The high game Wednesday night was rolled by Mr. Brent, of Boss & Phelps, with 134. He also piled up the highest number of pins for high set with a score of 335. The Cafritz Co. team had the best team score with high game, 532; high set, 1,519.

REALTORS TO OPEN EXHIBIT OF BETTER HOMES TOMORROW

Model House, Complete in Every Detail, Will Be on Floor of Auditorium.

150 BOOTHS WILL SHOW LABOR-SAVING DEVICES

Lectures Will Be Given at Night on Cooking, Decorating and Lighting.

The Better Homes and Building exposition to be conducted by the Washington Real Estate board at the Washington auditorium, will be opened tomorrow at 7 p. m. and will continue until Saturday night.

This exposition is open to the general public and has been arranged largely for their educational purposes. The hours of the exposition will be from 1 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 o'clock at night. The purpose of the board in bringing about this exposition, while it is in a large measure for the benefit of those engaged in the real estate and building business, it is primarily to bring to the citizens of Washington more adequate knowledge of the details and problems that enter into home construction, home purchasing, home equipment and the modern method of operating and maintaining a household.

The board has endeavored to arrange the exposition so that it will present to the purchaser, to the seller, to the housewife, to the real estate man, to the builder, to the architect and others closely allied in the home problem a means of closely studying the most modern methods that are employed toward housing in the National Capital and throughout the United States.

Nurse Exhibit There.

Among the things that will be of interest to the general public and which are closely allied with the home will be the exhibit by the Visiting Nurses society of the District of Columbia, the American Red Cross and the Public library. These organizations which have had the benefit of wide experience in the intimate details of home life will cooperate with the real estate board in presenting exhibits of interest and of an educational nature.

A model house complete in every detail as to architecture, modern conveniences and furnishings, has been built on the floor of the Auditorium and will be one of the outstanding exhibits. A modern street lighting system will also be one of the large exhibits. Real estate men engaged in the sale of unimproved property will have displays. Dealers in every conceivable modern device for labor saving in the house have taken more than 150 booths that will completely fill the upstairs and downstairs areas of the auditorium. Manufacturers of raw materials will exhibit and manufacturers of brick, steel and other modern materials that go into building a house have arranged for large displays. The Potomac Electric Power Co. is having an elaborate booth.

Of particular interest to the housewife will be a series of lectures to be given during the evenings on such topics as cooking, interior decorating, landscape gardening, household hints, color combinations and the preservation of eyesight by proper lighting. All methods of heating a house, kitchen equipment, will be shown.

Useful Talks on Homes.

The exposition will be confined to educational activities in respect to better homes and better building. No efforts outside of this line, such as contests, will be made. Demonstrations will be confined strictly to subjects and talks useful to the building of better homes. The hope has been expressed by the officials of the Washington Real Estate board that this first experiment of theirs in the National Capital of a better homes and building exposition will meet with generous public response so that they might repeat annually this affair which they have inaugurated purely as an educational feature and to encourage home owning.

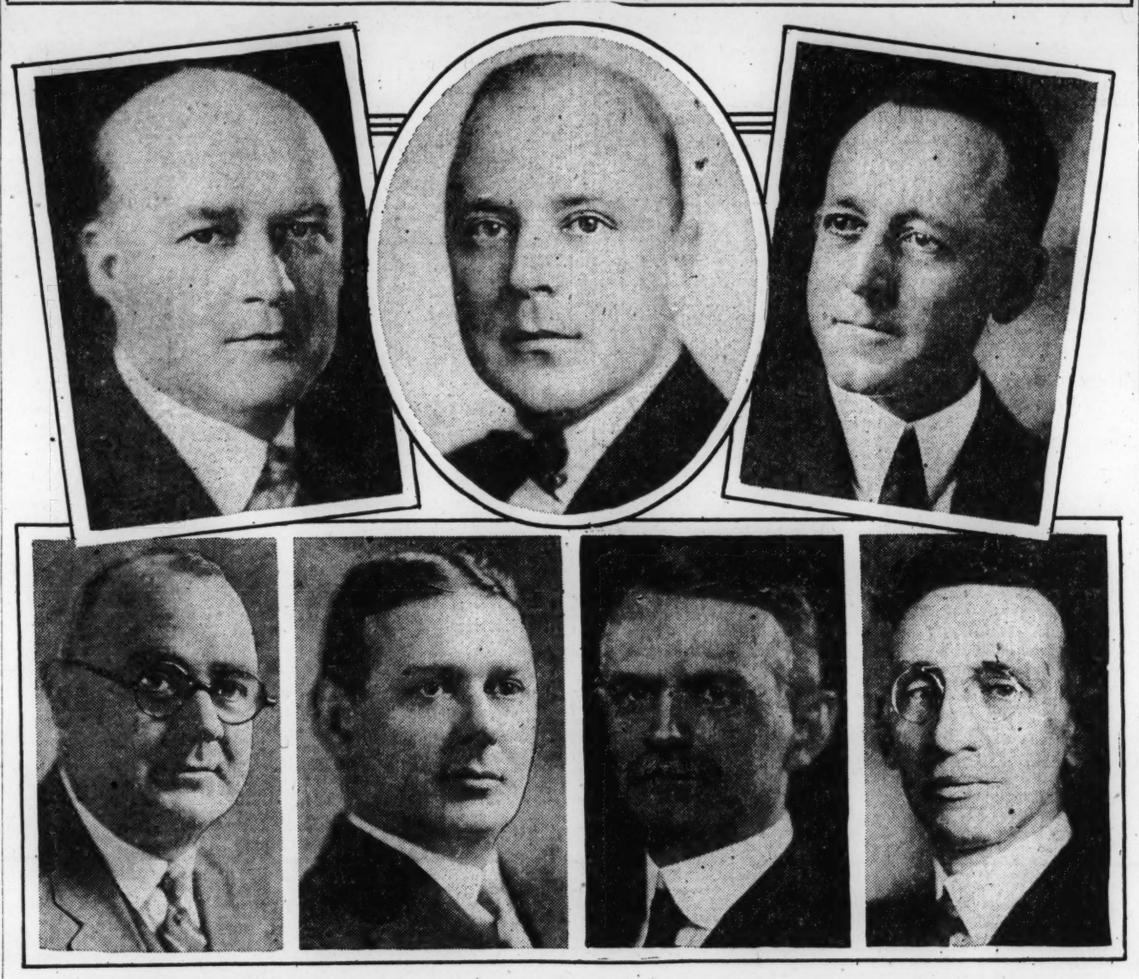

It is the hope of the board that the beauty of Washington and its reputation as a beautiful residential city will be greatly benefited by such expositions from time to time. The exposition is in charge of Clarence F. Donohoe, John F. Maury, W. C. Miller, Albert E. Landvoigt, Theodore M. Judd, Jesse H. Hedges and Ben T. Webster.

Other Exhibitors.

NEWLY CHOSEN OFFICERS OF WASHINGTON REAL ESTATE BOARD

REAL ESTATE MEN SEEK UNIFORM SALE CONTRACT

Would Have Form Equitable to Both Seller and Purchaser.

VISION NEW CONFIDENCE

Every effort is being made by the sales managers' contract division of the Washington Real Estate board in conjunction with the executive committee of the board to bring about the establishment of a standard sales contract. The purpose of this endeavor on the part of the division is to so regulate contracts with regard to the sale of property in the District of Columbia that there will be established here a definite form which will be equitable not only to real estate men but also to the purchaser and seller of the property.

The sales managers' division feels that with the establishment of a definite form of contract the public will be imbued with confidence by reason of the fact that they will feel the contract into which they are about to enter will be the same as entered into by every other purchaser of real estate from members of the real estate board.

A considerable amount of time has been devoted to this phase of bettering the real estate field in the District of Columbia by members of the sales managers' division. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., who has had this matter in charge, has spent considerable time and study on it.

At a meeting of the sales managers Tuesday at the Lee house the recommendations by Herbert thoroughly were studied and it is hoped in a short while a new form of contract will be recommended that will be of profit to real estate men and the public.

Continuance of Active Work for New Recorder of Deeds Office Contained in Recommendations Submitted in Annual Report.

While the outstanding feature of the annual meeting of the Washington Real Estate board, which took place in the Wardman Park hotel Monday night was the election of the new officers of the organization and the retirement of Clarence F. Donohoe from the presidency, the tremendous progress made by the board during the last year also was of great importance. The report of the executive secretary indicated an increase in the activities of the organization from every angle. Among the recommendations included in the report was the continuance of further active work for a new recorder of deeds office, following up the campaign which the board started some time ago to remedy the conditions in this important public institution in Washington; the establishment of a civic affairs committee to deal with the many questions of importance affecting the District of Columbia; appointment of representatives of the board on the zoning committee are contained in the report with other recommendations. Active support of the Washington convention bureau was urged as well as active campaign on behalf of the advantages of the National Capital. In addition reference was made to many matters of interest to realtors and the administrative policy of the Washington Real Estate board.

The progress of the board, which now represents some 330 active and associate members, was shown in Mr. Schick's report of the annual election.

The report in part:

The program of educational activities as outlined to the board in the report of the executive secretary submitted one year ago was carried to a successful conclusion. The courses conducted by the Y. M. C. A. under the direction of John A. Petty were well attended and the course in real estate was appreciated by all of the attendants.

Real Estate Practice.

A course on the principles of real estate practice has been arranged by the Y. M. C. A. for the fall and winter. The opening session will be held Monday, November 1. It is contemplated this year to use a textbook in connection with the course and definite portions of the text will be assigned to the students for reading. The class work will be conducted by prominent and experienced business men.

The realtors' forum, conducted for the benefit of members of the board during the last year, was a marked success. So great was the appeal of the meetings that at the end of the series, as originally outlined, there was a unanimous request for a continuance of the forum, and an additional course of six meetings was held. Arrangements have been completed to have a similar forum during the coming fall and winter and a committee under the chairmanship of Alfred H. Lawson has arranged a series of discussions.

The Y. M. C. A. school and the realtors' forum offer a splendid opportunity to our own members as well as to the public to broaden their knowledge of the real estate business.

Gives Free Service.

The committee has rendered gratuitously its services in a number of cases, properties belonging to the Y. M. C. A., the Washington City Orphan asylum, First Congregational church and the National Capital Park commission having been appraised without charge.

Realizing that the different departments of a real estate office have problems peculiar to themselves and desiring to furnish a means whereby these problems could be discussed by those particularly interested therein, the board during the year organized two divisions, the sales managers division and the property management division.

A great deal of interest has been manifested in the sales managers division. Suggestions relating to ethics, advertising, signs, standard forms, commissions and the like have been helpfully discussed.

So far it has made but two recommendations to the board, one relating to the division of commission between the listing office and the selling office which was adopted at a recent meeting of the board. The other recommendation related to the offer of The Washington Post to publish the Washington Realtor. The sales managers division, believing that this offer held great possibilities for the advancement of the board, urged its acceptance.

Of Great Importance.

The property management division, after its organization, undertook a task of great importance to members of the board, that of revising the rent commission schedule. This schedule of commissions received the approval of the executive committee and was adopted by the board at a recent meeting.

A service has been instituted in the board's office which has met with gratifying results. Reference is made to the employment service, which contemplates the registration of applicants for the various posi-

REALTORS FACE DRIVES FOR STATE REALTY LAWS

Texas and Arkansas Will Have Strong Campaigns Before Legislatures Meet.

WORK IN MICHIGAN, TOO

Texas and Arkansas head the list of States that will have strong campaigns before coming legislative sessions for the enactment of State real estate license laws. License provisions for the protection of investors in real estate against unscrupulous or unreliable agents are being considered by State Association of Real Estate Boards, 17 of which are holding annual conventions this present month.

The Texas Association of Real Estate Boards, at its annual convention just concluded at Wichita Falls, authorized appointment of a committee to obtain immediate and favorable consideration by the legislature of the State for a real estate license law. The association outlined plans for the launching of a State-wide campaign to reduce taxes on real estate. It indorsed the movement now in progress for a nation-wide advertising program for Texas.

A real estate license law will be one of the two principal objectives of the Arkansas State association for the coming year, according to resolutions adopted at its annual convention just held in Fort Smith. The association will urge the legislature to pass a law, one provision of which would require those whose duties are to engage in the real estate business to pass a qualification test.

Modification of the inheritance tax is another measure which the realtors of the State have pledged themselves to support. The Arkansas association indorsed plans for a greater highway development, and pledged itself further to a realtor campaign advertising the State and its advantages. It called on every member board to organize and conduct classes in real estate, open to the general public and to nonmembers engaged in the real estate business in nearby towns where there is no real estate board.

Amendment of the Michigan real estate license law to provide for its administration by a commission of three experienced real estate men who would serve without salary, and the adoption of a uniform mortgage law have been selected by the legislative committee of the Michigan Real Estate association as special objectives for the year. These projects were selected after the returns from a questionnaire on the subject sent out to the various real estate boards of the State had been considered carefully.

Colorado realtors are studying proposals for strengthening the real estate license law in that State.

REALTORS TO TURN ATTENTION HERE IN BILLBOARD PLANS

Committee of National Association to Meet With Outdoor Advertisers.

SPECIAL GROUP WILL PROPOSE REGULATIONS

Urges Against Marring Nation's Natural Scenic Beauty by Proper Placing.

The National Capital will be among the many cities to receive particular attention of the special committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards which will convene with the outdoor advertising interests with regard to proposed measures for the regulation of billboard advertising. It is expected that this committee, which is a subcommittee of the association's standing committee on city planning and zoning, will take more interest in Washington because of the fact the national association is particularly interested in the beautification of the Nation's Capital. The purpose of this subcommittee is to work out definite proposals for adoption by cities and States of regulations in regard to billboard placement.

The realtor committee follows: Axel Lonnquist, Chicago, chairman; Ward C. Gifford, Kansas City, Mo.; B. F. Faast, Eau Claire, Wis.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards was the first national business group to take an active position for such regulation of billboard placement as would at once conserve the legitimate uses of outdoor advertising and guard against marring the beauty of scenic spots in the open country or of urban residential sections.

In a resolution adopted at its annual convention in Detroit in June, 1925, the association stated its position and objectives and called on city and State executives and on zoning and city planning commissions to investigate the problem and to formulate plans for control of unsightly billboard use.

Urge Preservation of Beauty.

"We recognize that the natural beauty of our country is a public heritage to be conserved," the resolution states. "It is a community possession, and no individual and no corporation has the right to despoil the natural scenic beauty of the land for private profit.

"We believe that with the growth of the movement for city planning and zoning as a means to direct the future development of American cities, stabilize their land values and preserve their esthetic values for community living, we should give serious consideration to the problem of outdoor advertising as one phase of the zoning movement.

"We hold that the indiscriminate use of signboards today retards the development of desirable districts, and tends to destroy values in districts already built up, and that such signboards have become an offense to the public generally. We hold further that the time has come when we shall determine whether the character, location, extent and maintenance of signboards can not be so regulated and controlled as to give legitimate opportunity for necessary advertising without the continuance of the present harmful conditions: Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the National Association of Real Estate Boards recommend to the various executives, city and State, and to the various planning and zoning cofmission, that immediate study be made of this problem, both with reference to county and State areas, which shall prevent the destroying of the beauty spots of the open country and discontinuance of any unsightly conditions in any of our cities; and be it further resolved, That the National Association instruct its committee on city planning and zoning immediately to start investigation as to the possibilities of just regulation of billboard use, and to recommend legislation to make such regulation effective."

Standards of practice adopted by the Outdoor Advertising Association of America, at the annual convention of the industry a year ago, pledge against the erection of outdoor advertising structures which would mar or impair scenic beauty, or which would constitute traffic hazards.

Associate Division Plans for Active Year

The associate division of the Washington Real Estate Board will endeavor to make the coming year one of the most active since its formation. M. P. Canby, newly elected chairman of this division, announced at a recent meeting of the sales managers division that he was going to make arrangements for the cooperation of all members of this division and the active members for the purpose of getting all salesmen employed in offices of members of the board to become associated with the board and take an active interest in the work of the organization.

Building Permit Returns Show Loss In September

Decline of 16 Per Cent Reported in Figures From 463 Cities and Towns—Florida Permits Indicate Renewed Construction Activity.

A loss of 16 per cent was sustained in building permits filed in September in the 463 principal American cities and towns compared with September, 1925, according to the national monthly building survey of S. W. Straus & Co., made public yesterday. The same cities lost 4½ per cent during the first nine months of the year compared with the same period last year. The volume of plans filed for the three-quarters of the year as $3,281,735,879 compared with $3,437,314,253 during the same period of 1925.

The decline in building activities was fairly well scattered over the country. New York, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Boston, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Portland, Oreg., and Oakland, Calif., reported considerable losses in September as compared with the same month a year ago, while important gains were shown in Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco, Newark, N. J., Baltimore, Albany, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Yonkers and Columbus, Ohio.

The S. W. Straus & Co. figures, which comprise the first building reports from Florida since the storm, indicate fairly large activities throughout the State. While the September figures showed a pronounced decline as compared with the same month last year, a very sizable volume of permits were filed in the leading centers of the State. Among these were Coral Gables, $1,112,654; Daytona Beach, $584,200; Jacksonville, $1,216,617; Lakeland, $834,650; Miami, $844,496; Miami Beach, $321,775; Orlando, $1,052,297; St. Petersburg, $672,600; Tampa, $916,077; West Palm Beach, $216,540. For the first nine months of the year the 29 principal centers of the State had building permits of $144,686,512 compared with $162,839,478 for the same period in 1925.

Building material prices throughout the country were steady for the most part during September. Wages in the building trades were well stabilized, although a survey of more than 50 principal cities indicated a small advance in the average level of wages as of October 1.

The 25 cities reporting largest volume of permits for three-quarters of 1926 with comparisons were:

CONSTRUCTION WORK ON KINGPIN BILLIARD ANNEX NEARING END

STRUCTURE TO HAVE 31 TABLES FOR PLAY

New Ideas in Decoration and Comfort Also Will Be Features.

New ideas in luxury and the last word in billiard equipment will be represented in the large billiard annex to the Kingpin bowling alleys, on Fourteenth street near Park road.

Construction activities on the Kingpin billiard annex are nearing completion and decorative work and installment of equipment will be consummated about the first of November, when the formal opening will take place.

The new billiard rooms will occupy two floors opening off the Kingpin bowling establishments. There will be 31 tables.

All concrete construction has been used in the new building.

Interior decorations have been planned by Mrs. Meyer Davis, who has supervised the decorating of other Meyer Davis enterprises.

The motif of ships and the sea has been chosen for the billiard annex decorations. Wall decorations feature the repetition of full-rigged Spanish galleons. Window hangings of marine blue linen will bear appliques of ships.

S. E. Godden Joins McKeever & Goss

S. E. Godden, for the last five years sales and advertising manager of Allan E. Walker & Co., Inc., and a director in the various Walker companies, yesterday announced his resignation to become effective at once. He will immediately become affiliated with the sales organization of McKeever & Goss.

Mr. Godden came to Washington from Marion, Ohio, which is his home. Previous to his connection with the Allan E. Walker interests he was publicity manager of the James M. Cox campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. In leaving the company Mr. Godden disposes of his stock interest in the Walker companies.

Housecleaning Over?

A Home Everyone Should Visit

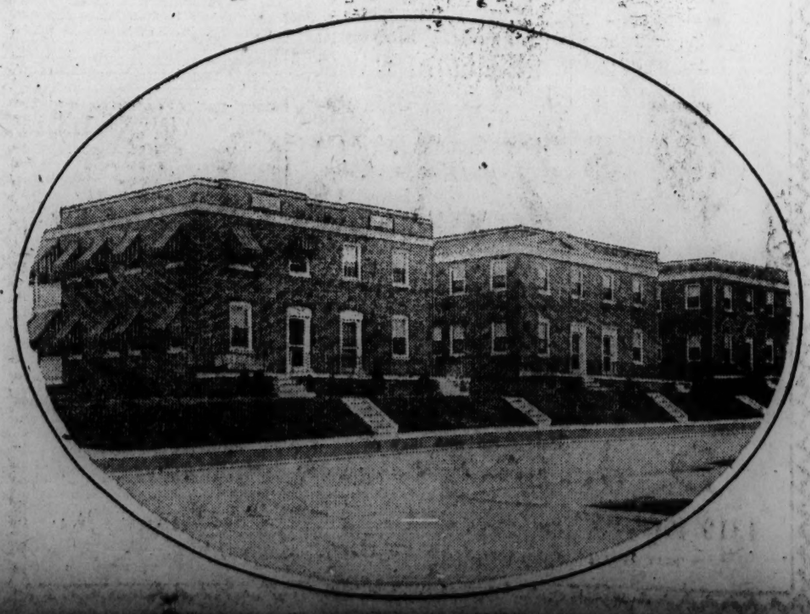

522 Rittenhouse Street N. W.

Come out and see for yourself what these advantages mean in a six-room, semidetached home. But more than design and appearance have been considered in its construction. Complete in every detail is the whole story of human comfort in a home which sells for $9,750 on terms of $1,000 cash and $75 monthly.

A Few Construction Details May Interest You:

Semi-detached brick house, 20 feet wide
Hardwood floors throughout
Linoleum-covered kitchen floor
Tiled bathroom, built-in tub
Double back porches, screened
American Radiator Co.'s hot-water heat system
Kitchen cabinet and one-piece sink
Entire house screened throughout
Built-in garage, 2-car size
Built-in ice box
Toilet in basement
Large linen closets
Double laundry tubs
Front and side lawns sodded
Woodwork enameled throughout

At 619 Rittenhouse Street is a six-room, semidetached model of smaller type, and in the immediate vicinity are other homes at $7,150 and $7,250. Some of these have built-in garages, others have space for garage if wanted. All are sold at terms of $400 cash and $60 monthly.

The homes are situated between two car lines within walking distance of chain stores, markets, banks, etc. Two new grade schools and one junior high school, as well as parochial schools and churches, are equally close at hand. Fort Stevens Ridge is 20 minutes from the Treasury by motor.

To see the modern Electrical Home drive out 16th Street through Colorado Avenue to 522 Rittenhouse Street. Or take Georgia Avenue cars or 14th Street cars marked "Takoma Park" to Rittenhouse Street.

The Electrical Home is open from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. Trained representatives of the Electric League will welcome any questions regarding the numerous innovations to be seen in this outstanding exhibit at 522 Rittenhouse Street N. W. "Follow the yellow arrows to the Electric Home."

DUNIGAN REPORTS NUMEROUS HOMES SOLD IN PETWORTH

CORNER RESIDENCE SOLD TO MRS. BROSNAN

D. J. Dunigan, Inc., enumerate numerous sales of new homes recently completed by their building organization in Petworth. These are near Grant and Sherman circles.

The corner residence at 501 Webster street northwest was purchased by Mrs. Rose E. Brosnan. It contains eight rooms, two baths, built-in garage, and directly faces Grant circle. The two adjoining dwellings, 503 and 505 Webster street, were purchased by Ovid H. Wells and Frank P. McCann, respectively. They contain six rooms and bath.

The corner of New Hampshire avenue and Webster street, 4401 New Hampshire avenue, having nine rooms, two baths and built-in garage, was purchased by George J. Hurst. This house has a commanding view of Grant circle. No. 4403 New Hampshire avenue was purchased by W. H. Bachschmidt. This house has six rooms, bath, built-in shower, concrete front porch, Spanish tile mansard and many unusual features to add to home comfort. The adjoining house, which is semi-detached, 4405 New Hampshire avenue, was purchased by Karl Klenk.

All of the six-room homes on the south side of Crittenden street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, were rapidly sold to the following purchasers:: 408 Crittenden street, to Jesse O. Reed; 410 Crittenden street, to Martin A. Gleason; 412 Crittenden street, to Elizabeth V. Workman; 414 Crittenden street, to Seth M. McDonald; 418 Crittenden street, to Charles W. Spindler; 420 Crittenden street, to William C. Goodman; 422 Crittenden street, to James Mowatt; 424 Crittenden street, to Elizabeth Murphy; 426 Crittenden street, to Earl C. Haislip; 428 Crittenden street, to Edgar L. Lynch; 420 Crittenden street, to Robert E. Shriver; 432 Crittenden street, to James J. Knibbs; 434 Crittenden street, to William L. Mullikin; 436 Crittenden street, to Michael A. Rattigan; 438 Crittenden street, to James L. Johnson.

These houses have very deep lots, built-in showers, outside brick pantries, automatic storage heaters, and very attractive electric fixtures.

On the north and south side of Emerson street, between Kansas avenue and Seventh street, all of the 42 six-room homes built there were entirely sold before completion. These six-room homes are of attractive design, 32 feet deep, having high ceilings, lots of wall and floor space, beautiful electric fixtures, one-piece sink in kitchen, brick pantry, built-in tub with shower, and numerous features not ordinarily found in moderate priced homes.

Emerson Street Homes.

The list of purchaser of these Emerson street homes is as follows: 601 Emerson street, to Edna M. Meitzler; 603 Emerson street, to Thomas J. Sullivan, jr.; 605 Emerson street, to Mary A. Kemp; 607 Emerson street, to John E. Glancy; 609 Emerson street, to Beulah G. Hoch; 611 Emerson street, to Harry A. Vierkorn; 613 Emerson street, to Charles Hyder; 615 Emerson street, to Edward T. Smith; 617 Emerson street, to Arthur G. Rossiter; 619 Emerson street, to John G. Zobel; 621 Emerson street, to Bernice W. Clark; 623 Emerson street, to James L. Nalley; 625 Emerson street, to Hansford P. Miller; 627 Emerson street, to Catherine C. Sullivan; 629 Emerson street, to James A. Noyes; 631 Emerson street, to Thomas E. Beck; 633 Emerson street, to Arthur W. Coombs; 635 Emerson street, to George F. Cross; 600 Emerson street, to Lola V. Marks; 602 Emerson street, to Arthur H. Urban; 604 Emerson street, to William J. Wills; 606 Emerson street, to John J. O'Connor; 608 Emerson street, to Albert J. Berres; 610 Emerson street, to Hamilton H. Harrison; 612 Emerson street, to Charles I. Hunt; 630 Emerson street, to William Shields.

The corner of 4901 Seventh street northwest, Seventh and Emerson streets, was sold to Warren A. Romig. This is a beautiful bay window corner home of eight large rooms, two baths and built-in garage. At this point is where the old Columbia Golf club stood, and it is conceded to be one of the highest points in Petworth. The following is a list of the purchasers: 4901 Seventh street, to Warren A. Romig; 4903 Seventh street, to George A. Williams; 4905 Seventh street, to Mary E. St. Clair; 4907 Seventh street, to Eva Mades; 4909 Seventh street, to Thornton P. Dewhirst; 4913 Seventh street, to Blanche F. Gasque; 4915 Seventh street, to William J. Tumelty; 4919 Seventh street, to Abraham E. Rubin.

On Hamilton Street.

The popular moderate priced homes on the north side of Hamilton street were completely sold out with very little effort. These are very attractive homes with deep lots, concrete streets, paved alley and were sold on very reasonable terms.

The following is a list of the purchasers: 601 Hamilton street, to William E. Steele; 603 Hamilton street, to Beecher A. Pittman; 605 Hamilton street, to John J. McDon-

EXPERIMENTAL DAM BUILT IN MOUNTAINS WITHSTANDS TESTS

Concrete Structure in Sierras, Near Fresno, Calif., Defies Weight of Water.

WALL CROSSES CANYON AT HEIGHT OF 60 FEET

Thousands of Records Made as Engineers Seek to Determine Destruction Point.

The arch dam erected in a steep canyon of the Sierras, near Fresno, Calif., to settle construction problems that have baffled engineers of all countries for centuries, has so far withstood every test, it is announced by the Engineering Foundation, which is engaged in promoting research in cooperation with the national research council.

A committee of the foundation, composed of civil engineers, is directing the project with the aid of the Department of Commerce. W. A. Slater, chief of the division of concrete and structures, of the bureau of standards, is carrying on the experiments.

For many months the engineers have been building and testing this dam to a height of 60 feet and at a cost of $110,000, contributed by more than 50 firms of bankers, manufacturers, engineers and power companies.

It is the purpose of the engineers to test the dam to destruction in the interest of science, but the structure's stamina in resisting the onslaughts of water that has been impounded will force them to build higher. The end may not come, and with it an answer to their questions until the dam has been built up to 100 feet at an additional outlay of $30,000.

Many tests have been made, but they are still incomplete, according to the foundation's announcement, which said that months of work are still ahead. Thousands of records have been made, and are being studied, tabulated and graphed by the testing staff.

The dam, constructed of Portland cement concrete, did not break at 60 feet, even when the reservoir back of it was filled so that water flowed over the top of the dam. The engineers will gradually increase the height of the dam until it finally gives way under the increasing pressure. It is planned first to extend the height of the dam 10 feet, and then 20, 30 or 40 feet, if necessary.

"While this is a unique example of the romantic side of engineering, it is nevertheless a straightforward endeavor to solve an everyday problem affecting engineers, bankers and the public," Director Alfred D. Flinn, of the engineering foundation, said.

"The investigation is attacking important questions of engineering research in the application of scientific knowledge.

"A correct answer will tend to safety of lives, of millions of dollars in property, and may make possible the construction of less costly dams for power development, irrigation of lands now useless, water supply of cities and towns and flood prevention.

"A less expensive type of dam than has heretofore been required by many engineers and governmental authorities would make possible some of the projects for water power and irrigation which are not now commercially feasible because of the handicap of expense.

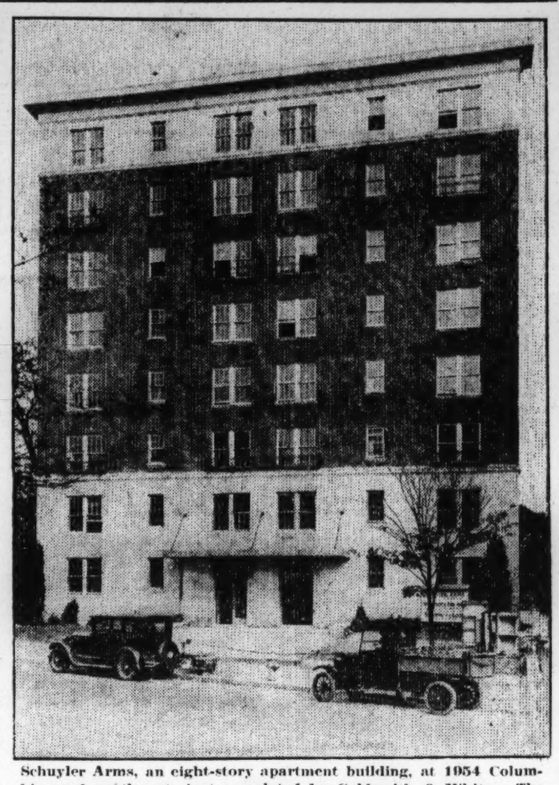

Will Increase Wealth.

"Successful financing and development of projects of this kind will add to the wealth of States, communities, and, in fact, the whole nation, as well as provide power, food and water for a larger population, and increase the basis of taxation for the support of government."

Early in April, after months of work, excavation in the granite

TOUR OF FLORIDA CITIES FOR REALTY DELEGATES

Association Arranges State-Wide Trip for Realtors After Convention.

SPECIAL TRAIN PROVIDED

A sight-seeing tour of the State of Florida for realtors of the United States and Canada has been arranged by the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards immediately to follow the annual business meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Miami, Fla., January 12, 13 and 14.

A special train to convey the party has been arranged by the State association. The train will be parked at various points along the route, and the trip will be varied there by excursions by automobiles, which will enable the visiting realtors to become acquainted with the cities and their surrounding regions in detail.

Local real estate boards will entertain the party en route. Cities to be visited by rail in the post-convention trip include West Palm Beach, Sebring, Bartow, Lakeland, Fort Myers, Bradenton, Tampa, St. Petersburg, Clearwater, Orlando, Daytona Beach, St. Augustine and Jacksonville.

Special automobile tours arranged include a trip from Sebring to Lakeland, as the guests of the ridge section real estate boards, passing en route Avon Park, Lake Wales, Haines City, Winter Haven and Bartow. A second side trip will be from Fort Myers to Bradenton, visiting by the way Venice and Sarasota.

The realtors' third break in their rail tour will be a cross-country run by automobile from Tampa to St. Petersburg. This will be followed by a visit to Tarpon Springs. Still another sightseeing excursion will extend from Orlando through Orlando county, Orange county and Lake county.

St. Augustine, oldest town in the United States, will be visited in detail. There will be a sight-seeing trip in and around Jacksonville. The party will leave Miami Saturday morning, January 15. The tour will end at Jacksonville Saturday afternoon, January 22. The train will be vacated upon arrival at Jacksonville Saturday morning. Entertainment features of the tour, including luncheons and dinners for the visitors en route, costs, and detail of the itinerary will be announced soon.

REAL ESTATE BODIES SEEK COOPERATION

National and State Associations Name Committees to Correlate Activity.

A committee of twelve to represent the 32 existing State and provincial real estate associations has been appointed by A. H. Barnhisel, of Tacoma, chairman of the National Board of Presidents and Secretaries of State Real Estate associations, to confer with a committee of three already appointed by the National Association of Real Estate Boards to work out plans for a closer relationship between the national and the State organizations representing the business of real estate.

Appointment of contact committees was made in accordance with action taken by the National Board of Presidents and Secretaries at the annual convention of the National association, held in Tulsa, Okla., in June of the present year, and in accordance with action of the board of directors of the National association taken at the same meeting.

While aims and purposes of the National association and of the various State real estate organizations are the same, and while the board of directors of the National association have for some time followed a policy of admitting no real estate board to its membership which did not have the approval of the State association of its locality, if such a State association existed, there is at present no provision for correlating activities of national and State bodies except that made by the National association's constitutional provision for a national board of presidents and secretaries of State associations. Activities of State real estate associations have greatly enlarged in scope and importance during the past few years.

tions in real estate offices, which register is available to any member of the board who has a vacancy to fill. We have succeeded in placing a large number of persons, from office boys to managers of departments, with salaries ranging from small weekly compensation to thousands of dollars per annum.

For several years those interested in the real estate business in the District of Columbia have been deprived of the advantages of a publication setting forth in accurate form an abstract of deeds, deeds of trust and other instruments filed for record in the recorder of deeds' office. A local firm indicated its desire to publish in mimeograph form an accurate record of this character, but was unable to secure a sufficiently large list of subscribers to justify the cost of the publication.

Helps Build List.

The board, recognizing the advantage of such a record, undertook to assist in building his list of subscribers to a point where a loss would not be sustained on the project. The assistance of our committee, which had the matter in charge, was exceedingly helpful and our latest information is that the publishers are not sustaining any particular loss and the continuance of the issuing of this record may be expected.

The practice of the District authorities in issuing certificates which set forth the status of taxes on certain properties is designed to give correct information in that particular. For some time past, however, the service in furnishing these certificates has been so slow as to cause embarrassment to realtors and others in their transactions. A committee of the board was appointed to look into the situation and if possible facilitate the issuance of these certificates.

Our committee has devoted considerable time in discussing this matter with the commissioners and with those in charge of the tax division and have received the assurance of those in authority that an endeavor will be made to furnish the certificates within a much shorter period. We are advised by a number of offices that the tax certificates are being issued in a somewhat shorter time and it is expected that further improvement will be noted in the future.

The board has had a part in several matters of civic and community interest in the District during the past year.

The members of the board individually have been called on to contribute to the purchase of the Shenandoah park area. The board as an organization made no contribution to this purchase but many of our individual members have made substantial subscriptions.

The board as an organization is assisting in the support of the Washington convention bureau which has done the able and efficient work in bringing to Washington a number of conventions and meetings of various kinds. Toward the support of this enterprise the board has contributed the sum of $250. We are represented on the board of directors of the convention bureau by two members, namely, J. Curtis Walker and W. Gilbert Dent.

Bearing in mind the distress of the many thousands of persons in Florida owing to the recent disaster, and realizing that many realtors may be included in the number of needy, the executive committee at its last meeting ordered an appropriation in a substanial amount to the American Red Cross, to be used by it in relief work in the stricken area.

During the week of October 18 to 23, the Better Homes and Building exposition will be held in the Washington auditorium. This exposition is sponsored by this board and it was undertaken by the executive committee believing that an exposition of this character properly conducted would create a desire on the part of many to own their own homes and on the part of others to own better homes than they now occupy.

The Exposition Service, Inc., of Philadelphia has been engaged to manage this exposition and the preliminary work which has been done by the managers has met with the entire approval of the executive committee. The present outlook indicates, from the amount of space sold and the character of the exhibits, that it will be a successful undertaking. Although the project was initiated primarily for increasing the market and as a means of publicity for the board and its membership without thought of profit, indications point to the fact that the board, as an organization, will reap some material benefit.

The law of the District of Columbia and municipal regulations governing real estate signs in the District is at the present time not altogether satisfactory to the real estate broker. The present law prevents the placing of any sign on public parking, which, when applied to many sections of the city, means that no sign can be placed between the building line and the curb.

The regulations promulated by the commissioners in their present status require a permit from the building inspector for all signs which exceed six square feet in area and that with a permit no sign with a greater area than nine square feet can be erected, except in the outlying unsubdivided or newly subdivided sections of the District where no sign exceeding 100 square feet shall be permitted.

Throughout the summer a campaign by the police department has been carried on and many real estate brokers have been put to great inconvenience and labor in correcting their signs to meet with this regulation. A number of conferences have been held with the commissioners and the inspector of buildings, and a committee of the board is now endeavoring to work out a satisfactory adjustment of this question.

It is hoped that we may succeed in getting a regulation which will permit the erection of signs of sufficient size for general use without a permit and provide for signs under a permit of sufficiently large size on new developments, both of subdivision and construction character. It is hoped to obtain an amendment by Congress to the present law which will permit the placing of signs between the building line and the sidewalk.

ROUGHTON HEADS SALES FOR TRUCK FARMS AREA

Will Seek to Populate Washington Gardens, Near Waldorf, Md.

LAND PURCHASED IN 1914

W. C. Roughton, subdivision expert, has been placed in charge of the sales department of Washington Gardens, Inc., an 8,500-acre tract of land adjoining Waldorf, Md., which soon is to be placed on the market by a group of Washington realtors headed by Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory.

Washigton Gardens was acquired some time ago by Washington Gardens, Inc., with the idea of supplying a local demand for small truck farms ranging from 10 acres in area upward. The land originally was purchased in 1914 as the nucleus for a farm colony of employes of the Panama canal, who were forced to seek new fields of endeavor, and it is significant that this plot of ground was selected, as the committee in charge of the movement had inspected land in all parts of the United States.

Roughton has had wide experience in this type of development and will immediately start a movement to colonize this tract, which is 45 minutes from Washington.

PRINCESS EUDOXIE SAYS POSITION NOT ALWAYS SOFT SNAP

GIVES SURPLUS FUND TO BULGARIAN NEEDY

Berlin, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Princess Eudoxie, of Bulgaria, the 28-year-old sister of King Boris and daughter of the former Czar Ferdinand, in her memoirs published in the National Zeitung, shows that a princess does not always have such a "soft snap."

She describes the training she and her brother received for their royal station, but confesses to having a decided predilection for a home life which, she says, "may seem anomalous in our present era of excitement, but is perhaps to be explained by the absence of woman-suffrage in our country." As in Bulgaria women are rather inclined to adapt themselves to the reasoning of men, the princess considers such an innovation uncalled for.

Prefers Simplicity.

The royal writer refutes the frequent opinion that princesses only wear gorgeous gowns and bedeck themselves with rare jewels.

"On the stage and the screen" she declares, "we are even portrayed with diamond crowns and robes of ermine. But as a matter of fact, I prefer the simplest of clothes, and during the last two years have only had two new gowns made, all Bulgarian in style, material and workmanship."

Expenses entailed by a more costly wardrobe the princess insists she can use to a better purpose in alleviating the distress of the many impoverished Bulgarians. But, unfortunately, there are never sufficient funds available to supply the wants of all.

She declares herself convinced that a woman serves her country and humanity best as a good housewife.

Aids King With Work.

Upon rising Princess Eudoxie immediately helps her brother with his fairly bulky correspondence. She and the king then have an early lunch and frequently dine together at 2 o'clock. The hour before dinner is set aside for official visits. She deplores the lack of intimates, most of her friends having moved to other countries when they married. After dinner there is a respite, during which she either plays tennis or rides horseback. At times she and the king also take a motor ride or mount a motorcycle.

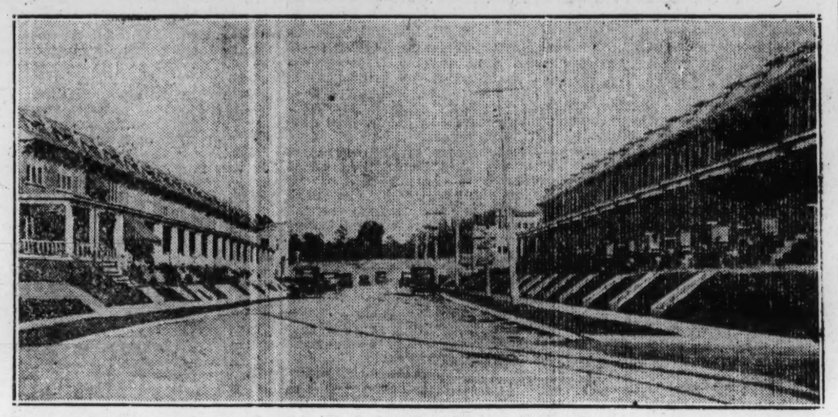

Princess Eudoxie excels as a linguist, speaking, reading and writing fluently English, German, French, Italian and Russian, and being thoroughly conversant with the literature of these languages.

Statuette 25,000 Years Old.

The statuette of a woman at least 25,000 years old, carved from what is believed to be the tusk of a mammoth, has been found near Vienna.

REPTILES AND INSECTS SUPPLIED FOR MOVIES

Curator Delivers Many Queer Specimens to Studios on Short Notice.

"MAKES UP" RATTLESNAKE

Hollywood, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Lizards or snakes from the parched desert sands; pythons from the jungles of South America, and all manner of insects and vermin that infest the woods are not uncommon in the supporting cast of modern movies.

Jack Allman, reptile curator extraordinary, furnishes the usual or unusual in these lines on short notice from the studio managers. Whether it be the elusive cockroach, needed to complete a scene in a lunch room, or a 30-foot alligator as a background for a jungle picture, Allman takes the order and either delivers from his stock or makes use of his 30 years' experience as a student of the wild to go out into the desert or mountains to get them.

Included in the weird list of crawling or flying things which the curator supplies the studios are lice, graybacks, ants, woodticks, centipedes, bats, turtles, tarantulas, frogs lizards, horned toads, grave robbers, Chinese dragons, Gila monsters, iguanas and dozens of different kinds of snakes.

Allman's specialty, however, is rattlesnakes. When he receives a rush order from a studio for a certain type of rattler with a certain number of rattles, he looks over his troupe and if none fits the order he proceeds to make one up.

For instance, a studio manager ordered a thirteen-rattled rattler. It was needed in a picture built around the so-called unlucky number 13. The nearest Allman could come to it was a seven-rattler. So he got out his supply of extra rattles and soaked them in warm water to soften them. After the seventh rattle on the snake's tail had likewise been softened, he slipped on the extra six rattles and delivered the thirteen-rattler on time.

In case the deserts or mountains of California do not provide the kind of specimens wanted, Allman gets them from the zoo or from importers.

sides and bottom of the gorge for the foundation of the dam across Stevenson creek was completed. April 19 the first concrete was placed in the wooden forms and on June 4 the last concrete had been laid to build the dam to a height of 60 feet.

The reservoir back of the dam can be filled not only from the water of the creek, which at times almost dries up, but from one of the great water supply tunnels of the hydroelectric plants of the Southern California Edison Co., which pierces the mountain just above this reservoir.

Consequently, the engineers are able to fill and empty the reservoir back of the experimental dam in a short time, just as one fills and empties a hand basin through the faucets and the waste pipe. This permits experiments to be made at will under conditions of full control, very much as if this huge "specimen" were in a laboratory.

Various measurements and other observations were begun with the first steps of construction. Water was first let into the reservoir for test purposes, to a depth of ten feet, on July first. Successively tests have been made with water 20 feet deep against the dam, then 30 feet, 40 feet, 50 feet, and finally 60 feet, level with the top.

Thirteen Tests Made.

Thirteen of these "load" tests have been made to date. With the water at each test level full series of measurements were carried out. Then the reservoir was emptied and other series of measurements taken with no water against the dam. These tests were made at night, for then the temperature changes are least during the long hours required for making and recording the many hundreds of measurements.

"The testing staff is now working up the notes preparatory to a preliminary report and plans for the next stage of experiment," said the announcement of the Engineering Foundation, "consequently, it would be premature to attempt a specific statement of results at this time.

"The experiment is proceeding satisfactorily and the committee and its staff believe that useful knowledge is being assembled which can be published in due time.

"Some of the measurements appear to differ from expectations based on prior practice and theory. Mature consideration must be given not only to the immediate results of tests on the experimental dam, but also to special tests of concrete and instruments made in laboratories of the University of California, California Institute of Technology, United States bureau of standards and the Portland Cement association, observations on dams in service, and much other information from many sources."

These tests, Mr. Flinn explained, are only a part of an extensive investigation which the foundation's arch dam committee is conducting. The chairman of the committee is Prof. Charles D. Marx, of Stanford university.

ACTIVITIES OF PARENT-TEACHERS

All notices for this column must be in the hands of the chairman by noon on the Wednesday preceding the Sunday on which publication is desired. Address, Mrs. J. N. Saunders, 3618 Porter street, northwest.

The first meeting of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations for the year will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the health center, 1464 Columbia road northwest. This meeting will be a real "get together" one. There will be no special speaker, but the chairman of each department of the organization's activities will be presented briefly and will outline work for the year. The many departments which carry on the work of the district congress are being reorganized to conform to those of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, of which the District is a branch. These departments cover every phase of work for the physical, mental and moral development of children. The monthly meetings of the District congress always are open to the public and every one interested in any phase of child welfare is cordially welcomed.

The executive board of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher asociations met Tuesday afternoon in the home of the president, Mrs. G. S. Rafter. Mrs. Rafter greeted members of the board. The members of the board were urged to give serious thought to the convention of the national congress which will be held next May in Oakland, Calif., and to which the District should send its quota of delegates. The report of the conference of officers of the congress was read and acted on. The board voted unanimously to recommend to the organization that a monthly Parent-Teacher bulletin be published. The membership chairman announced the slogan for this year will be "ten thousand members by Christmas."

Study Course No. 3 in the Child Welfare Magazine, based on Angelo Patri's newest book, "Problems of Childhood," will open in the November issue with an introduction by Patri. This magazine is the official organ of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The recently elected officers of the Eastern High School Parent-Teacher association are: President, Arthur G. Bishop; vice president, Mrs. G. G. Whitney; second vice president, Miss M. J. Watts; secretary, Mrs. V. L. Wilson, and treasurer, Fred Robinette, Lanham, Md.

The John Eaton Mothers club held the first meeting of the season Monday in the Cleveland Park Congregational church. A program for the procedure in future meetings was presented by Mrs. Frankland Jones, chairman of program committee. It met hearty approval. It was voted to buy a Trans Lux daylight lantern for the school. Most of the meeting was taken up in introducing the class mothers and in explaining aims and purposes of the club and what their executive board hoped to accomplish this year.

The Jackson Parent-Teacher association met last Tuesday afternoon in the school. Miss Ballinger, the new administrative principal, gave a talk, after which the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Floyd Shippen; vice president, Miss Ballinger; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Brooke; recording secretary, Mrs. Drysdale, and treasurer, Mrs. Owen.

The Petworth Home and School association held the first meeting of the year in the Petworth Methodist Episcopal church, October 5. Miss Frank, principal of the school, outlined some of the needs of the school. The association voted to appropriate $91 for improvement of the school grounds, athletic equipment and material for class rooms. The school grounds show a marked improvement as the result of the money spent last year. In the flag contest, Miss Herron's room won by having the largest percentage of parents present. The president, Mr. Haycraft, called the following chairmen to speak to the association of their work: Mrs. Griffin, membership; Mrs. Yaden, legislation; Mrs. Fant, school lunch; Mrs. Eicher, ways and means; Mrs. Church, publicity. After the business meeting there was a social hour and an old-fashioned spelling bee in which Mrs. Coswell "spelled down."

The Fillmore Parent-Teacher association will hold the first meeting of the year in the school Thursday. The speaker will be Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, president of the District of Columbia congress.

The Truesdale Parent-Teacher association will hold its first meeting of the year tomorrow in the school building, Ninth and Ingraham streets. The new president, Mrs. C. A. Berry, will preside.

The first meeting of the Morgan Parent-Teacher association was held Tuesday at 2:45 p. m. Dr. Joseph Murphy, director of medical inspection in the public schools, gave a talk on "Immunity From Contagious Diseases;" Miss Pauline Brunner, teacher of the fourth grade sang. The "honor picture" was awarded to the eighth grade for having the greatest number of parents present. Mrs. Harvey Wiley, president of the Morgan association, resigned. Her successor as yet has not been appointed.

The Parent-Teacher association of the Wheatley school held its opening meeting Thursday, October 7. Mrs. Wollett, president, presided. Prayer was dedicated to Mrs. Kissell, a member, who was killed by a fall during the summer. Letter of thanks was read by Mrs. Wollett from Mrs. Kissell's family for flowers sent by the association. Hedges were suggested to beautify the school lawn, but after debating, it was decided to find the cost of hedges and buy later. New officers were elected: President, Mrs. Walter C. Jones; vice president, Mrs. Hall; secretary, Mrs. Guy Lucas; treasurer, Mrs. Everett; reception committee, Mrs. George Foreman, Mrs. Wen; refreshments, Mrs. Morse; program, Mrs. Wollett, Miss Van Driesen. The new president made some plans for the coming year. The kindergarten received the reward for having the most mothers present at the meeting. Miss Austin, principal of the school, explained the meaning of intelligence tests, after which the meeting was adjourned.

The first meeting of the Johnson Parent-Teacher association was held at the school Tuesday at 3 p. m. Mrs. Williams, the president, presided. The new organization started with a splendid attendance. A large part of the membership was assigned to committee work. Plans were made for an active program. The association voted unanimously as opposed to any change in the present school hours. A committee was appointed to select a suitable reward for the room having the largest representation at the meetings. The officers for this year are: President, Mrs. A. L. Williams; vice president, Mrs. Howard Smith; secretary, Mrs. Clarence J. Fernald; corresponding secretary, Miss Brewer; treasurer, Mrs. O. G. Whitlow; auditor, Mrs. R. K. Williams.

The Park View Parent-Teacher association met in the Park View school October 7. This was the first meeting of the year. Mrs. Prescott, the president, presided. A letter was received from Mrs. Pollock, fifth grade teacher, thanking the group for the prize of $5 awarded her room for the largest attendance of mothers last year. Miss Fairly read a report on the sanitary conditions in the school, and told of the changes in the teaching staff. Mrs. Bannerman, legislative chairman, gave a report. Two resolutions were adopted, one in favor of the midcity market site, the other in favor of regional bathing pools for children. As the slogan for the District of Columbia this year is "Ten Thousand Strong," Mrs. J. N. Saunders, of the John Eaton school, was invited to tell of the method used to increase membership. She also told of the growth of the national Parent-Teacher association. It was decided to give a luncheon at the school last Thursday, the proceeds to be used for the children. The banner was won by two teachers this month, Miss Townsend, of the sixth grade, and Miss Byrne, of the eighth grade.

The Henry D. Cooke Home and School association held the first meeting of the year October 5 in the school, with the president, Mrs. W. H. Ross, presiding. Annual reports of the officers and various committees were read. Dr. Edward Q. Wilson and Mrs. A. C. Houghton explained the Schick test for diphtheria, which is to be given in the kindergarten and the first three grades. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the following: President, Mrs. Harry R. Fulton; first vice president, Mrs. A. A. Carter; second vice president, Miss E. W. Tracy; treasurer, Mrs. Edward C. Wilson, and secretary, Mrs. A. C. Houghton. The president appointed as additional members of the executive board Mrs. Ross, Mrs. E. C. Sassnet and Dr. Edward C. Wilson. Chairmen of the following committees also were appointed: Milk, Mrs. A. A. Carter; Schick test, Mrs. Houghton, and committee to secure additional land for the playgrounds, Percy Russell. Mrs. Coe and Mrs. Taylor entertained with music.

The Carbery Parent-Teacher association held its regular meeting at 2 p. m. The annual reports showed over $1,100 was handled by the treasurer and a balance of $255 now is on hand. Mrs. William H. Rowe, president, gave a report of the year's activities.

New officers elected were as follows: President, Mrs. John W. Davis; vice president, Mrs. William Dondera; secretary, Mrs. Norman Sandridge; treasurer, Mrs. Archie Moore. Chairmen appointed by Mrs. Davis were: Membership, Mrs. Frank Ludlow; refreshments, Mrs. Rosson, Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Harvey; revision, Mrs. John Carter; publicity, Mrs. Walter Hagen; philanthropic, Mrs. A. K. Wine; floral and visiting, Mrs. A. L. Grosskurth and Mrs. Gore.

It was voted to again serve milk to the children and the committee appointed to have charge is Mrs. William H. Rowe, chairman, and Mrs. Alfred Grosskurth, vice chairman, to be assisted by Mrs. Koockegey, Mrs. Fones and Mrs. Fox. Mrs. Wine and Mrs. Dondera were appointed delegates to the juvenile court and the Juvenile Protective association; John P. Smith, delegate to the Stanton Park Citizens association; Mrs. Rowe, Mrs. Sandridge, Mrs. Dondera and Mrs. Koockegey, delegates to the congress of the Parent-Teachers' association, and Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Dondera, delegates to the Public School association.

The school paper, the Carbery News, was a social and financial success. It will be published this year, the staff being assisted by the following committee of mothers; Mrs. Sandridge, Mrs. Rosson, Mrs. Hagen and Mrs. Carter.

Miss Hope Soule was appointed to act as the teacher hostess at the meetings. Miss Florence Mortimer, former principal, was present, and Miss Mathis, who now is principal, was greeted and extended a welcome by the association. The banner for attendance was won by the third grade, Miss Patterson, teacher.

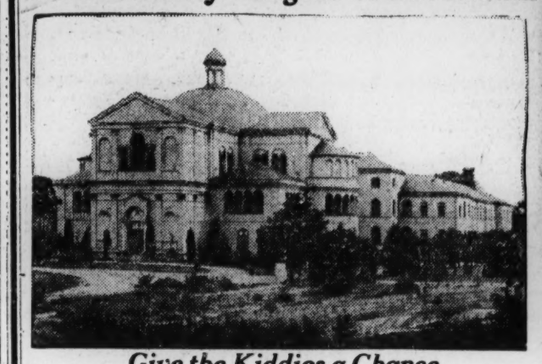

The association will give a Halloween party to the children October 29 in the school building. Mrs. Grover Koockegey is chairman. The association went on record as opposing any change in school hours, believing the danger of traffic for the children would still exist and that a better remedy might be in having organized patrols among the larger boys.

The Peabody-Hilton Parent-Teacher association held its first meeting of the year Tuesday afternoon, with Mrs. Mann, president, presiding. Sixty-five members and five new teachers were present. Several vocal solos were rendered by Miss Thompson, kindergarten teacher, accompanied at the piano by Miss Wood, fifth-grade teacher. Charlotte Hammer, a pupil, also gave several vocal solos. Readings were given by Miss Reichard, one of the kindergarten teachers. Mrs. G. W. Lady, delegate to the national convention of the Parent-Teacher association, told of one of the outstanding talks given there by Judge Kelly. She stressed the point that the Parent-Teacher association is a college for parents.

The following committees were appointed: Mrs. G. W. Lady, membership and hospitality; Mrs. Henry Jaeger, health; Mrs. L. H. Brown, press; Mrs. Hammer, refreshments; Mrs. Clements, floral; Mrs. Holt, clothes conservation; Mrs. Holt, delegate to the Public School association; Mrs. G. W. Lady, delegate to congress of Parent-Teacher association; Mrs. L. H. Brown, Mrs. G. W. Lady and Mrs. Holt, school committee. The school committee met in joint session with the school committee of the Stanton Park Citizens association Wednesday in the interest of the physical needs of the Hilton school.

RIP VAN WINKLE . . .

Driven from Home by the sharp tongue of his wife. Seeking rest and quiet in the wooded fastnesses of the Catskills. The dream—or was it a dream?—of dwarves and ninepins . . . Then twenty years sleep . . . The awakening of an old man, who saw no change until, faltering and ragged, he wandered back to his village. And there the world he had known, had vanished.

Nature's Beauty, though new with each Spring and every rustling breeze, lasts forever. Even to poor forgotten Rip, it was familiar . . . In Rock Creek Park Estates, too—over one hundred Homesite acres "truly a part of the Park"—Nature's Beauty will remain forever protected. However fast Washington may change, years hence Rock Creek Park Estates still will be lovely . . . And how perfect it will be, for you, to enjoy its Homesite exquisiteness during these coming years!

COMMUNITY CENTER NEWS

The winter schedule of the community center department features a tremendous activity in athletics throughout the city. Never before in the history of the department has there been such demand for gymnasium practice, not only from athletic clubs of boys and men, but also of girls and women. Mrs. L. W. Hardy, general secretary of the community centers, has charge of the affiliation of all these groups, using school buildings under the auspices of the community center department, and since the beginning of this season has registered approximately 60 groups for gymnasium practice to meet one night a week during the winter. There also is a long waiting list.

Most of these organizations meet at Central High, East Washington, Columbia Heights, Southeast, and Dunbar centers. Not only are the gymnasiums available for practice, but match games frequently are played under community center supervision.

A Beautiful SPANISH VILLA Aztec Creation

No. 9 East Underwood Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

One-half Square East of Connecticut Ave., Between Chevy Chase and Columbia Country Clubs.

This Artistic Home With Its Hanging Balconies, Its Gay Awnings, Medieval Gateway, and Roof Garden, Is a Complete Replica of Old Spain

The finest example of this type ever attempted in Washington, with the favor of old Spain, rooted on the strangest and oldest civilization in the world, the Aztec, with the adaptation of the captivating Mediterranean style.

One senses the charm of the alluring Old World atmosphere upon stepping from the street to the winding, colorful flagstone walk leading to the massive front door set in a deep revealed arch of solid masonry.

From the front door one enters the stair hall and here gets the first glimpse of the charming interior with its beautiful arches and polychrome grills, together with walls of warm pastel shades textured in true Spanish style.

Constructed of best materials on the market, under constant supervision of the architect and builder, this home is ideal to the smallest detail—sacrificing none of its comfort and modernity although unique and unusual.

HOMES EXPOSITION ROOM OF SAMPLES FOR HOUSESEEKER

Chance for Person Who Becomes Tired of Search, Says Norris.

PROPERTY OFFERINGS FROM ALL OVER TOWN

Motion Pictures and Airplane Views to Aid Aurora Hills Story.

Henry C. Morris, president of Aurora Hills Homes, Inc., the developer of the "15 minutes from F street" subdivision, in an interview yesterday expressed unusual views on the possible advantages of the coming better homes exposition.

When asked just how the home seeker would gain through such an exposition, he said: "Sometimes I don't wonder at the fact so many persons who should own their homes continue to pay the landlord. The man who starts out to look for a home soon finds out that, in order to choose properly, he should devote months to looking at properties, and, having his own daily work to attend to, he is unwilling to devote that time and energy to his search. So he either gives up in despair or he continues to look at houses during odd moments, each house he sees serving to add to his confusion.

"It would be an ideal condition if he could do his buying in sort of a sample room, and I believe the better homes exposition will be just that. I believe the real estate board is going to show everything necessary to enable an intelligent man to make up his mind as to which home property suits his needs best. He will find represented every branch of the building industry and every section of Washington and vicinity in which homes are offered.

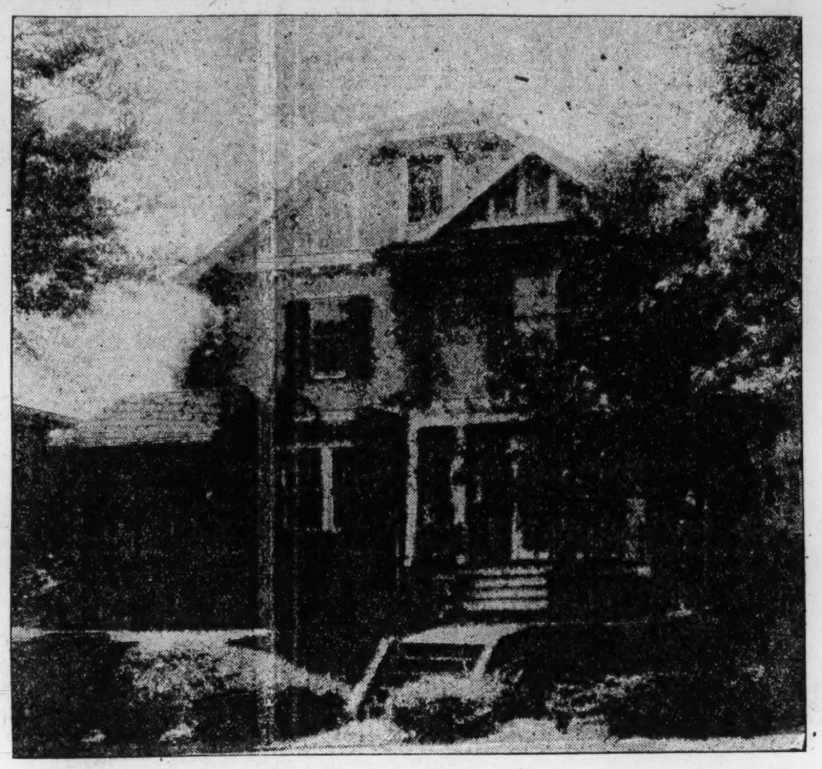

"Personally, I am glad of the opportunity offered us to present our Aurora Hills homes under the same roof with the homes offered by other builders. We know there is a definite and wide demand for the houses we produce, and it pleases us to be able to reach that demand in such a comfortable and effective manner.

"We are going to present Aurora Hills so that any person coming to our booth can take away a definite idea of what we offer. Our story is going to be told by moving pictures, by pictures taken from the ground and from an aeroplane, and by printed and spoken word, so that it will be possible for a man to spend ten minutes at our booth and then buy one of our houses with the confidence that he is buying exactly what he wants.

"The other exhibitors are going to do the same thing, so this exposition is certain to become an annual event that will be looked forward to by every home seeker.

"This exposition, I predict, is going to be a splendid success—particularly for those folk who ought to have homes, but have become disgusted at looking."

HIGH SCHOOLS INVITED TO EXHIBIT OF HOMES

Washington Real Estate Board Issues Letter to All District Pupils.

Following out its intention of making the better homes and building exposition, which opens Monday in the Washington auditorium, an educational feature, the Washington real estate board has sent an invitation to high school students of the District of Columbia, through the superintendent of schools, to attend the exposition. They will be admitted free.

The letter suggests that the children be allowed to attend the show in the afternoon under the guidance of their teachers. Every accommodation has been arranged for the students.

Colonial Staircase To Be Seen in Exhibit

The exhibit of Murphy & Ames, well known lumber and millwork manufacturers of Rosslyn and Falls Church, Va., at the Better Homes and Building exposition in the auditorium this week, consists of a "life size" stair entrance of colonial design.

This concern also furnished the material for the model bungalow.

MODEL HOME TO MAKE DEBUT AS SHOW OPENS

De Sibour Company Constructs Bungalow for Exhibit in Record Time.

ARCHITECTURE OF SPAIN

The model bungalow which is to be the outstanding features of the Better Homes Exposition, will be ready for the opening Monday night. This residence is permanently constructed of Stresbuilt tile and designed by James E. Cooper, local architect, and constructed by the DeSibour Construction Co.

The construction of the model home is something like the magic of Alladin's Lamp. The home was completed 71 hours after the material was delivered at the auditorium. Work was started on the masonry at 7:30 a. m. and was completed at 3 p. m. of the same day. Jas. B. Sparks, mason contractor, had this work in charge. Rough carpentry also was started at 7 o'clock and was complete within 12 hours.

Following this the National Mortar Co. plastered the house with stucco and within 8 hours this work was finished. Trim and millwork was finished in equal time. Crane & Co. had the plumbing in charge.

The model home is 35x26 feet in size and is of Spanish architecture. It contains two bedrooms, a living room, bath room, kitchen, patio and breakfast room, all of which are of the usual size for a home of this type.

The residence is furnished by the American Furniture Co.

OPENING ANNOUNCED OF SCHUYLER-ARMS

Apartment Building Has Eight Stories and Was Carefully Planned.

Shannon & Luchs, Inc., report the opening of Schuyler-Arms, an eight-story modern apartment building, at 1954 Columbia road. This building was built by Goldsmith & White, and presents to Washington's apartment market a housing edifice embodying many of the most modern and scientific home features.

The location is particularly desirable, since it is just off one of Washington's main thoroughfares Connecticut avenue. A high elevation insures sunlight and airy apartments. The many unusual features make it outstanding in apartment design and efficiency.

The structure has two elevators and a switchboard which will be in service 24 hours.

APPRAISAL REPORT HEARD BY REALTORS

Committee in Ten Years Has Passed on Property Worth $45,000,000.

One of the interesting features of the Washington Real Estate board's annual meeting held at Wardman Park hotel Monday night was the report of the appraisal committee submitted by Horace G. Smithy, chairman of that body. During the last ten years the appraisal committee has appraised more than $45,000,000 worth of property. This activity has been the result of a great amount of work and detail study on the part of the various committees, particularly those in the past five years.

As many as 1,113 individual pieces of land ranging from comparatively small values to big industries have been appraised by this committee and the various personnel comprising it. A great growth in this activity is indicated in the fact that in 1916 the appraisal committee examined nineteen pieces of property at a value of $471,000; in 1918, 137 pieces of property with value of more than $2,000,000; 1925 more than $9,000,000 worth of property was appraised and in 1926 all records were broken when $10,376,987 worth of property was appraised by the board.

A great amount of property was examined for public and charitable institutions and the Federal government free of charge by this committee. The newly-elected committee is composed of H. Clifford Bangs, G. Calvert Bowie, William A. Hill, Arthur Carr, William J. Flather, jr., J. Dallas Brady and Clarence Dodge.

This price represents the actual cost of these homes. The owner, feeling the supply of houses greater than the demand has authorized us to make this GREAT SACRIFICE—WHICH IS THE PURCHASER'S GAIN.

Don't confuse these homes with the usual speculative house, as they were built by a company specializing in large, high-grade residences, and the same skilled mechanics and class of work have been used in their construction—which makes them worth approximately 25% more than the average small house.

The exteriors are of half timber and stucco over interlocking hollow tile. Indiana limestone has been used in the window sills and the hardware and wall paper are the best obtainable. The trim throughout is Tupelo wood, with mahogany stained doors, and is finished in cream. Crane instantaneous hot-water heater, built-in refrigerator and bath, oak floors, fifteen-foot space between houses, large lot.

PARENTS MUST SETTLE CUSTODY OF CHILDREN

Courts Refuse to Act Except in Suits for Maintenance or Divorce.

DECLINE TO ISSUE WRITS

Mothers and fathers of children who are separated and who are at odds over the question of which of them shall have the children can no longer appeal to the equity courts to decide the question of the custody of the offspring unless this question arises incident to a suit for maintenance or divorce, according to a ruling made recently by Justice Wendell P. Stafford.

The courts have already decided that this question can not be determined by one or the other of the parents of a child suing out a writ of habeas corpus. In both instances it was determined that the father and the mother are the natural guardians of a child or children and that one parent has as much right to the custody of the offspring as the other, or in other words, both parents own the child or children. Even questions concerning the fitness of either parent to retain control or custody of children can not be raised now except in suits for maintenance or divorce.

The jurisdiction of the court to entertain a petition in equity filed by a mother to obtain custody of an infant daughter was questioned by Crandall Mackey as counsel for the father. Mackey filed a motion to dismiss and the court granted the motion.

This means that hereafter the mother who wants to get a child away from its father must sue for maintenance, a limited divorce or an absolute divorce and that a father must sue for either a limited or an absolute divorce before the court can acquire jurisdiction over the offspring.

HOUSE NUMBERS LIGHTED.

Simple and Inexpensive Device Provides Great Convenience.

Illuminated house numbers are among the helpful small things which aggregate large returns in convenience and comfort. These may be numbers painted on glass panels, similar to glass window signs; the panels being hung by chains between porch pillars or in such position on the front of the house that porch or hall lights shine through them. Another type is a small metal box with glass panel in one side, on which numbers are painted, a tiny light burning inside the box.

Anyone who has traversed dark streets at night searching for numbers which apparently did not exist will appreciate this simple and inexpensive guide.

AT THE CHESS TABLE

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

A game which aided materially in allowing United States Champion Frank J. Marshall to carry off the honors in the recent masters' tournament held at Chicago was his victory over Kupchik in the tenth round. From the standpoint of excellent play it ranks as one of the best efforts the tourney produced. Marshall added a touch of brilliance by offering a rook sacrifice on his twenty-fourth turn. Kupchik wisely refrained from accepting the sacrifice, as the loss of his queen would have followed. Kupchik failed to foresee his opponent's plan, and on his twentieth move went astray to the extent of placing the queen on a pobr square, after which Marshall speedily forced the issue.

Newell W. Banks extended Carlos Torre to the utmost before he finally succumbed before the latter's clever end-game tactics. The game will repay careful study from the forty-ninth move on. Against sturdy opposition from Banks, Torre played on relentlessly, and carefully maneuvered to a win.

I. Kashdan, after playing through two important New York city tournaments without losing a game, was expected to make his presence felt at Chicago. The champion of the Rice-Progressive club of Brooklyn actually made serious threats as a contender until well along in the final rounds, when he weakened. His loss to Maroczy, however, struck a serious blow to his hopes and he eventually failed to land a prize by the veriest fraction. Against Torre he played a conservative game and finally managed to emerge with a draw. The scores follow:

Capital City Notes.

Serious play at the Capital City Chess club is temporarily dormant pending the commencement of the three tourneys listed last week. Roberts and Bishop, however, played a long engagement in the "round robin" to decide the winner of the recent Kriegspiel tourney and the partie resulted in a victory for the former.

Under the conditions of play the three contestants—Bishop, Mutchler and Roberts—must play each other twice. Drawn games, unlike those in the main tournament, will be scored as a half point. The one emerging with the best score will be declared the winner.

Solution to Problem.

The key to problem No. 176 is Kt-Kt6. Among those sending in solutions were J. W. Harris, F. B. Walker, E. J. Kassel, W. Rosett, Max Pugatsky, Daniel Breeskin, Dell Floyd and P. C. Leary.

Solvers differ in their opinions of this teaser. E. J. Kassel writes: "Apparently the key is of little importance. However, it opens a field of beautiful variations."

W. Rosett thinks "there was plenty of food for thought in this one."

Max Pugatsky says: "If there has ever been a more diverting problem, I want to see it. Please shoot some more of these brain-cudgellers to your chess dopesters."

BETTER HOME SHOW IN AUDITORIUM OPEN TOMORROW NIGHT

REAL ESTATE BOARD SPONSORING EXHIBIT

Visitors to Be Admitted at 7 o'Clock; Will Run Through Saturday.

The Washington auditorium, occupying an entire square at Nineteenth street and New York avenue northwest, will be transformed into an idealized business section at 7 p. m. tomorrow, when the Better Homes and Building Exposition of the Washington Real Estate Board formally opens. The exposition will continue six days.

When the lights flash on and the doors are thrown open, the eyes of the visitors will be greeted by a little city of trim, neat and orderly shops, busy with various activities.

The Washington auditorium has provided accommodations for many enterprises in its short lifetime, but never before has it housed such an exhibition. The exposition will stand out as extraordinary even in comparison with all the shows and exhibits that have been held in the great house.

Following the opening, the exposition will open at 1 o'clock every afternoon and continue open until 11 o'clock at night, on each day thereafter through Saturday.

The exposition, it is declared, will be composed of approximately 160 booths or sections, about 75 of which will be on the main floor and 85 in the basement. The entrance will be on the Nineteenth street side and will lead to the basement, where all the heavier exhibits will be located. The lighter exhibits will be on the main floor, which will be accessible from the basement.

All Modern Improvements.

The show will be composed of all things new, all things modern and all improvements for the home. To name everything that will be arranged before the view of the visitor would require a catalogue. An attempt will be made, however, to tell in a general way of the great diversity of things.

The exhibitors and the real estate board are "leaving no stone unturned" to demonstrate how to make a "model home." Indeed, officials declare, the intention of those in charge is to make this exposition the "model" for all future expositions.

One of the features of the exposition will be music, provided by Happy Walker's Golden Pheasant orchestra.

Another feature will be a series of sixteen lectures, two in the afternoon and two at night, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The lectures will embrace a great number of subjects pertaining to home ownership, real estate, interior decoration of the home, landscaping the grounds, and labor-saving devices and the like.

Exhibitors to Demonstrate.

Then a large number of exhibitors themselves will conduct demonstrations. These demonstrations will include everything from the best building material to the latest radio.

The purpose of the exposition, explained in detail, is manifold. One of the main things is the encouragement of home ownership.

Wherever these expositions have been held in the country, it is said, a noticeable stimulation in the purchase of homes and in the building of homes has followed. The Washington Real Estate Board has been encouraged to organize and present the exposition by the success in other cities.

However, the ownership of the home is emphasized indirectly. The exposition will demonstrate the improvement of the home; it will show the way in which an ideal, economical, modern home, equipped with all modern conveniences, may be procured.

Still, however, the educational features are of wider scope. Better building practices, better architectural practices, the better equipment of the home, the more orderly and artistic arrangement, the greater economy of furnishing the home and of management, more modern methods of heating and ventilation, improved methods of plumbing and the proper landscaping of the lawn—all are included in the program of education and demonstration.

Aim at Instruction.

The prime object of the real estate board is to make the exposition as instructive as possible. That is the reason lectures have been arranged and so many special features devised.

The "model house" will be situated on the basement floor. It will be a full-sized, five-room bungalow of Spanish type. It is built according to the modern idea of compactness. The living room is supposed to be the dining room on special occasions. Of the five rooms, two are bedrooms and the rest are a kitchen, breakfast room, bathroom and living room.

It is intended to demonstrate with the house all that is ideal for a home, from the building materials to the landscaping of the lawn.

The house will have a regular dirt lawn, and shrubbery and trees will be properly placed.

The wall will be left open in various places to demonstrate the building material used. The bungalow will be furnished in the proper manner, both as to arrangement and pieces.

The most up-to-date bath has been installed, and the best in electrical refrigeration, heating, ventilating, lighting and plumbing are included.

Built by Local Firms.

It has been built by a number of local concerns, under the direction of Henri de Sibour, of the De Sibour Construction Co.

The construction was accomplished in record time. The house was built in 71 hours, it is said. This rapidity illustrates the intensity of the work and preparations which have been in progress in the auditorium the last several days. The actual work began Wednesday. It is estimated that a total of $250,000 will be expended in the exposition.

The walls of the model house are of Stresbilt tile and are finished in stucco. The house is equipped with a hearth and the chimney is of the most engaging artistic beauty. It resembles to some extent an antique bell tower. The windows are not equipped with showy jambs, but have that compact fitting in the walls which the mind associates with enchanting home scenes. The true Spanish quaintness is contained in the construction.

Another special feature will be the exhibit of the Washington chapter of the American Institute of Architects in the lobby on the main floor. This display will be composed largely of model blue prints and pictures of model homes.

Financing First Move.

Naturally the first thing to be considered in the building of a home is how it is to be financed. In the wide gamut of demonstration this matter will not be omitted. In fact, a special section will be set aside in which the most desirable means for financing the building of a home will be illustrated.

Then comes the matter of insurance, and there will also be an insurance section. The actual home life is included. The Visiting Nurses association will have a booth devoted to the demonstration of proper nursing in the home and the hygiene of the care of the sick. The insurance and finance booths, as well as the

NEW SCOTT GAS RANGE FOR HOMES EXPOSITION

PRINCIPLE OF COAL STOVE

An exhibition at the model homes and building exposition in the auditorium this week, one that is destined to create particular pride, is that of the Scott Gas Range Co., which is exhibiting the new Scott range, which is built on the same principle as a coal range. This is a Washington product, and at the present time there are more than 500 in use in Washington homes.

The Scott is like all modern ranges, and with that it has taken advantage of wasted space, especially in the principle of the covered top, which permits two pots to boil with one burner lighted and the water heater gathering hot water also with the same cooking burner in operation.

This Washington-made range marks an advancement in gas-range construction. It combines all the features of every range construction and has the speed and economy of any range built. Heat is used for three purposes. All burners are protected from being clogged. Nothing will get out of order, owing to its simplicity. The range is one that Washington users are proud of—proud to call it a Washington product, and it is destined, under the new management of Peter M. Dorsch, to become one of the outstanding manufactures of the National Capital.

FRIES, BEALL & SHARP IS LARGEST EXHIBITOR

Better Homes Exposition to Contain Eight Booths of Firm's Products.

The largest exhibitor at the Better Homes and Building exposition this week is the Fries, Beall & Sharpe Co., which is exhibiting its products in eight booths and consisting of Lawson Odorless, Radiant gas heaters, best wall plaster, wall board, American plaster, Elastica stucco, Atlas white cement and Fire King gas ranges, the latter being equipped with the gas saving Robert Shaw oven regulator.

With this array of exhibits the model American home is well represented in new and modern furnishings and appliances.

This concern is well known in the city and is retailer and wholesaler of building material, hardware, plaster and cement.

MODEL BUNGALOW TO FEATURE EXPOSITION

Here is a full-sized bungalow that has been erected on the floor of the Washington auditorium. It is one of the exhibits of the Better Homes and Building exposition. James E. Cooper was the designer. It was built by the De Sibour Construction Co.

4 SMALL THEATERS WILL DEMONSTRATE HOME HEALTH WORK

The local public library, the American Red Cross and the Visiting Nurses society have all manifested considerable interest in the better homes and building exposition being conducted by the Washington real estate board at the Washington auditorium, beginning tomorrow, as a means of conveying to the general public the importance of their work in bettering the home.

The American Red Cross will have among its exhibits four miniature theaters in which they will demonstrate nutrition work, particularly as applied to the home and children. Health work in schools and for the benefit of school children and general Red Cross work will be demonstrated from time to time by representatives of this organization.

Hand-painted panels demonstrating the latest activities of the American Red Cross and some of the problems they have to face and solve will also be part of the exhibit.

Will Explain Nurses' Work.

The Visiting Nurses Society of the District of Columbia will also demonstrate its work among the citizens of Washington. It will show what steps it takes toward teaching mothers the proper care and methods of handling children, the service they render to the community when visiting the homes of the sick in the National Capital and in general all a visiting nurse is expected to do and her contribution to the alleviation of suffering.

Officials of the public library will have on display a series of books and magazines dealing with every phase of home building, housekeeping, gardening, financing and real estate. They will maintain a booth where persons interested in obtaining books from the library can register and they will demonstrate the importance of the public library toward the bettering of the home. They will give away a list of books dealing with the various phases of housekeeping and home ownership.

BETTER HOMES SHOW ON TOMORROW NIGHT

nursing and health booth, will be on the main floor.

The Washington Public Library also comes to the assistance of the enterprise, and will have a booth in which the best books on the home will be exhibited.

An extensive electrical exhibit has been arranged by the Electric league. The Master Plumbers association also will have a comprehensive plumbing exhibit. The Better Homes in America association will have an educational booth.

Upstairs the sections demonstrating furniture and decorations will be located. There will be sections on art in the home and on music.

On the basement floor will be exhibits of building materials, brick, tile, special floor composition material, and the like, and also the electrical, plumbing, heating, kitchen, refrigeration and ventilating exhibits.

One feature is the exhibits for developing communities. These will be featured by attractive designs and large painted maps.

The real estate board will have headquarters at the exposition, and, will give information as to what the realtors stand for and what they are endeavoring to do in the building of the city.

The exhibitors will be permitted to sell merchandise and to take orders.

There will be a lunchroom on the basement floor for the accommodation of visitors.

Preparations for the exposition were begun last July. The first thing on the program was the appointment of a committee to arrange the exposition. Clarence F. Donohoe, then president of the real estate board, is chairman of the committee. A large portion of the work of organization has been under the direction of James P. Schick, executive secretary and treasurer of the board.

Besides Mr. Donohoe, other members of the committee are John F. Maury, now president of the board; William C. Miller, Albert E. Landvoigt, Jesse H. Hedges, Theodore M. Judd and Ben T. Webster.

Bathroom Worth $6,500 At Homes' Exposition

A $6,500 bathroom designed for the purpose of demonstrating the great advance in this important household department, has been erected as part of the Better Homes and Building exposition to be held at the Washington auditorium.

This bathroom will show the latest scientific equipment in every detail together with the most modern scientific advancement in plumbing arrangements.

SPANISH BUNGALOW MODEL TO BE SHOWN

Fully Equipped and Furnished Full-Size House to Be on View.

The model bungalow which is to be one of the outstanding features of the better homes and building exposition will be ready for the opening tomorrow evening. This residence has been designed by James E. Cooper, local architect, and is being constructed by the De Sibour Construction Co. The house is 35 by 26 feet in size and of Spanish architecture. It will contain two bedrooms, a living room, bathroom, kitchen, patio and breakfast room of the usual size in a house of this type.

The residence will be fully equipped and furnished and will stand as a model for those who are interested in better landscaping, better furnishing and better construction.

Workmen have been engaged for almost a week in constructing this bungalow, which will be complete in every detail with the exception of a basement.

Spanish Houses Open In Lyon Village Area

Lyon & Fitch, Inc., owners, operators and exclusive agents of Lyon Village, the development in Arlington county, have two unique houses of Spanish design open for inspection in Granada terrace. These houses have been constructed with every detail in harmony with good building practice and architectural taste.

SCOTT "FOR THRIFT"

It uses the cooking-top heat not only to boil, stew and fry on top of the stove, but also to heat the oven for baking and roasting everything except quick expansion baking, such as yeast powder biscuits and muffins, for which an efficient oven burner has been provided.

The covering over the cooking-top means that the surplus heat from the gas, instead of passing off into the air, is confined and used.

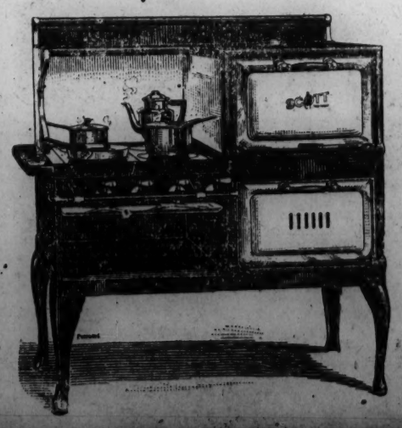

Read these facts---The Scott Range

It is easy to operate.

It contains no mechanism to get out of order.

All burners are protected from becoming clogged.

The two burners next to the oven do double duty; they heat the cooking-top, and heat the baking oven.

The baking oven can be heated at any time independent of the cooking-top, for a very efficient oven burner serves both the baking and broiling ovens.

Patented damper control permits directing the heat to the location desired.

Furnished also with a water back for heating water while you cook your meal.

The Scott Range is built to suit the needs of any family.

Entire top a cooking surface. Hot top makes it possible to keep foods hot after the regular meal is served.

You will have to see this range to appreciate the service it will give you. It will interest you.

ONCE A GENERAL'S HEADQUARTERS.
A beautiful, old-time home, situated in a grove of trees and overlooking the Potomac and Pike branch valleys, and yet but 30 minutes from the business section. Built over 90 years ago of the finest Georgia pine, it stands a substantial and delightful testimonial to the industry, judgment and taste of our forefathers. Its eleven rooms are beautifully proportioned and the broad halls upstairs and down the high ceilings and the many open fireplaces give an atmosphere of fine old time hospitality. The grounds comprise three acres of exceptionally fertile ground and boast numerous fruit trees and really lovely roses, some of which bloom late into the fall. The owner is leaving for New York and must sacrifice the place.

COZY BUNGALOWS CHARMING TWO-STORY HOUSES
DETACHED, OF COURSE

The bungalows contain a large living room, dining room, bedroom, kitchen and pantry and bath. The floors are of hardwood. A cellar of unusual size extends under the entire house and in it are double stationary washtubs, coal bin and a splendid hot-water heating plant. Also a comfortable front porch of attractive design as well as a back porch.

The two-story houses are particularly designed for comfort and attractiveness. On the first floor there is a generous sized living room, dining room, kitchen and a very large pantry. An attractive staircase leads to the second floor, where are situated two bedrooms that are unusually homelike and cozy. Of course they have a hot-water heating plant, hardwood floors, large dry cellars with stationary washtubs and splendid front and back porches which add so much to one's comfort.

All of these homes are on exceptionally large lots and are detached and in a community of detached homes.

Just one-half block from the car line. A salesman is there all day to assist you and to answer any questions.
Drive out Rhode Island Ave. N.E. to Newton St. N.E. and turn right, or the trolley line comes directly out Rhode Island Ave. to Newton St. N.E. and it is only a walk of half a block.

REMEMBER—LOW CASH PAYMENTS AND MONTHLY PAYMENTS ARE SMALLER THAN RENT. YOU CAN NOT AFFORD TO MISS THEM.

NEW BRICK HOME WITH MANY QUALITY FEATURES
If you are looking for a truly unusual opportunity to acquire a thoroughly modern, well-built residence in a select NORTHWEST section—this is it. Here you have a location adjacent to a magnificent six-acre estate and bordering on an avenue that is part of the National Capital permanent park system. You have a tapestry brick dwelling a FULL 20 FEET WIDE that represents the height of modern construction excellence. Among the many features you will wish to personally inspect and study are the gray stone walls inclosing the front terrace, the wide front porch, six large bright rooms, the full-tiled bath with built-in porcelain fixtures and shower, the model kitchen with built-in refrigerator and one-piece porcelain sink, the hot-water heating system with Aero radiation, the numerous roomy and conveniently located closets, the fine oak floors throughout, the breakfast porch opening from dining room, the Keystone automatic water heater, the lavatory in basement, the roomy sleeping porch, the stationary laundry trays, the numerous electric outlets in all rooms and the rear yard sodded like that in front. We invite you to compare this home and the value it offers you with any other now on the Washington market. And we offer to arrange reasonable terms of payment to suit your convenience! Let us show you this exceptional residence—or phone us for directions to visit it yourself, if you prefer!!!

GIRLS FRIENDLY

The annual branch supper of Nativity chapel will be given Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. in the parish hall, with the diocesan officers as the guests of honor. Mrs. H. W. Pote is president of this branch, which includes the classes at Resurrection and Annunciation chapels.

The fall council meeting of the Washington diocesan organization of the society was held Friday evening in Epiphany Parish hall. Officers were elected as follows: Mrs. E. B. Neigs, president; Mrs. Grahame H. Powell, first vice president; Mrs. Ben Hellen, second vice president; Mrs. George Pariseau, secretary, and Miss Ethel Grimes, treasurer.

The department heads were elected according to the reorganization of the society. Finance, Mrs. John C. Boyd; membership and candidates, Mrs. A. S. Stewart; publicity, Miss Alida A. Haines; service to the church, including missions, Mrs. Mary C. D. Johnson; social service, Miss Louise Beall; holiday houses, Mrs. W. H. Woodward, and younger members, Miss Elizabeth Walton.

The two members at large of the executive committee elected were Mrs. H. C. Bolton and Mrs. John C. Boyd. The newly elected members at large to the diocesan council were Mrs. Lloyd Smoot, Miss Clara Nourse, Miss Helen Mulliken, Miss Mary Addison Ingle, Mrs. John Gale, Miss Frances Crown, Miss Sheila Balfour, Miss Emma Abbott, and Mrs. C. H. Abbott.

Plans for the third biennial conference, G. F. S. A., of the province of Washington to be held in Wilmington, Del., November 19, 20 and 21, were announced.

The annual G. F. S. bazaar for the benefit of the Holiday house will be held Tuesday, November 23, at St. John's Parish hall. Mrs. H. C. Bolton was appointed to represent the society at the provincial synod in Bethlehem, Pa., October 26, 27 and 28.

Miss Mary Radford, parish social service worker, addressed the branch at Epiphany church Monday evening. The weekly supper was held with between 40 and 50 girls present and the following classes began work: Literature, Mrs. Grace Berry; personal religion, Mrs. W. E. Bolen, and expression and dramatics, Mrs. McMullin. Miss Ireland will organize a class in community singing on October 25.

Six members and one working associate, Mrs. John J. Cowan, were admitted into the society Monday at St. James chapel, Bowie, Md. Miss Marjorie Zug is president of that branch.

The candidates at Epiphany chapel met Monday afternoon for the first time this fall. Miss Elizabeth Keyser, branch president, is also in charge of the children. Classes were organized as follows: Basketry, Miss Ruth Harlan; knitting, Miss Tayloe Logie; scrapbooks, Mrs. Riddiford; primary sewing, Mrs. Davis; advanced sewing, Miss Agnes Shands, and kindergarten, Miss Alida Haines.

Miss Mary Boyden, for several years the parish visitor in Epiphany chapel, will take up her new work in St. Paul's church, Rock Creek parish, next week.

The branch at St. Paul's church, Rock Creek, met Monday evening.

MT. VERNON HOME SPIRIT IN BOOTH AT EXPOSITION

CHARM IN FURNISHINGS

Probably one of the most unusual booths at the better homes and building exposition under the auspices of the Washington Real Estate Board at the auditorium, is that of the Edson W. Briggs Co., owners and developers of Rock Creek park estates.

"Obviously it was impractical," said Mr. Briggs, "to attempt to transplant any of the natural loveliness of Rock Creek park estates into a booth at the exposition, so we have tried to show the people of Washington the home spirit that can be so charmingly developed at the estates."

That this has been done in the most novel way will be apparent to every exposition goer. For in the booth has been recreated a corner from a room of George Washington's Mount Vernon. The quaintness of colonial furnishing has been arranged in such manner that all the charm of the old colonial home is felt instantly. In such detail has the thing been carried out that a colonial coat, cane and snuff box are included in the setting.

The connection between this bit of "atmosphere" and Rock Creek park estates is established through a large reproduction of one of the historical series of advertisements which have been appearing for several months in The Post; this particular advertisement suggests George Washington at Mount Vernon and draws an interesting contrast between his later years there and the home life which Washingtonians can now achieve at Rock Creek park estates.

Altogether the booth is one of exceptional interest and definitely adds to the attraction of the exposition for all those to whom home and homesite beauty hold their appeal.

French War Diploma Received by Negro

Col. Charles W. Fillmore, for many years an employe in the Treasury Department, who served overseas with the 369th infantry, the negro "Fifteenth regiment," yesterday announced receipt from the United States War Department of a French diploma as a portion of the award of the croix de guerre, with bronze star, given him for bravery at the French general headquarters in 1918.

The diploma is of unusual size and has been framed by Col. Fillmore for the benefit of negro soldiery and of his posterity.

Mrs. Charles W. Voigt's class in arts and crafts is making lampshades, and Miss Sadie Carlisle is instructing a probationer's class for membership in the society, whose admission service probably will be held late in November.

Zichtl and Baumgarten To Have Joint Exhibition

One of the most interesting exhibits at the Better Homes and Building Exposition is the booth of the A. Zichtl Company and J. Baumgarten & Sons exhibiting jointly bookbinding and rubber stamps and stencils.

With the exhibit of the A. Zichtl Co. there will be an exhibit of book covers, embossed and handfinished books and bookbacks, some of which are gold inlaid and represents the highest excellence of the art of bookmaking and bookbinding.

The firm of A. Zichtl Co. is the oldest bookbinding concern in the city and boasts of a record known virtually all over the globe. It was this establishment that bound the famous pigskin library which the late President Roosevelt carried on his African hunting trip, and bound for a South American republic twenty volumes in red morocco which was a wedding present to the late President Wilson.

The exhibit of J. Baumgarten & Sons is no less interesting. This being the oldest stamp and stencil making concern in the city and was the designer and maker of the great seal of Confederacy as well as manufacturers of the great seal of the United States.

Hundred of seals, stamps and designs have been worked out and made for various consuls and embassies.

BEWARE OF COLDS CHILLS AND FEVER

This is the season when dangerous chills, fevers, grippe and colds make you achy, weak, unfit for work or sleep. Take Elixir Babek in small doses every half hour. Relief QUICK. Restores appetite and energy.—Druggists, 65c.

ELIXIR BABEK

DARKEN GRAY HAIR BY USING SAGE TEA

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home, is mussy and troublesome. For only 75 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.—Adv.

WHEN KIDNEYS HURT DRINK MORE WATER

If Your Back Aches or Bladder Bothers, Take a Little Salts.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels

Give "California Fig Syrup" if cross, bilious or feverish

If your little one is out of sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

YOUNG LIFE SUBJECT OF NEW PLAY

Boothe, Gleason and Truex, producers of "The Challenge of Youth," the play by Ashley Miller which comes to Poli's theater for the week beginning tonight, have started the new season by producing two plays written by actors. "Sure Fire," their first production, is the work of Rolph Murphy, well-known in stock both as a director and actor. "The Challenge of Youth" is from the pen of Ashley Miller, an actor, formerly associated with Ernest Truex.

Mr. Miller has temporarily deserted the films in order to concentrate on this play, which has been staged by Priestly Morrison. "The Challenge of Youth" is an exciting and gripping play, but because of its subject matter it has to be handled very delicately. Rehearsals were supervised by Mr. Miller, who made it his duty to see that the subtleties and nuances of his play were rendered in the exact manner he intended. The result is an engrossing play about conditions and people of genuine interest to every one.

In the cast are players chosen not because of what they have accomplished in the past, but because of what they can do with their present roles. They are Charles Waldron, Edwin Stanley, Sylvia Sidney, Sue Van Duzer, William Leonard, Phyllis Tyler and Joseph Moran.

FAST FARCE ON AVENUE THIS WEEK

Beginning tomorrow night, the President Players will present Mark Swan and C. W. Bell's comedy, "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," for a week's engagement.

Florence Moore, just now scintillating on Broadway in "She Couldn't Say No," first came into prominence as a comedienne through this Mark Swan comedy. She played in it for two full seasons and then was engaged for the "Music Box Revue," after which came stardom.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" has plenty of spice and plenty of action. It is a farce, typically imitative of the French, frothy, fast and furious, to speak alliteratively. One laugh making situation is piled up on another until one has a complication that creates wonder as to how it will all end. The climax is clever and quite unexpected.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," offers the President Players fine opportunitites with particularly appropriate roles for Leona Powers, Walter Gilbert, Lorraine Bernard, Frank Charlton, Betty Utmore, Russell Fillmore, Francis Fraunie, J. Arthur Young, Gilberta Faust and a large cast of incidental actors in minor parts.

Lawrence Beatus, managing director of Loew theatrical interests in Washington, and in direct charge of Loew's Palace theater, returned from a two-week vacation at Atlantic City last week and has resumed his duties at Loew's Palace.

SALES LADY FINDS LOVE IN SUBWAY

"Subway Sadie," First National production featuring Dorothy Mackaill, Jack Mulhall, Peggy Shaw and Charles Murray, will be seen for the first time in Washington at Crandall's Metropolitan theater this week, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The stage attraction for this week at the Metropolitan will be supplied by Chief Caupolican, an Indian barytone. Supplementary features of the bill will embrace a variety of short reel subjects, including a new issue of the Metropolitan World Survey and orchestral contributions by the Metropolitan Symphony under conductorship of Daniel Breeskin, with the Metropolitan Ramblers alternating.

"Subway Sadie" relates the romantic adventures of a salesgirl in a fashionable modiste's shop on Fifth avenue, who makes the distance between home and labor via the subway. The subway guard with whom this young person usually travels seems to be merely a subway guard, while the foreign buyer for the firm by which she is employed seems to be a high-class elegant gentleman. As a matter of fact the buyer is merely a buyer and the subway guard is the son of the magnate who owns the subway. From that situation may be derived the concrete notion of the final climax of the play.

Sadie Hermann is impersonated by Dorothy Mackaill. Jack Mulhall is the subway guard and Charlie Murray is the amusing taxicab driver, who finally gives up in despair when Sadie spends most of a day at the bedside of the guard who is destined to become her husband. Gaston Glass, protege of the late Sara Bernhardt, is cast in the role of the Parisian buyer..

The concert overture for the week will be comprised of reminiscences from "Kid Boots," the musical comedy by Harry Tierney, in which Eddie Cantor achieved his first stellar hit. The love theme recurrent throughout the interpretative score arranged by Mr. Breeskin for the accompaniment of "Subway Sadie," will be "Cherie, I Love You," by Goodman, and the exit march "I'll Fly to Hawaii."

The doors at the Metropolitan will be open this afternoon at 2:30, and the first performance beginning at 3, the engagement will be limited to one week, and the customary scale of prices will prevail.

On Met Stage.

Rita Owin, feature dancer, as the principal stage attraction at Crandall's Metropolitan theater last week, was a member of the 1923 Ziegfeld Follies, which by a strange coincidence was staged by Ned Weyburn, whose own new production of Ned Weyburn's "Variety Show," comes to the Earle theater this week, beginning this afternoon at 3. Miss Owin is an eccentric and straight dancer of such ability as to place her among the foremost stars of musical comedy, revue and vaudeville. Her appearance at the Metropolitan last week was signalized by the utmost personal success and a constant demand for repeated encores which the close scheduling of the bill would not permit.

SUDERMANN ROLE BRINGS BACK KALICH

The name of Herman Sudermann will always be cherished by lovers of dramatic literature as the pathfinder of naturalism in the realm of Teutonic playwriting: his deductions upon the results of certain social evasions and transgressions are accurately defined and his character drawings photographically real.

Sudermann stepped into the front rank of modern dramatists with his first play "Die Shre" which achieved an instantaneous triumph when produced at the Lessing theater, Berlin, in 1889 and duplicated the same success when presented in New York at the Irving Place theater, with Leo Ditrichstein making his initial bow to the American public in very minor role.

His next play "Sodom's Ende" was not as great a success, but in 1893 his play, "Magda" electrified the theater-going world with its magnificent workmanlike construction. "Magda" became the reigning dramatic sensation with actresses of note clamoring for an opportunity to play the picturesque heroine.

Bernhardt, Duse, Modjeska, Nethersole representing France, Italy, Poland and England all striving for the laurel wreath of popularity, and now Bertha Kalich has essayed the role, making what is said to be the biggest success of her histrionic career. Bertha Kalich will present "Magda" at the Shubert-Belasco theater tomorrow night and all week.

"Black Bottom."

That highly discussed Ann Pennington dance number from George White's current "Scandals" production, "Black Bottom," will be one selection in a group of popular musical hits of the current autumn which Tom Gannon, director of Loew's concert orchestra, will offer as an overture selection at Loew's Palace this week.

GRAND OLD MOVIE MAN AT KEITH'S

The grand old man of the movies, Theodore Roberts, will appear in person at the top of the B. F. Keith bill this week. Mr. Roberts comes to Washington by special permission of Jesse L. Lasky. In association with Hardee Kirkland he will be seen in William C. De Mille's brilliant sketch, "The Man Higher Up."

Robert Chisholm, the Australian barytone, arrives in Washington today to open his first tour of American vaudeville.

Following Mr. Chisholm will be George Griffin and company with Rosette in a new and beautiful production, "Flirtations." Mr. Griffin is known for his clever dance productions and this is said to be his finest effort. The scenery and effects were designed by Mari Bollman.

Distinct, pleasant personalities plus natural entertaining ability are some of the assets possessed by Ken Murray and Charlotte, who will come next in their melodious entertainment, "Fooling Around."

A big treat is in store with the coming of Florrie Le Vere on this bill. Miss Le Vere will not only give her usual clever entertainment but will appear with Lou Handman in a catchy bit entitled "Celebrities." They are assisted by Edythe Handman.

While London has not yet adopted the American soda water fountain, Clayton and Lennie deliver the laughs with their hilarious bit, "A Sundae in London," written for them by Claude W. Bostock.

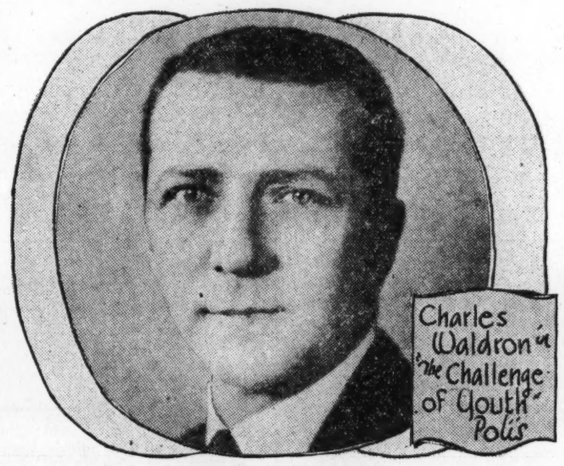

Something different will be offered by Frakson, known as "The Man of a Hundred Cigarettes." He not only thrills and mystifies but amuses as well, for he is a comedian in addition to being a great magician.

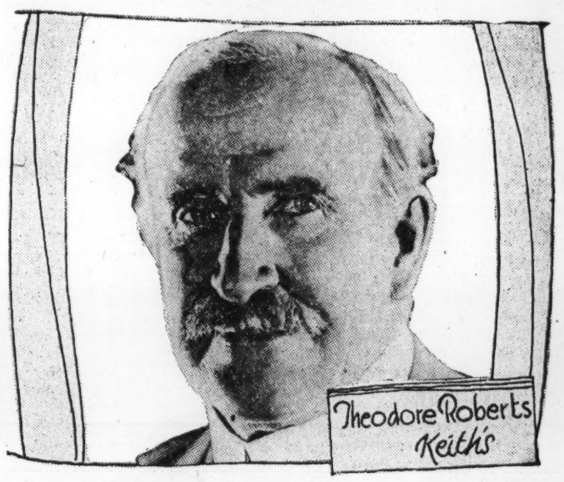

Archie and Gertie Falls offer novel posing and thrilling acrobatics in "A Few Hard Knocks."

The bill will be surrounded by Aesop's Fables, Topics of the Day and the Pathe News Pictorial.

"OUR MARY" BACK AGAIN IN FEATURE

Mary Pickford brings one of her finest and most lovable photoplay stories to the screen of Loew's Columbia, starting this afternoon, in "Sparrows," the featured screen attraction. It is based on a story specially written for Miss Pickford by Winifred Dunn, scenarized by C. Gardner Sullivan. William Beaudine, who directed Miss Pickford's last picture, "Little Annie Rooney," also directed "Sparrows." The cast in support includes Gustav von Seyfferitz, Roy Stewart, Speck O'Donnell and others, including nine of the child actors.

"Sparrows" takes its title from the Biblical reference to the fall of a sparrow, and reveals Miss Pickford in the role of Mamma Mollie, whose watchful care and love for the nine little prisoners of a baby farm on the edge of a dank and remote swamp in the Southland keeps hope alive in their little breasts.

The escape of the little band, captained by the redoubtable Mamma Mollie is a climax, culminating in a dramatic sequence of power and emotional appeal. There is a wisp of romance and more than a little of the sunshine of comedy woven through the story.

The management of Loew's Columbia has arranged to supplement first Washington presentations of "Sparrows" with a notable array of added program subjects, including a short-length comedy, the Pathe Newsreel pictures, Aesop's Fables and a brilliant atmospheric musical score and overture by the Columbia Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Leon Brusilof.

RED GRANGE STARRED IN RIALTO FILM

Red Grange, idol of football fans, makes his appearance as a screen star at the Rialto this week in "One Minute to Play," a story of college life, vivified by his striking personality and unparalleled football genius.

The picture is, of course, based on football, and carries the "Illini Flash" through his entrance into college, his difficulties with parental orders on one hand and college loyalty on the other, to a climax in which his marvelous technique for making spectacular runs is emphasized.

Byron Morgan, who turned out most of the late Wallace Reid's famous racing stories, has written a well balanced theme for the picture.

The story conters around the spectacular playing of a college boy and shows Red at his best on the football field. Genuine college spirit is injected into the production, which is made doubly realistic by the fact that one of the players on the opposing team is George Wilson, the famous all American halfback. Secondary to the football interest is the comedy element..

As a subsidiary feature, "The Collegians," the first of a series of comedies on college life, written by Carl Laemmle, jr., will be shown.

The Rialto concert orchestra will play a medley of campus songs for the overture. The International News and other short film subjects complete the program.

"ZIG-ZAG," A REVUE, AT PALACE

For the week starting this afternoon at Loew's Palace, Raymond Griffith, in his latest Paramount comedy success, "You'd Be Surprised" will constitute the principal screen feature, with Albert De Courville's international revue, "Zig-Zag," and a cast of 25 beautiful girls as the chief stage attraction.

"You'd Be Surprised" was directed by Arthur Rosson. The cast includes Dorothy Sebastian, Earle Williams, Edward Martindel and others. Griffith appears as the only coroner in the world with a silk hat who, on his way to a theater, tries to solve a murder mystery only to find himself involved in a dozen others and in love with the girl suspected of crime.

Alfred De Courville's revue, "Zig-Zag," is the first of a series of similar productions that this famous producer of London Hippodrome successes will make for Loew presentation theaters. It features Max Cunningham and Hazel Clements, stars of recent George M. Cohan musical hits, with the Tivoli girls, the Zig-Zag girls and 25 others.

In addition to its two principal features the program at Loew's Palace this week will also offer another of Jack Liebert's novel "Organlogues," the Palace Magazine, showing minute news of current events, Topics of the Day and a symphonic overture and atmospheric score by the Palace Concert orchestra.

Carroll hall will see the opening of the Holy Rosary Dramatic club's season on Wednesday and Thursday, October 27 and 28, with the presentation of a three-act mystery drama, "The Ghostly Judge," the first efforts of Gino John Simi, a young local playwright.

"BEN-HUR" GOES INTO FINAL WEEK

The fourth and final week of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of Gen. Lew Wallace's immortal story, "Ben-Hur" stars at the matinee today at the National theater. The engagement will positively close next Saturday night.

In point of stirring episodes, color and magnificence of settings, "Ben-Hur" is said to surpass most other productions of its type. Its developments, practically all of which take place in the open and are marked by spectacular scenes, lend themselves to filming, and its Roman trappings provide the most picturesque of touches to the action. Capable players impersonate the principals. Ramon Novarro portrays the title character. Francis X. Bushman is seen as Messala. May McAvoy is the Esther, and Carmel Myers appears as Iras. Others employed are Betty Bronson, Claire McDowell, Kathleen Key, Nigel de Brulier, Mitchell Lewis, Lew White, Frank Currier, Dale Fuller, Charles Belcher and Winter Hall.

Wallace's celebrated story needs little retelling. It deals with the romance of a Jewish boy and a Roman maid, relates his struggles with a relentless Roman foe, his separation from his mother and sister, incarceration in Roman galleys and return to triumph over his enemy. The period of the story is the time of Christ, and the hero's experiences are woven into the momentous episodes of the birth of Christianity.

A musical score containing excerpts from many fine compositions has been arranged for the unreeling of the production. For the remainder of the engagement, the picture will be shown twice daily, at 2:30 and 8:30. The matinee today will be at 3 p. m. and the box office will open at 1 p. m.

SEA STORY AT CENTRAL

"The Sea Wolf," adapted from the novel by Jack London, will be presented at Crandall's Central theater the first two days of this week, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock with Ralph Ince, Claire Adams, Theodore Von Eltz, Snitz Edwards and Mitchell Lewis in the stellar roles. Filmed at one time with Hobart Bosworth in the role of Wolf Larsen, this is a new camera rendition with Ralph Ince, the director, in the role originally created by Mr. Bosworth. The supplementary comedy will be Christie's production of "Papa's Pest."

On Tuesday and Wednesday, William Boyd will occupy the Central screen in "The Last Frontier," Producers' drama of the West. The comedy will be "Plum Goofy," a Cameo release.

On Thursday and Friday, Corinne Griffith will be the pictured star in "Into Her Kingdom" in the role of a crown princess of Russia under the royalists. She is supported by a new leading man, Einar Hansen, of Sweden. The auxiliary feature will be a new Helen and Warren comedy, "Easy Payments."

Thomas Meighan, with Renee Adoree, is announced as the Central's star for Saturday only in "Tin Gods." Supplementing will be a Paul Terry Aesop Fable.

St. Peter's Players Start New Season

The St. Peter's Dramatic society at its last meeting installed new officers and made plans for another year of dramatic activity. The new officers installed by the Rev. James Murphy, supervisor of the players, included Alfred A. McGarraghy, re-elected president; Miss Blanche Lothrop, vice president; Miss Agnes Nolan, secretary and Thomas O'Donnell, treasurer.

The first presentation will be "The Boomerang," a three-act farce, by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, to be presented three evenings, November 22, 23 and 24, at the Parish hall. It is to be under the direction of William A. Walsh. Its cast will include Margaret Eckloff, Blanche Lothrop, Agnes Nolan, Elizabeth Dugan, Katherine Golden, Margaret Tappan, Joseph White, Aloysius Davis, Thomas O'Donnell, Robert Dillon, Louis Frick, Thomas Beach and Chris San Fellipo. The club orchestra is under the direction of Justin McCarthy.

In cooperation with the Big Brother movement throughout the city, planning a vaudeville show to be presented throughout the Catholic church of the city, the players are offering three acts. They include a special singing act by Catherine Davis and Margaret Tappan, a novelty number by the Dugan sisters, Eileen, Rose, Mary and Elizabeth, and a dancing number by Catherine Everett and William Kelly.

Chats on Stage and Screen Folk

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

Years and years ago, Stoddard Taylor became associated with the theater as an usher in Hooley's, out Chicago way. Since then he has run the gamut; from usher to chief usher, to box office man, then to the post of treasurer at the historic old McVicker's theater in Chicago, to road manager for Thomas Keene, and afterward for many other stars, eventually coming back to a fixed status here in Washington as house manager. In a career that has shown him all sides of the theater Mr. Taylor knows a thing or two about plays and players. Once in a while you can get him to rave, but this is seldom, for he pursues always what Frank Morse—who is, by the way, dean of local dramatic critics—likes to call "the even barytone of his way."

This week, however, frequenters of the Belasco are liable to find the Hon. Stoddard Taylor ready to wave the flag. He will not be raving, or anything like that, but he will be enthusiastic over the attraction billed for his playhouse—and rightly so.

* * * *

BY this time it has probably been pretty well broadcast that Bertha Kalish is to be Mr. Stoddard Taylor's star guest at the Belasco. She is here to play the lead role in Hermann Sudermann's noted drama, "Magda." That, Mr. Taylor will tell you, is a combination hard to beat—Sudermann and Kalish.

It has been some time since a Sudermann play occupied the boards in Washington. Miss Kalish, however, is a frequent visitor. She was last here in the "Kreutzer Sonata," at Poli's—and a wonderful performance she gave there. That was either at the beginning of last season or the end of the season before. Now she comes in a role that has occupied the attention of most all of the celebrated women dramatic stars.

Miss Kalish is known for the finish of her performances—the divine fire of the artist. She will have every opportunity in the title role of the Sudermann play, a piece that brings out the clash between old ideals and new—the story of a woman who rebels against her early environment. In the original German, the play was known as "Die Heimat."

WAYWARD women as the central characters of plays that approach greatness have called forth shafts of the moralist—and so Sudermann has come in for many a lambasting, along with Wilde and Pinero and other analysts of such character.

Sudermann's Magda ran away from home when her father insisted upon her marriage to one she did not and could not love. In Berlin she sinned, suffered, and strived until she arrived as prima donna of a musical show that eventually comes to play in her old home town. There she finds her father an abject cripple, sufferer from a stroke of apoplexy because of her disobedience. The clergyman who had loved her she discovers anxious to effect a reconciliation between erring daughter and dejected parent, who, after a fight with himself, welcomes her home. The old man, though, can never understand that this woman, his daughter, now a star in the theatrical firmament, has outgrown not only his own narrow life but the borders of her early environment. She is out of tune with the old; in with the new. She is a rebel against conventionality, the small town interests, the provincial manners of what were once her people; against the orthodoxy of it all. Yet there is in her heart a pity for the father whose life she has wrecked and a sort of admiration for the gentleman of the cloth whose love and devotion remained steadfast through all the years.

Out of this situation Sudermann wove his drama. He made of "Magda" what actors like to call an airtight play. Bertha Kalish should find this role meat for her table. It is on such stuff that she waxes and grows great. Those who have seen her in past performances, in plays that have approached such characterization, know what to expect. Stoddard Taylor believes there is a treat in store for all.

WHILE there is serious drama at the Belasco, down at the President—after a triumphant week—farce comes again into its own.

The play reviewers of this man's town have taken the President Players to their hearts, much in the same fashion that the late-departed National Theater Players won niches for themselves. To date, the occupants of the Pennsylvania avenue playhouse have essayed two outstanding successes—one a war play and the other winner of last year's Pulitzer prize. On those two occasions the players registered big. As Randolph Shaw, who reviewed last week's offering for The Post, wrote: "Once may be an accident, but twice is a habit." By this token, if these players make it three successes in a row—with as many different types of drama—they are sure to be doing business down at the old stand come this time next year.

To date, the regular theatrical season has been anything but a howling success. So a stock company that puts forth such efforts as the boys herald from the President Players need do only one thing—remain at the grind.

* * * *

THE town had been pretty well pepped up over the prospects of a premiere from the Messrs. Shubert. Tonight at Poli's was to be the big night. Manager Leo Leavitt had all the signs out for the opening of "Gay Paree."

Then something happened. The revue was canceled. Some $3,000 in advance sales were handed back to cash customers, and a new play was brought in from New York to fit the gaping void. It opens tomorrow night, thus giving Washington three big shows at one time. The National still entertains the cinema version of Gen. Lew Wallace's celebrated story, "Ben-Hur."

OF all men connected with the theater and newspapers, there is perhaps no one better known than Wells Hawks, though his name seldom appears in print. His is a fame that spread by word of mouth. Most all his life Wells Hawks has been a press agent. He is now down in Florida trying to put the old State back where it belongs—on the map.

When Wells Hawks first went to Broadway—from Baltimore—about 25 years ago there was a coterie of newspaper men who covered the old lane, combing it night and day for news notes of playhouses and players. Wells was then general press representative for Charles Frohman. His office was the news center, the gathering place of news hounds. In those days, among the men who covered Broadway for the New York papers were Walter Prichard Eaton for the Tribune, John Logan for the Herald, Van Ness Harwood for the World, Rennold Wolf, Walter J. Kingsley and Paul Thompson for the Morning Telegraph; Keats

Speed for the News, Adolph Klauber for the Times, Dan Slattery and Wallace Ham for the Sun and Gus Dunlop and George Cooper for the American. In newspaper offices they are all well-known names. Nothing theatrical ever escaped this outfit.

Wells Hawks had the reputation of never going to sleep. He was afraid something might happen to Broadway, something he wouldn't see. So he stood guard. Even now he has to go to Florida to keep away from Broadway. Every now and then, though, he runs back to the bright lights. Not long ago he was there and met Walter Kingsley. Together they sighed over the changes to their old trail.

"Broadway isn't Broadway any more," complained Wells.

"No," said Kingsley, "not by a long shot! Promise me one thing, Wells. Go right back to Florida, hide yourself away and write the real story of Broadway."

Six hours later Kingsley received a wire: "Am on the Orange Blossom Limited headed for the sheltering palms. Two chapters under way. Wells Hawks."

The original newspaper crowd is going to write a composite preface to what should be the greatest story ever told of a street that means everything to the theater.

AMBASSADOR OFFERS LIST

Dorothy Mackaill, Jack Mulhall, Peggy Shaw and others will be seen at Crandall's Ambassador theater the first three days of this week in First National's release of "Subway Sadie."

On Wednesday and Thursday of this week, Billie Dove and Francis X. Bushman will be seen in Universal-Jewel's production of "The Marriage Clause," also Mack Sennett's two-reel comedy, "Ghost of Folly."

On Friday only on the Ambassador screen will be Elmer Clifton's production of "Down to the Sea in Ships," with Raymond McKee, Marguerite Courtot and Clara Bow.

On Saturday only Ben Lyon, with May McAvoy, Charlotte Walker and others will be seen in First National's production of "The Savage," which will be supplemented by the Our Gang comedy, "Thundering Fleas," a new Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge, and the fourth installment of the new chapter play, "Snowed In."

Galsworthy's Last.

John Galsworthy, author of "Old English," which George Arliss will act in this city, declares that "The Escape," recently produced in London, is his "swan song" in the theater. Winthrop Ames, producer of "Old English," will bring "The Escape" to America.

Telling an Old Story.

There is one Disraeli story that will not die. And because this year George Arliss is acting "Old English" in the West and South, where last he appeared in "Disraeli," it is now repeated and thus early cleared off the press sheet.

A young lady, with tickets for "Disraeli," approached Owen Wister and said:

"I want to read 'up' on Mr. Arliss' play. I know Disraeli is in the Bible, but is he in the Old or the New Testament, Mr. Wister?"

STAR SHOW THIS WEEK AT EARLE

Of this week's bill at the Earle theater, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock, the headline feature will be Ned Weyburn's personally produced "Variety Show."

In three acts and sixteen scenes this Weyburn production enlists the services of a large number of youthful performers. Among these are Jack LaFlack, Ed Foley, Lea Leture, Myron Orton, Virginia Bacon, Helen Shapiro, Shirley Richards and a long list of others who have not yet reached the distinction of featured prominence. The three acts of the variety show set forth the salient elements of three distinctive types of amusement, the circus, musical comedy and revue.

Among the diverting numbers prominent on this week's bill at the Earle are the Four Ortons, who cavort on the tight rope; Wallace and May in a comedy act; Foley and Lecture in comedy, songs and dance and "Hap" Farrell and Florence in "Symptoms of—For No Reason." The balance of the performance is provided by the ensemble and principals of the Ned Wayburn unit.

The photoplay feature for the week is First National's production of "Mismates," adapted from the play by Myron C. Fagan, Doris Kenyon and Warner Baxter in the co-stellar roles and directed by Charles Brabin. Philo McCollough, Charles Murray, Maude Turner Gordon, Cyril Ring and others appear in the supporting cast.

In addition to these major attractions the Earle will, as usual, present its customary house features, which include concert overture by the Earle orchestra under the conductorship of Floyd C. Wheeler, and pipe organ accompaniments of the feature picture as well as the varied short reels by Alexander Arons.

MOVIE GRAPHS

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, hopped into town Thursday morning with a contingent of New York motion picture magnates, mostly members of his own company. Mr. Laemmle and his companions were guests of Corbin Shield, manager of the Rialto theater. A special showing of a motion picture apparatus that may some day revolutionize the motion picture industry occupied attention of the motion picture men; but they are keeping quiet about what took place in the darkened halls of the Rialto.

Mr. Laemmle has evolved a plan about which his special representative, James Hood MacFarland, says the Little Napoleon of Screendom is very enthusiastic. The president of Universal intends to establish in several American universities a series of Victor Hugo scholarships to be awarded in connection with the production of "Les Miserables," soon to be shown here to the public for the first time—at the Rialto. Sometime ago, the press and members of the diplomatic corps were taken to Poli's theater for a private showing of this mammoth film which runs—or did then—about three hours. There was some talk of cutting the film.

Just before coming to Washington, Mr. Laemmle communicated with the leading educators and universities throughout the country. Already he has received quite a response. The awards will be officially known as the Carl Laemmle-Victor Hugo scholarships.

In the tentative plan to the educators, some of the details are given as follows: The scholarships will total $6,000. The various awards will be made following a national competition. Those who enter will be required to answer questions having to do with Victor Hugo's life, his accomplishments, his contributions to literature, and the principal characters of his novels—particularly "Les Miserables," regarded as the most popular of his works and the story that engrossed Carl Laemmle so much that he spent nearly two years in having it filmed.

All this is very appropriate. Carl Laemmle was the first motion picture producer to bring the works of Victor Hugo to the screen. "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will never be forgotten by those who saw it, and the film is still playing to enthusiastic audiences in different parts of the world. Now comes "Les Miserables," made by the French Societe des Cineromans and distributed by Universal Pictures Corporation under direction of Carl Laemmle. He plans shortly, according to announcement he made Thursday, a production of Victor Hugo's "L'Homme Qui Rit"—the film to be made either here or in France.

Who are going to play the roles of Mulligan and Garrity, in the Asher, Small and Rogers screen version of the famous thrilling, chilling, killing and kidding mystery play, "The Gorilla?" As a play, this "sensation" first saw the footlights right here in Washington at the Belasco.

Since the announcement was made "The Gorilla" would be filmed under the eagle eye of its author, Ralph Spence, Producer E. M. Asher, reports that he has been besieged with applications from many actors in Hollywood, all of whom are positive that they are "just the type" for these two laugh-producing "hick" detectives.

So far, however, the roles have not been filled and as yet no director has been assigned to the picture, although Asher is looking over the field with an eye to getting the three men in the industry best fitted to fill these important positions. What, may we ask, is the matter with Frank McCormick, a Washington son, who played the original "Gorilla" here and on Broadway?

Incidentally, this is one of the questions that puzzle most theater and motion picture fans. A man makes a great name for himself as the portrayor of a certain role. The play is a hit—and eventually is put in the movies; but the actor who plays the original role seldom, if ever, gets a chance at it in Hollywood. Why?

"What Price Glory?" is now being filmed. Yet the two men who made it—or helped make it—a great play will probably never have an opportunity to sign a movie contract for the same roles. As a matter of fact, the roles are already given out—but not to Billy Boyd, who played the hard-boiled sergeant, or to Wolheim, the man who made Captain Flagg famous.

Some day, some one will rise up and explain this question so that the little boys and girls will know what all the shootin's about.

MOVING picture activities now rank high as news, according to Jackson E. Elliott, assistant general manager of the Associated Press.

In a recent address Mr. Elliott said: "The motion picture industry has furnished excellent example of good and bad press agenting. Until a few years ago every unusual yarn, no matter how logical, was likely to arouse the editor's suspicion. He had been fooled more than once by enterprising press agents.

"Nevertheless the Associated Press felt that it should have news from the motion picture industry just as it has had news concerning the legitimate stage. Accordingly we conferred with Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and explained that we would be eager for constructive news of photo-film activities if the Associated Press were not again made the victim of press agent fabrications.

"Thereupon Hays did the best job of housecleaning we have ever known. He pledged all of the companies with which he is associated not to attempt any publicity fakes with us. Only once since then have we had cause to complain. We furnished him the facts and the faker's employer kept faith with Mr. Hays thus enabling him to make good with us."

TWELVE cameras in airplanes and six at the top of a 100-foot parallel will be used to film the battle of St. Mihiel which will be reproduced as the sensational climax of "Wings," Paramount's big road show production of the American birdmen in the late war. More than 8,000 men on the ground and 300 planes will enact the historic battle, which broke the Hindenburg line and brought victory to the United States and her allies. William Wellman, the director, was a flier in the Lafayette Escadrille, while the author, John Monk Saunders, also was a pilot. The cast includes Clara Bow, Charles Rogers, Richard Arlen and El Brendel.

One-Act Sketch Offers A Study in Psychology

At B. F. Keith's theater this week in William C. de Mille's "The Man Higher Up" Theodore Roberts has the role of Dr. Mueller, German specialist, who for 30 years has silently and secretly followed the man who despoiled the girl he loved and sent her to shame and death. The man who wronged him comes as a patient, nerve-wracked and strained to breaking point, not knowing the identity of the physician he consults. The scene affords the famous Paramount star opportunity for pathos in tribute to his lost love, for sardonic exultation in reading the soul of his victim and for expression of calm satisfaction over needed work well done, as the betrayer of his sweet heart dies from fright on the fateful "ninth stroke of 9."

This one-act sketch runs 20 minutes, and is said to be one of the best dramatic hits ever offered in vaudeville.

FUNMAKERS AT MUTUAL

Joe Levitt, when he constructed "Midnight Frolics" was especially careful in arranging his comedy element, with the result that he has three first-class comedians and three excellent comediennes, in a company of nine.

In the funmaking end of this offering there is Bert Marks, Hebrew funster; Len Smith, Irish comedian, and Ike Wallman, a light comedian who can sing and dance, also Bebe Tobin, a soubrette of lightning activity; Kathlyn Exton, a singing and dancing soubrette and Louise Sutton, a comedienne of excellent technique.

Mildred Cozierre, one of the featured members, is a strength of vocalization and attractive personality, who sings "blues" songs and shimmies delightfully, and Lew Harris and Frank McKay share in the dramatic moments infused into the comedy sketches.

The twenty dancing damsels delegated to interpret the intricacies of terpsichorean art, are said to fulfill that assignment to the satisfaction of the public, press and management. The "Midnight Frolics" is scheduled to be presented here at the Mutual theater all this week with matinees daily.

Imposing Program.

Milton Davis, conductor of the Metropolitan Ramblers, the syncopated orchestra of twelve skilled musicians who alternate with the symphony orchestra under the conductorship of Daniel Breeskin at Crandall's Metropolitan theater, has this week arranged another imposing program of popular hits and modern interpretations of classic propositions, the concert numbers being a rhythm-rag and the encore number "Roses of Picardy" played as a trombone solo by Laurence McCarthy.

Woman Ball Player.

The world's champion baseball player of the feminine sex, Mabel Sloan, is one of the featured players with "Powder Puff Frolic," this week's attraction at the Gayety theater. If one expects to see an Amazonically built young woman, they will be amazed to see a well-built girl, still in her "teens," with all the shyness of a college girl at commencement time and not a hint of the athletic prowess that has made Miss Sloan as well known to sport devotees among women as Babe Ruth or Ty Cobb is to followers of the diamond game among men. In her stage act, Miss Sloan sings in barytone, with a voice that recalls the deep richness of that which made famous the name of Helene Mora to an earlier generation of theatergoers.

BIG FROLIC AT GAYETY

Just like the famous Continental revues comes Morris Wainstock's new edition of the popular "Powder Puff Frolic" to make merry this week at the Gayety theater, starting its week's sojourn with the customary performance, today's matinee.

Among the principal players with "Powder Puff Frolic" are George Broadhurst, who headed this same Columbia burlesque last season, and Billy Fields, who was chief comedian with "Chuckles" last term. Ralph Sanford is the upstanding leading man and Lew LeRoy is a smart young dancing juvenile. Larry Kramer and Romeo Somma have some interesting dancing gyrations and fill seats at the comedy table with juvenile freshness.

The women leads are among the most talented in Columbia burlesque. There is Virtoria Youngman, who prances all over the stage and leads numbers. Frances Ryer, she of the sweet, tuneful voice, sings the prima donna role ably aided by winsome Peggy Ray, an ingenue of unusual charm. Blues singing and clever dancing is proffered generously by bewitching Marie Ambey, a charming brunette.

A real novelty is the appearance of Mabel Sloan, the world's champion girl baseball player. Her singing and captivating series of baseball "nifties" constitute a high-spot of the show's entertainment department.

La Java Nights.

The La Java has planned a special program of entertainment for the coming week. Martin Rueben, the master of ceremonies, will introduce the various artists.

Tommy Thompson's group of syncopating musicians is now "set" and producing dance music that is reported to be irresistible.

Work of London Producer Here

Albert DeCourville, London revue producer, retained by Marcus Loew to produce a series of revue for Loew presentation theaters throughout the East, is offering Washington its first view of his handiwork in the gorgeous stage revue, "Zig-Zag," which, with Max Cunningham and Hazel Clements, stars of recent George M. Cohan musical hits, is announced as the principal stage attraction at Loew's Palace for the week starting this afternoon.

DeCourville is a unique producer. He not only writes the revues he produces but handles every detail connected with their production, except the music. He interests such renowned musical personages as Leoncavello and Mascagni in writing music for his productions. Leoncavello was persuaded to conduct the work of putting on his own opera, "Pagliacci," while Mascagni played a similar part in DeCourville's production of "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Echoes of the New York Stage

By ROBERT BELL

UNDOUBTEDLY the dramatic sensation of this season has been "The Captive," that morbid psychological study of abnormality by the French Edouard Bourdet. It came to us trumpeted in advance. Reinhardt, from Vienna, where he had recently added it to his repertory, called it one of the masterpieces of modern drama. Paris had hailed it with ovations, and at the same time was shocked by its daring subject, which had hardly before been so openly discussed on any stage. We were to see a play, then, which Reinhardt had praised and Paris was shocked at—a marvelous and unique experience! No wonder droves were turned away on the opening night, or that the theater has reported "standing room only" at every performance since. Somewhat like naughty boys about to peep at an obscene photograph, we went to Bourdet's "La Prisonniere."

What we saw was no dissipation for adolescent minds, but a serious, dreadfully serious play, preeminently adult, presented with the austerity and lack of humor of a Greek tragedy. To those who are willing to concentrate through long scenes of dialogue and through one whole play to see little more than a woman striving and failing to overcome Lesbian abnormality; to see a man who loves her, through his love striving and failing to assist her break the bars of her prison, the play is always intense and often very moving. But the playgoer seeking emotional excitement will have a strong dose of tedium to digest, and more likely than not disappointment in store for him.

The New York reviewers have been, as far as I know, unanimous in their appraisal of this play at the Empire which Arthur Hornblow, jr., has translated and Gilbert Miller produced. Conscious of its seriousness, its penetration of character, its austerity, its utter refusal to make use of the sensationalism of its theme to cater to low public taste, they have heaped upon its head adjectives of superlative color. About its performance they had different things to say, but toward the play itself only the highest praise. I follow these reporters enthusiastically most of the way. It is one of the few plays I have seen in recent years, one of the few which has treated a serious subject sufficiently seriously. How often even in the columns of these "Echoes" have I decried this play or that for not going deep enough in its presentation of a serious subject. Neither "Craig's Wife," nor the "Makropoulus Secret," nor "Sandalwood," to mention but three, went deep enough. "The Captive" does. Ibsen himself has never been more serious than is the author of this new French play. At the same time it is written with a certain refinement, a certain nice repression—a spade is not always called a spade. But the theme—I can not help thinking—is unnecessary in the theater, though I must admit that it holds dramatic possibilities and that it has its existence in life. Charles Brackett, in a recent issue of The New Yorker, predicts that "in five years 'The Captive' will sound as old fashioned as 'Mrs. Dane's Defense.'" Perhaps so, for whatever may be said of us who live in these times we are not a squeamish generation. We are willing to face problems squarely and discuss them openly. This in the long run can probably not do harm; social workers tell us that a brilliant electric globe hung in a dark alley succeeds miraculously in doing away with many crimes. "Yet still at the same time," as Cabell's most noted creation has so often remarked, normal life—the fears and tribulations, the jealousies and struggles and the hopes of everyday people—contains sufficient dramatic material to satisfy any dramatist. The present day, moreover, offers no solution to the problem; it is not a purgative, and therefore can not be said in any way to be a benefit to moral life.

* * * *

Over the players themselves who vitalize this drama I cannot greatly enthuse. Helen Menkin, as usual with this actress is monotonous and, as always, is distinguished. She plays the simpler scenes badly. I thought, rising to heights only where in agony she begs the man who loves her to marry her and save her from her unconventional fate. Basil Rathbone, co-featured with Miss Menken, was good particularly so when he was listening. He listened to other people quietly, like a human being, and not, as so many players have done from the great Bernhardt down, as if listening was a most arduously apparent accomplishment. The direction I felt was a little stilted and lacking in variety; Mr. Miller's father, Henry Miller, would have done a better job, for no one could surpass him in the creation of the French social life of ladies and gentlemen.

* * * *

From the dejection in which we are plunged at the Empire it is a relief to walk up Broadway, turn west on Forty-sixth street into the Fulton theater where with knifing and snapping out of lights, Owen Davis' "The Donovan Affair" holds forth. Mr. Davis, as you know, is the author of "Sandalwood" in which Miss Pauline Lord is giving a mighty fine performance, but in which play the author is never quite at home; his characters are too theater-made for such a tragicomedy. But they fit into New York's latest mystery-melodrama, tailored to fit the most exacting detective story addicts.

It would be useless to go into a detailed discussion of the plot, particularly as such a story would reveal the whole structure on which the enjoyment of the melodrama is based. Enough to tell you that each time the lights go out you sit breathless, clutching the arms of your chair waiting for the next murder, wondering who on earth it will be this time and why. And as it should be you will suspect at one time or another every person in the play, sixteen in all, except, of course, the murderer. Even the funny looking man two seats away from you looks suspicious and you watch him covertly as if half expecting he will rise suddenly from his seat and shot, "I did it, I'm the murderer." But this trick is not played upon you, the culprit is present off and on straight through the play.

The show is a nice mixture of horseplay and sophistication; Owen Davis' ladies and gentlemen are a far-cry from the old-fashioned heroes and villains that used to come weekly to the once-named "Academy of Music" on Ninth street where we would sit as kids in nigger heaven cracking our peanuts while witnessing the hair-splitting, blood-curdling deeds of "Daredevil Harry." They were created for boys and morons; the modern mystery play is developed to satisfy the gourmetic taste of the modern cosmopolitan.

Next week I will review "Black Boy" and "Deep River," two more contributions of the negro to the theater.

BLUES-BOY AT LINCOLN

Beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock, the Lincoln theater will inaugurate a completely new policy featuring exceptional music under the conductorship of one of the most distinguished composer-conductors on the continent. W. C. Handy, originator of the "blues" and composer of such world famous numbers as "The Memphis Blues," "The Beale Street Blues," and the "St. Louis Blues," has been permanently retained as orchestral conductor and director of the presentations for the Lincoln theater.

The picture to be shown, beginning this afternoon, is Paramount's production of "Fine Manners," picturing Gloria Swanson. As an added attraction the Lincoln will present Willis and Smith, an act which ranks high up among those surest of achieving popular acclaim.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the screen feature will be "The Honeymoon Express," with Irene Rich. Q. A. A. Copeland is a singer and dancer of no mean merit and another who may be relied upon to inject pep into the Lincoln's programs hereafter is Robert Wells, the dancing saxophonist.

On Saturday only Marie Prevost will be seen in "Almost a Lady."

Four Weyburn Girls And Venus De Milo

Ned Weyburn, Broadway's beauty mentor and dictator supreme to the American musical stage, has issued a statement of far-feaching import.

"The standards of feminine physical measurements have changed considerably," says the noted director who, in addition to the best editions of the "Follies," has produced the "Variety Show," the spectacular vaudeville innovation at the Earle this week, and thereby possesses authority for his convictions. "The model of womanly beauty today is far below the actual measurements of the perfect women of years of the past. So far below the measurements of Venus de Milo are the requirements of the ideal stage type today that I fear Venus would have a difficult time making the grade with the average theatrical producer."

Weyburn takes, for example, four of the young ladies he is grooming for stardom: Virginia Bacon, Olive Brady, Beatrice Roberts and Helen Fables. In each case, the girl, although fully matured to the point of standing comparison, seldom comes up to the buxomness of Venus de Milo. The neck, bust, waist, hips, thighs, calves, and ankles are invariably smaller than those of the statuesque lady.

"The measurements will range from an inch to an inch-and-half smaller in the neck. The busts suffer approximately the same loss by comparison. The waist and hips of these girls are far below those of Venus, while the thighs and especially the calves and the ankles show the slightest differences. "The heights," continued Mr. Weyburn, "are another matter, for Venus would not measure up to the modern girl, who is from 1 to 2 inches taller."

	Venus.	Bacon.	Brady.	Roberts.	Fables.
Neck....	14	12½	12	12½	13
Bust....	34⅝	32½	32	33	32½
Waist....	28½	25½	24⅝	25½	26
Hips....	36	34½	33½	35	34⅜
Thigh....	19½	18	18	19	19
Calf....	13½	12½	11⅝	12⅝	12⅝
Ankle....	8½	7½	8	7⅝	8

Height—Venus, 5 ft. 4 in.; Bacon, 5 ft. 4½ in.; Brady, 5 ft. 5⅜ in.; Roberts, 5 ft. 5¼ in.; Fables, 5 ft. 6 in.

Enters Burlesque Field.

Mr. S. Z. Poli, theatrical magnate and owner of the Poli theatrical interests, has entered the field of producing attractions for Columbia burlesque. Mr. Poli's first venture, which has proved very successful, playing a week's engagement at the Gayety theater several weeks ago. This attraction, "Around the World Revue," was managed by James Thatcher, who will be remembered as a former manager of the local Poli's theater. Mr. Poli has purchased a second franchise for Columbia burlesque in "Aloma of the South Seas," which will be seen at the Gayety theater in a few weeks.

Same Ol' Fellow.

C. Gardner Sullivan, who scenarized Mary Pickford's latest starring production, "Sparrows," at Loew's Columbia this week, is the same C. Gardner Sullivan who led the field of photoplay dramatists during the directoral reign of the late Thomas H. Ince, when Sullivan was writing stories for Charles Ray, William S. Hart and other Ince stars of the old Triangle-Fine Arts days.

WORSHIPED ERNEST FROM THE START

For a long time young Sylvia Sidney worshiped Ernest Truek from afar. Seventeen is an early age—early enough for one to have stage idols, and Mr. Truex was one of Miss Sidney's gods. Each play in which the diminutive star appeared was viewed with delight by his enthusiastic follower. Like all young girls Miss Sidney wanted to act. Her desire expressed itself by impressing a dramatic teacher with her voice and by taking elocution lessons.

At the age of 14 young Miss Sidney made her debut on the stage at the Little theater in New York. She was the sole entertainer on the program. Like Ruth Draper, Miss Sidney depended upon her ability as an actress to beguile a theater full of people, with a series of character portrayals.

Instead of dismissing herself as a precocious child performer, Miss Sidney resumed her studies for the stage. She joined the Theater Guild school and soon made a profound impression upon the heads. When "Prunella" was selected as the first play with which to exhibit the talents of the students, Winthrop Amos looked about for a leading lady. Miss Sidney was awarded the principal role in "Prunella."

At the special matinee performance the vivacious actress could not control her excitement. Word had reacher her that Ernest Truex was out front, the same Ernest Truex who had performed before her enraptured gaze. Through a tiny peek-hole in the scenery Miss Sidney peered for a glimpse at the man whose work she so admired. This youthful performer who was about to make her debut in a stage production was very calm and unperturbed until she caught a glimpse of Truex in the audience. All the self-possession the actress had acquired fled for the moment. Out front was a god who was about to watch the work of an ordinary mortal. Only with a great effort was Miss Sidney able to pull herself together.

That play, "The Challenge of Youth," by Ashley Miller, will be presented tonight at Poli's theater. Whatever theatergoers or the critics will think of Miss Sidney's performance will not in any way dim or enhance the thorough thrill that was Miss Sidney's less than a month ago when Ernest Truex presented her with a contract.

Big Playing Cast.

"Ladies of the Evening," which the President Theater Players will offer the week of October 25, has more than 15 speaking parts, as well as a number of incidental roles to provide atmosphere. The full strength of the President Players will be augumented by a number of new faces.

Ten to Three.

Washington's newest night club, the Cafe Pierre, at 1714 H street northwest, named for its host, is particularly proud of its youthful quartet of musicians under the direction of Emory Daugherty. The phone number, not yet listed in the directory, is Fr. 4363. The proceedings take place from 10 to 3.

ELVIRA DE HIDALGO, Spanish soprano of the Metropolitan opera company, who will appear here with Feador Chaliapin in "The Barber of Seville" at Poli's theater Thursday afternoon, November 4, the opening attraction of Mrs. Wilson-Greene's artists' course of concerts.

DE HIDALGO TO APPEAR IN CONCERT

Mrs. Wilson-Greene, Washington concert manager, announces that Elvira de Hidalgo, Spanish soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., will appear here at Poli's on Thursday afternoon, November 4, at 3 p. m., with Feodor Chaliapin, famous Russian basso, and a special company in a performance of "The Barber of Seville."

This famous Spanish beauty of the concert stage was announced as one of Mrs. Wilson-Greene's attractions for the season of 1924-1925, but the demands of the Metropolitan forced a sudden postponement of De Hidalgo's local appearance, and it was subsequently impossible to arrange another concert for her that year.

This appearance of Chaliapin, De Hidalgo and other famous singers, including the petite little Marguerite Cobbey, said to be a second Marion Talley and who hails from Fresno, Calif., is the opening attraction of a brilliant concert series included in Mrs. Wilson-Greene's artists' course of concerts for the season of 1926-1927. This series will also introduce to Washington for the first time Claudia Muzio, the renowned soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. who appears here on Wednesday afternoon, December 1, while other artists appearing in the same course are Sigrid Onegin, contralto of the Metropolitan, on Tuesday, January 25; Fritz Kreisler, violinist, on Tuesday, February 8, and the Boston Symphony orchestra, on Tuesday, April 5.

While the spectators who witness the presentation of "Ben Hur" at the National theater are aroused to enthusiasm by the exciting scenes of the chariot race and the sea battle, they are perhaps most deeply impressed by the several biblical pictures, done in color photography, which are, in many cases, reproductions of famous works of the old masters.

One of the scenes is a reproduction of William Blake's "The Star of Bethlehem." Others are Rahael's "Sistine Madonna," now in the Vatican; Gustave Dore's "The Nativity" and "The Star of the East," Ruben's "Holy Family," Millar's "Christ in the Carpenter Shop," and Dore's "Dante Inferno."

In the opinion of many spectators, the scene at the "Pool of Siloam," from Tissot's picture of that name, is the most artistically satisfying in the cinema. It is powerful in true dramatic effectiveness. A group of washerwomen are discussing the rumors of the arrival of the Messiah. One is skeptic, another a devout believer. The dramatic value lies merely in the expression of countenance and the restrained gesticulation of these two women.

Rise of Mary Pickford In Pictures Sketched

The promise of a new Mary Pickford starring production at Loew's Columbia, starting this afternoon, under the title of "Sparrows," makes appropriate a brief glance at her career, which she began at the age of 5 with a Toronto stock company. Later David Belasco cast her for a prominent role in "The Warrens of Virginia." Then came the Griffith days at the old Biograph studio in New York and a brief return to the stage under Belasco in "A Good Litle Devil."

The rise of Mary Pickford as screen magnate as well as actress, however, dates from 1915, in which year she became vice president of the Mary Pickford Famous Players Company—the forerunner of Famous Players-Lasky. In 1916, she formed the Mary Pickford Corporation, chose her own stories, directors and cast.

From that corporation issued such hits as "In the Bishop's Carriage," "The Little Princess" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Two years later—in 1918—Miss Pickford made a deal with First National whereby she retained her status as an independent producer and made such pictures as "Daddy Longlegs," "The Hoodlum" and "Heart of the Hills."

Anne Nichols' Visit.

Anne Nichols, the millionaire producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," dropped in at the President theater last week to watch the perfromance of "They Knew What They Wanted." Miss Nichols also watched a rehearsal of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," the Mark Swan comedy which the players will offer this week. She is the producer of the latest Mark Swan comedy, "Howdy King," now headed for Broadway.

Scored Next Door.

Albert DeCourville's international revue, "Zig-Zag," which opens a week's engagement at Loew's Palance theater this afternoon as the principal stage feature of the program at Loew's Palace, scored a tremendous success in Baltimore last week as the stage feature of the second week's program of the new Loew's Century theater there—the latest of the Loew de luxe presentation theaters in this territory.

NEW MUSIC AT METRO NEVER HEARD HERE

Daniel Breeskin, conductor of the Symphony orchestra at Crandall's Metropolitan theater has made a special arrangement of melody hits from Harry Tierney's score from "Kid Boots," the most recent starring vehicle for the talents of Eddie Cantor. This composite overture will embrace a clever blending of "The Rain Song," "The Same Old Way," "In the Swim at Miami," "Polly Put the Kettle On," "Along the Old Lake Trail," and "Some One Loves You After All," six of the outstanding numbers that made "Kid Boots" a two-year hit on Broadway. The score for the feature picture at the Metropolitan this week will embody hits never before played in Washington, available to the Metropolitan Simphony by virtue of Mr. Breeskin's close affiliation with the publishers in New York and by further reason of the fact that his musical interpretations of the pictures are specially arranged by himself or, as a pinch-hitter, Fred Starke, business manager of the Metropolitan Theater orchestra, and himself a composer-conductor of recognized preeminence. Among the new numbers to be heard for the first time at the Metropolitan this week are hits from "Queen High" and "Le Maire's Affairs," two new Broadway successes, and "Castles in the Air." During the hours when the Metropolitan Symphony is not in the orchestra pit that point of vantage will be occupied by the Metropolitan Ramblers, the twelve hot syncopators conducted by Milton Davis, who will play from 11 o'clock in the morning until 1:30 p. m., and from 5 to 7:30 p. m., making the Metropolitan, the only house in Washington maintaining two specialized orchestras providing continuous orchestral music from 11 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night, a twelve-hour period.

BIG WEEK AT TIVOLI

Francis X. Bushman, Billie Dove, Warner Oland, Grace Darmand, and numerous others will occupy the screen at Crandall's Tivoli theater the first two days of this week beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the Universal-Jewel production of "The Marriage Clause," a drama of the stage. The supplementary attractions will include a new Aesop Fable and the latest release of the Pathe Review.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, Richard Barthelmess will be seen in First National's release of Sidney Olcott's production of "The Amateur Gentleman," adapted from the story of the same name by Jeffory Farnol. A new leading woman, Dorothy Dunbar, is seen in this subject. Other important members of the cast include Brandon Hurst, Nigel Barrie, J. Edwards Davis, Billie Bennett and John S. Peters. The auxiliary features will include a new Felix Cartoon comedy and a recent release of the popular Topics of the Day.

For Thursday and Friday, First National's production of "The Savage," is announced as the principal screen offering with Ben Lyon and May McAvoy in the co-stellar roles, supported by Philo McCollough, Sam Hardy and Charlotte Walker. The comedy for Thursday and Friday will be "The Merry Widow." The bill will be augmented by other short reel features and special pipe organ music by Otto F. Beck and Ida Y. Clarke.

On Saturday only, Douglas MacLean will be seen in his new comedy "Hold That Lion," written especially by Rosalie Mulhall, and directed by William Beaudine. Neal Burns will be the pictured star in Christie's abbreviated comedy "Papa's Pest." A new Grantland Rice Sportlight and the fifth installment of the new chapter play "Snowed In," will be shown.

"WANING SEX" AT STRAND

"The Waning Sex," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of a stage success of the same name is the film feature for the current week at the Strand theater. Norma Shearer is the star of this comedy of Romance vs. a Career. She is supported by Conrad Nagel.

On the stage will be offered five acts of Loew's vaudeville with Sam Wilson, comedian, headlining the bill in an extraordinary engagement with Warner Gault, Soyna Leyton and Willie Ward, appearing in a "Nonsensical Revue." Other numbers include Bob Yates and Evelyn Carson in a comedy skit, "Getting Soaked;" the Marcus Sisters and Carlton Revue, a number entitled "Comedy Classique Dance Offering;" J. Warren Keane and Grace White in "Manipulating Marvel," and Hori and company, assisted by Hana 'Ko, in "Something Somewhat Different."

Once a Singer.

In "Magda," Herman Sudermann's tense drama of modern life, in which Bertha Kalich will be seen at the Belasco theater this week, the actress is called upon to enact the part of a famous opera singer. This puts the actress right in her element, for it was as an opera singer that she first won success.

Keep It Quiet.

The management of Loew's Palace theater, taking a leaf from the book of the producers of "The Bat," are requesting patrons not to divulge to their friends the outcome of the comedy mystery play, featuring Raymond Griffith at the Palace this week, "You'd Be Surprised!"

JOHN VAN DRUTEN, author of "Young Woodley," who will deliver a series of lectures in Washington on "Modern English Dramatists and Their Methods" in the course of the present week.

TWO TEAMS BELIEVE IN MR. GRANGE

There are at least 22 men—two full teams—who will believe that Red Grange is the greatest broken-field runner and greatest all-round football star of all time; and they are the varsity squad of Pomona college, where the football scenes for Red Grange's picture, "One Minute to Play," which is the feature at the Rialto this week, were taken.

It did not need the advice of Director Sam Wood to make the Pomona athletes do their best to bring down the "Galloping Ghost," when actual play began on the football field. Director Wood wanted a real game to film and he got it. With the enthusiasm and determination characteristic of youth, the Pomona squad to a man were bent on testing the vaunted prowess of the mighty Illinois flash.

They paid little or no attention to the redoubtable George Wilson, all-American halfback himself, or to the other men on Red's team. Eleven hard, young huskies made it their particular business, individually and collectively, to "gang" Grange.

Of course, Grange was stopped occasionally and eventually. But he made plenty of yardage during the course of the festivities. Every time he hit the Pomona line or skirted an end or ran a punt back through a ragged field he was the target for tearing, desperate youths imbued with the idea of being able to tell their grandchildren, "Well, when I played for Pomona I stopped Red Grange!" And every time he went down it was under a mass of tacklers.

Yes, there are 22 youths, at least, who will testify that the reputation of the "Galloping Ghost" is well earned.

Schumann-Heink Here With Walter Damrosch

Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink this season is celebrating her golden jubilee concert tour, her fiftieth season on the concert stage.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is scheduled for an appearance in Washington on December 7, as soloist with the New York Symphony orchestra, Walter Damrosch, conductor, at Poli's theater, singing in an all-Wagnerian program that Conductor Damrosch will offer at the second Tuesday afternoon Washington concert of the New York Symphony here this season. Mme. Schumann-Heink's repertoire on that occasion will include Erda's warning from "Rheingold," and the Waltraute scene from "Gotterdammerung."

Paul Kochanski, distinguished young Polish violinist, will be the soloist at the first 1926-27 appearance of the New York Symphony orchestra at Poli's on Tuesday afternoon, November 9, at 4:30 o'clock, while on the third and last appearance of the orchestra, on Tuesday afternoon, February 1, Otto Klemperer, famous German guest conductor, who conducted the New York symphony here at its final performance last season, will again have the baton.

Start Concert Early.

Special announcement is made by Mrs. Wilson-Greene, under whose Washington management Feodor Chaliapin, famous Russian basso, and his own opera company of principals, chorus and orchestra of 35 will present the famous Rossini opera, "The Barber of Seville," at Poli's theater on Thursday afternoon, November 4, to the effect that the performance of this opera will start promptly at 3 o'clock, instead of the usual 4:30 p. m. concert hour. The earlier hour is made necessary by the unusual magnitude of Chaliapin's production, and so important does Mrs. Wilson-Greene regard this announcement that special notices to that effect are being mailed to all artists' course subscribers.

Van Druton at Arts Club.

John van Druton, author of "Young Woodley," late lecturer on law in the University of Wales, will be the dinner guest of the Arts club next Friday vening. He will talk on "Modern English Dramatists and Their Methods." Mr. van Druton is a graduate of the University of London. Since his arrival in the United States he has established a reputation as a lecturer of unusual charm and ability.

Coming Theater Attractions

Milton Gropper's sensational comedy, "Ladies of the Evening," which broke all box office records for legitimate theater business, when it premiered in Washington, will be the attraction for the week beginning, October 25, at the President theater.

The highest royalties ever paid for a stock company production are asked by the David Belasco offices for the right to produce this comedy in Washington. The play will offer Leona Powers, Walter Gilbert, Frank Charlton, Francis Fraunie, Lorraine Webster, Betty Utmore, and the other President theater favorites congenial roles. Especially built sets of an elaborate character provide a handsome setting for the play.

"Ladies of the Evening" will be offered for only one week with no increase in prices. The box office sale for the production opens at the President on Monday.

John Van Druten's "Young Woodley," the comedy drama of adolescent first-love, due at the National on October 25, with Glen Hunter in the title role, has proved of inestimable value to educators and parents, especially parents. Since it is widely known as a frank study of adolescents and purports to exhibit a knotty problem, it has been followed with interest by those who could get a better understanding of their growing boys.

Many educators have seen the play and have used its thesis as subject matter for schools and club lectures. Such representative academicians as Profs. Raymond Weaver, John J. Coss and Hatcher Hughes, all of Columbia university, have found the play fraught with valuable significance and have lectured on it on various occasions in classes at Columbia. Mr. Angelo Patri, who is well known for his brilliant understanding of the human side of education, the educator and the educated, has seen it and found it impressively true to life and insight into the growing youth. Mr. Patri, it will be recalled, has written for many years on the subject and is recognized as an authority on these matters. The play has also been recognized as an authority by many headmasters and principals of preparatory and high school. Incidentally it has a strong appeal to students.

The viewpoint of an educator is stated by Prof. Elmer Kenyon, of Pittsburgh, in commenting on "Young Woodley":

"This play remains resplendent in a niche all its own. Its warming sincerity, its forceful grasp of a problem as delicate as it is deeply rooted in the nature of youth, and its translation of the problem from the printed pages of our psychologies into the dramatic language of the stage kindle a joy for the sensitive playgoer and project a brave study for educators."

"Lady Fair," the new operetta whose Broadway opening in November is being looked forward to by New Yorkers with the most pleasant anticipations, will give its premier performances in this city, arrangements having just been completed for its appearance at Poli's theater for an engagement of one week beginning Monday evening, October 25.

This is one of the most pretentious of the season's musical productions, and the local premier will attract not only the attention of every one in this city who admires the best in stage offerings, but hundreds of New Yorkers who will come here to view the performance.

Judging by past performances, "Lady Fair" compels serious attention. The book is by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, who wrote "Rose Marie," "The Song of the Flame" and many other recent successes, and by Frank Mandel, author of "No, No, Nanette" and a dozen other musical hits. The music is by Sigmund Romberg, who also composed "The Student Prince," Blossom Time" and many other musical masterpieces. ArArthur Hurley directed the book and Bobby Connelly, of the Ziegfeld forces, staged the dances. Woodman Thompson, America's foremost scenic artist, designed the elaborate stage settings. Schwab and Mandel are the producers.

A brilliant company of over 100 people will present "Lady Fair" and there will be an orchestra of 42 musicians to play the entrancing score.

"Lady Fair" will not have a Sunday opening because of its massive scenic equipment which requires two days for its installation.

Frances Starr in "The Shelf" will be the attraction at the Belasco next week.

The celebrated screen star, Jean Acker (the first Mrs. Rudolph Valentino) will top the bill at B. F. Keith's theater for the week of Octobore 24. Miss Acker will appear in a dramatic playlet entitled, "Smoke."

Next week's attraction at the Gayety theater will be Hurtig's & Samon's all-colored musical and dancing sensation, "4-11-44," featuring Eddie Hunter as the principal comedian. The big cast will include Grayce Rector, ingenue-prima donna; Aurora B. Greeley, ingenue; George W. Cooper, Le Roy Broomfield, juvenile; Nina Hunter, soubrette; Andrew Tribble, female impersonator; Crawford Jackson and Catherine Jarvis, specialty dancers; Duke Charles Victor, Happy Holmes, Norman Astwood and a chorus of 25 brown-skin girls. "4-11-44" has a plot and is presented in two big acts with plenty of music and dancing.

The outstanding features of next week's bill of combined vaudeville and photoplay entertainment at the Earle theater will be supplied by the famous "Four Mortons," headed by Sam and Kitty, who for two generations have been foremost among the stars of vaudeville; Miller and Mack, "The Bing Boys," in comedy, singing and dancing, and by a special added attraction, "Matinee Idols," a smart revue, participated in by four feminine and two masculine stars. Three other acts of Keith's popular-price vaudeville will complete the stage portion of the entertainment, which will have as a screen feature First National's production of "The Great Deception." The principal roles are played by Ben Lyon and Aileen Pringle.

Renee Adoree, as a roguish young beauty of old Erin, with all the Irish humor, pluck and charm, will make you fall for "Blarney," the screen feature for the coming week at the Strand theater, beginning Sunday, Octobar 24. "Blarney" is a powerful, fast-moving story of a man's regeneration through love and a girl's faith; the greatest bare-knuckle prize-fight picture ever filmed, chucked full of thrilling, throbbing, romantic moments that you will never forget.

On the stage the offerings will consist of five acts of Loew's vaudeville, headed by Gomez and Winona in "Danceland," a terpsichorean revue with Ched Freeborn, Verna Shaff and Palmer Young, introducing the six dancing rockets. Other numbers on the vaudeville program will include Frank Browne and K. LaVelle in "Don't Handle the Goods," with songs by Paul Gerard Smith; Marty White in a novelty surprise, "The Rolling Laugh;" the Herberts in a trampoline number entitled, "Thrilling Comedy Gymnasts," and others.

Short film features and orchestral numbers, under the direction of Arthur J. Manvell, will complete the program.

Dramatic situations and colorful and luxurious settings feature "The Midnight Sun," a Universal superproduction, comes to the Rialto next week.

The picture, a thrilling story of Russia just before the world war, has been given an all-star cast and was directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki, noted Russian director. Heading the players are such favorites as Laura La Plante, Pat O'Malley, Raymond Keane and an unusually large cast.

One of the new season's greatest photoplay attractions and two musical novelties will feature the stage and screen program announced for presentation at Loew's Palace for the week starting next Sunday afternoon, October 24.

"The Temptress," a picturization of the famous novel of same name by V. Blasco Ibanez, Spanish novelist, produced by Cosmopolitan and released as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, with Greta Garbo, Antonio Moreno, Roy D'Arcy, Lionel Barrymore, Virginia Brown Faire, Marc MacDermott and many other screen favorites, is announced as the photoplay attraction.

The stage program will offer, as one of its principal features, a return engagement of Rubinoff, guest conductor and violin soloist, who scored such a tremendous hit here last month at the Palace.

Also on the stage will be presented Willie Robyn, tenor, of the Capitol theater, New York city, and noted Cameo record star, in connection with a superb and beautiful overture, "A Bouquet of Roses."

"Bardelys, the Magnificent," a new King Vidor production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, based on the famous novel of the same name by Rafael Sabatini, author of "Scaramouche" and "The Sea Hawk," and starring John Gilbert, recently seen in "The Merry Widow" and "La Boheme," is announced as the featured production at Loew's Columbia theater, following the current engagement there of Mary Pickford's latest starring production, "Sparrows." The supporting cast is distinguished, and includes Eleanor Boardman, Roy D'Arcy, Lionel Belmore, George K. Arthur, Karl Dane, and others.

For the week of October 24 at Crandall's Metropolitan theater beginning next Sunday at 3 o'clock the chief screen feature will be "Gigolo," with Rod LaRoque, and the added stage attraction, Art Landry and his Victory recording orchestra. The supplementary features will embrace added short reels, the symphonic contributions of the orchestra under the conductorship of Daniel Breeskin, and on week days during the alternate hours with the symphony of the Metropolitan Ramblers, led by Milton Davis.

The first two days of next week Crandall's Tivoli theater will show "Bigger Than Barnum's," starring Viola Dana under the direction of Monta Bell, former Washington newspaper man. On Tuesday and Wednesday, Patsy Ruth Miller, in "Broken Hearts of Hollywood," succeeded on Thursday and Friday by Laura LaPlante in "Her Big Night." For Saturday only Ralph Ince's new production, "The Sea Wolf."

The first three days of next week at Crandall's Ambassador theater "Gigolo" will be shown. On Wednesday and Thursday of next week, May McAvoy, in "The Passionate Quest," succeeded on Friday only by Douglas MacLean in "Hold That Lion," a new comedy. For Saturday only, Viola Dana is announced in Monta Bell's production, "Bigger Than Barnum's."

The following feature bookings are announced for the week of October 24 at Crandall's Central theater: Sunday and Monday, May McAvoy in "The Passionate Quest;" Tuesday and Wednesday, Gloria Swanson in "Fine Manners;" Thursday and Friday, First National's production, "Men of Steel," Saturday only, Priscilla Dean in "The Dice Woman."

EVOLUTION OF VODVIL SKETCHED

The impending centennial celebration of the now great American institution of vaudeville will be observed during the current season of 1926-27 in every city and most of the towns of this country. In its nascent days of 1826 in the now forgotten Lafayette theater in Laurens street, near Canal, the novel form of diversified entertainment was called "Varieties," the programs being made up of a series of dances or song solos, a recitation or two, feats of strength, a trained animal occasionally, and as an added attraction, perhaps, a two-headed calf, a three-legged chicken, and on one occasion, at least, a "dancing dwarf in comic ballads," who created a sensation on the stage of White's Melodeon theater at 53 Bowery, but whose career was cut short when an enthusiastic customer hit the performer with a heavy beer glass. For be it remembered that the admission to White's Melodeon was 12½ cents, including one drink or a cigar. In those days only men attended the "Varieties," tables and chairs filled the auditorium, the shows were crude and even vulgar, and much drinking and occasional disorder for a time hindered and discredited the popular progress of the new style of indoor amusement.

There are no fundamentalists among the students and historians of vaudeville. They are all evolutionists. They are all agreed that the first variety show of 1826 is "the missing link." But it was in Boston nearly 40 years ago that the primordial creature called "Variety" first stood up and "walked like a man." It was christened "Vaudeville," turned its face toward the light and sweetness of life and developed swiftly and steadily into the world's most popular branch of theatrical entertainment. During the century that has passed since the nascence of vaudeville, it has drawn sustenance and significance from every art and science, and in its ceaseless search for distinguished diversity it has come to enlist foremost artists of drama, opera, ballet, instrumental music, sport, circus and pantomime.

The number, beauty, size, cost and structural perfection of the thousands of vaudeville theaters now in prosperous operation in the United States and Canada, have become the wonder and delight of audiences and artists everywhere. Out of the forgotten ooze and slime of the primordial days of "Variety," this splendid institution stands forth after 100 years of unfaltering progress. For vaudeville has become the favored diversion of American families, of children as well as of grown-ups, happy, wholesome, instructive and more infinitely diversified than at any time in its history. And in these days of tireless progress in all branches of amusement, vaudeville has come to be regarded as an inexhaustible mine of stage talent. From the kaleidoscopic stage of the two-a-day singers step directly to grand opera, virtuosi to the concert stage, comedians, dancers, acrobats and magicians become stars or features of musical comedy, farce and legitimate drama.

It is a centennial worth celebrating—this hundredth anniversary in the history of vaudeville and its evolution.

Lives as Opposite Of Screen Creations

It is doubtful if the whole, gaudy panorama that Hollywood presents is a greater paradox than the private life and the screen life of Raymond Griffith, the Paramount comedian, whose latest comedy, "You'd Be Surprised!" is announced as the featured screen attraction at Loew's Palace this week, starting today.

For instance:

He's a high hat comedian on the screen, but has never worn a high hat in real life.

Ray has wooed and won more girls in front of the camera than any other comedian—yet he's a bachelor.

His public life is known to millions of screen admirers, but his private life is a closed book.

He isn't averse to pulling a rough and tumble "gag" in pictures, but when he's through working at the studio he's never seen "clowning around."

His only regret is that he can't be both a picture actor and a cowpuncher. Very fond of horseback riding, Ray rides three or four mornings a week before coming to the studio.

A Simple Story.

Alfred Santell puts his best foot forward in his latest picture for Al Rockett, "Subway Sadie," beginning today at Crandall's Metropolitan and Ambassador theaters.

Al Rockett, the genius behind the immortal "Abraham Lincoln," picked out a winning story for "Subway Sadie." Rockett believes that the movie-going public the world over wants a story that is simple, natural, sweet, plausible and with an application to the millions of good-natured, average humans, the kind that go to movie houses week in and week out.

That's exactly the kind of story that "Subway Sadie" is. A salesgirl in a fur shop falls in love with a handsome subway guard. They are about to get married when the girl is offered the opportunity which she has been waiting for all her life—a trip to Paris. She is about to give up her dream of wedded bliss and leave for Europe when an accident to her sweetheart brings her back to him forever.

Sounds simple, doesn't it? Yet it is life. Santell has done wonders with this story. You remember "Classified?" "Subway Sadie" is a piece from the same cloth.

Scraps a Title.

Thousands of dollars worth of advertising, billing, etc., became worthless when Mary Pickford suddenly decided to change the name of her latest starring production, at Loew's Columbia this week, from "Scraps" to "Sparrows." The title is derived from the biblical passage in the Gospel of Luke concerning the watchful care of Providence over even the fall of a sparrow.

GIRL SCOUTS

Mrs. Amos Fries, chairman of the court of awards for the Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia, has served five years. Mrs. Fries' duties are particularly heavy at this time of the year, when scouts from all over the city are eager to display their knowledge of the various activities in which they have studied and worked. Examinations are arranged for, examiners obtained, and finally, on the big day of the court of awards gatherings, the scouts receive their rewards for diligence in the form of merit or proficiency badges, which are sewed on the sleeves of their uniforms.

These embroidered emblems, with their figures—the wise old owl for scholarship, a wideawake eye for observer, bee for economist, hearth fire for home service—are displayed proudly on the sleeve of every progressive scout's uniform, but they do not say, "Look! See what I have won?" but rather, "See, I am equipped to help you!"

Mrs. Fries has kept the standard of the badges at their highest, enlisting the services of the best talent qualified to examine the scouts. The Corcoran Art gallery is in charge of the artist work, the signal corps examines for the photographer and signaling badges, and George Washington university for the home economics subjects.

Mme. Esteva is the needlewoman and dressmaker judge; Mrs. Frank F. Gooding, wife of Senator Gooding, supervises "handywoman" skill; Miss Ethel Foster passes on the craftsman, and Miss Myers, both of Western High school, oversees the athletic tryouts.

Health is an important side of Girl Scouts, and work along this line—first aid, health winner and health guardian, is in charge of Mrs. Percy Vize, R. N. Scouts who like to write stories and verse find inspiration and help from Mrs. E. Goring Bliss, herself a writer.

Nature lore too, is a major branch of scouting, and all such work is submitted to Dr. Paul Bartsch of the National museum and George Washington university. Mrs. Raymond Crist and Mme. Von Unschuld are others who give of their time and talents to promote the rapidly growing need for and of the Girl Scouts.

Through the kindness of Gen. Fries, Camp Bradley, the Girl Scout camp, was established six years ago. The chemical warfare service volunteered the necessary labor of building the tent floors and famous "boardwalks" of the camp. In 1921, Washington scouts occupied the site alone, but since that time have shared the property with the Baltimore scouts.

Headquarters Notes.

Miss Gleaves, local director, will begin the morning training class for prospective Girl Scout leaders from 10 to 12 tomorrow at headquarters.

Troop Notes.

Troop 54 had its first fall meeting at Sherwood High school. The officers are: Bluebird patrol, Sue Thomas; patrol leader, Sylvia Stabler, corporal; red bird patrol, Polly Robinson; patrol leader, Eunice Leizear, corporal; red-winged blackbird patrol, Cecelia Thomas; patrol leader, Catherine Alvord, corporal. Sylvia Stabler also is troop scribe.

Troop 58, of Aurora Heights, Va., held its second meeting at the James Monroe school. After the opening ceremony the girls held patrol corners and learned part of the Morse code, using a flashlight.

Troop 47 held its court of honor before the regular meeting at the Chevy Chase school grounds.

Troop 43, formerly Troop 20-B, met at St. Alban's. They conducted classes in tenderfoot, first aid, compass and judging. Each patrol gave an impromptu "stunt." Plans for a troop library were discussed and Mary Brown was elected head librarian.

Troop 24 was fortunate in having Miss Engle visit them and give instruction in astronomy and teach new games.

Troop 16, of Ballston, Va., has a scout house, which they own jointly with the Boy Scouts. Two new recruits are about ready to take the tenderfoot test and become scouts.

The first meeting of Falls Church troop 13 was held in the parish hall. After the opening the troop decided to practice the operetta which it plans to give during scout week this month. Scouts who had been to Camp Adventure on a hike told of their experiences. Those scouts, six in number, were Rose Ardai, Sarah Pope, Valerie Wheeler, Marian Irvin, Ellen Anderson and Lucy Cline. Troop 13 has reported their election of officers: Elisabeth Parks, patrol leader of purple iris patrol; Nadine Steacy, patrol leader of red poppy patrol, and Mary Parks, patrol leader of sweet pea patrol.

Troop 11's meeting was opened with inspection, followed by patrol corners. These scouts have a paper called the Chatterbox.

Old-Time Comedian, Jack Wilson, Here

Jack Wilson is the blackface comedian of whimsicality, who has won his way to fame in vaudeville by sheer nonsense and arrant whim. He is the headliner at the Strand this week.

Wilson, a combination of many styles, improvises as he goes along and trusts to the inspiration of his fellow players on the bill to create comedy.

He burlesques every actor and actress that precedes him on the program.

He is an artist who is completely master of any situation, one technically learned in the theater through twenty-odd years of "trooping," never at a loss for a ready answer, a good salesman to the public and an agreeable personality.

Fives and Sixes.

William Beaudine, who directed Mary Pickford's latest starring picture, "Sparrows," at Loew's Columbia this week, and who also directed her previous starring production, "Little Annie Rooney," made Miss Pickford's acquaintance 'way back in the old Biograph days on Fourteenth street, New York, when Miss Pickford was a D. W. Griffith star at $5 a day and Beaudine was a $6 a week property boy at the same studio.

JAVA BATIKS A HIT AT CITY ART MEETING

By ADA RAINEY.

IN the studio of Miss Lillian Burke and Miss Virginia Al, at 1355 Connecticut avenue, an interesting evening was spent Wednesday by a goodly number of artists, when Mrs. David Fairchild, daughter of Dr. Graham Bell, gave an informal talk on batiks and textiles of Java and the Dutch East Indies. Mrs. Fairchild recently returned from Java and the East Indies, where she collected a large number of textiles made by the natives.

Many of the textiles are modern and some are old batiks that are soft in texture and marvelous in the intricacy of their design. So difficult is the process of their making that often to perfect the design of the batiks as many as twenty different dippings are necessary for each dye. On the old Javanese batiks only two colors are used, brown and blue. This Javanese batik is responsible for the many-hued silks and the numerous families of batiks that have proved so popular the last few years among workers in the arts and crafts.

In the hands of many artists batik has grown to be a thing of beauty, gorgeous in color and exquisite in design. It is different from the designs that grace the cotton fabric of the Javanese. It is doubtful if the designs and beauty of workmanship of the Javanese has been equaled by the modern painter on silk.

There also were many beautifully woven textiles from several of the islands of the Dutch East Indies that are remarkable for the exquisite fineness and technical perfection of the workmanship. In the woven materials there is more variety of color, and the dark reds, glinted with gold thread, are lovely. Here the designs are formal, larger in their figures and different from the designs of the dyed batiks.

The women wear the woven and dyed cloths, which are practically all of cotton, for there is little wool raised or needed in a tropical country. The men also wear it for turbans and clothes. Some interesting variations were shown in the dancing costumes, headdresses and masks used by the Javanese dancers. The opportunity to see so large a collection of textiles was unusually interesting.

Plans for Art Criticisms.

In the same studio, which is quite a center of artistic activity, for Miss Burke is chairman of the arts and crafts branch of the Arts club, there will be an innovation during the season. Plans have been made to have Henry B. Snell, the New York painter, come to Washington once a month to give criticisms to a class of professional artists.

The class will meet Tuesday at 3 p. m. each month. Work in oil and water colors will be accepted, and portraits, landscape and figures will be allowed in the class. The class will number fifteen or twenty members, among whom will be Jessie Baker, Margaret Lent, Eleanor Custis, Baroness Kroff, Adalaid Field, Emily Stuart, Dorothy Kalb and Gertrude Brown.

Chinese Treasures Here.

There are three rare treasures in the Dunthorne gallery, on Connecticut avenue, which those interested in Chinese art will be delighted to see. These treasures are three paintings, makimonos that belong to the Ming and Ching dynasties, covering the period from 1360 to 1644. This is on the authority of Parrish Watson, the Oriental expert of New York. The paintings are on silk, rolled on slender sticks as is customary in Chinese paintings of the early periods.

It is in the subject matter, which is of unusual interest, and the marvelous technique in which the painters of China have never been excelled, that the sheer delight of the paintings is held.

The "Westlake" painting is a landscape such as the Chinese poets delight to sing of and to depict. It is of rocks or earth, sky and water, the three aspects of nature that one invariably finds in all Chinese painting, and which represent the three aspects of the manifestation of the invisible in material form. There is a delicate color in this painting on the background, while the outline mostly is in black and white. The other Ching painting depicts the Buddha and saints in meditation and various phases of their life in the upper regions, where they are served by the lesser saints and wise men who have not attained the state of beatification as have the buddhas.

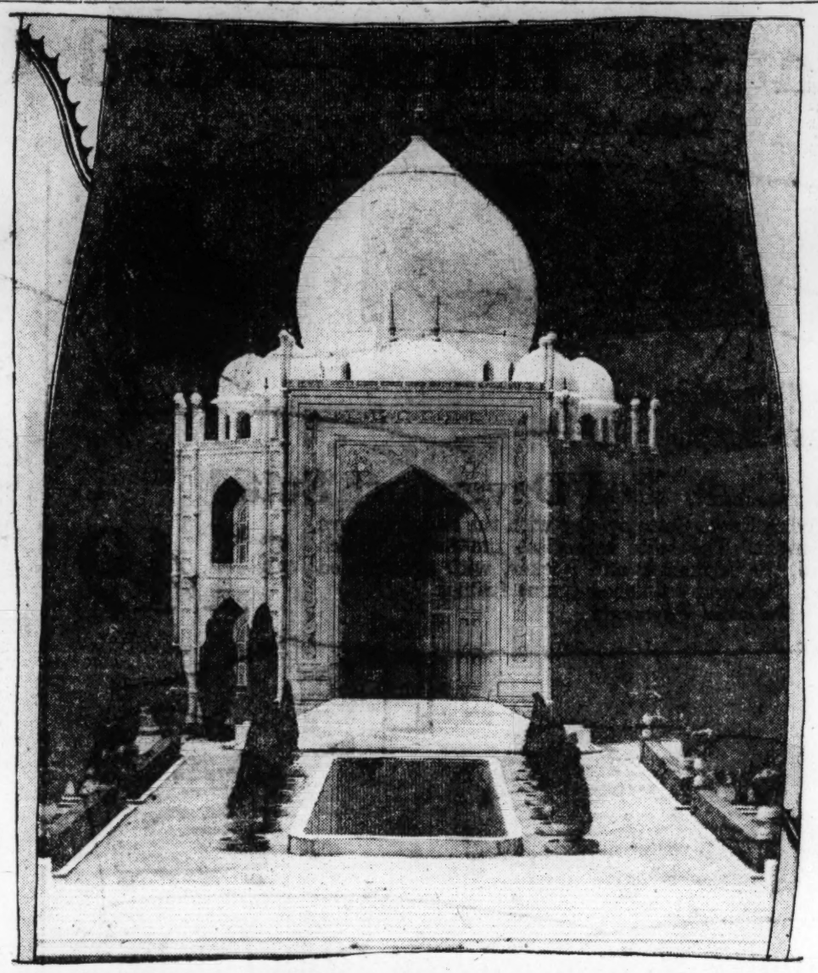

The third is of the Ming period and is unusual in subject. It is concerned with horses and the men attending them. The painting in this instance is done with the remarkable skill of the old artists and is rich in color.

There is a "human interest story" to these paintings. A Chinese boy who is working his way through college, brought these makimonos from his native land to pay for his education. He took them to Dunthorne to sell for him. They belonged to the treasures that China still has in the ample folds of her garments.

Model Temple at Library.

Many architects and others interested are attracted by the model of the temple in the Indian style of the world-famous Taj-Mahal, designed and executed by Charles Mason Remey, exhibited this month at the Washington Public library. The temple proper is surmounted by one large and several smaller domes and minarets, and is in the center of a garden laid off with walks, hedges, fountains, trees and shrubs surrounded by terraces and lawns. The outlay of grounds is done in scale and in colors reproducing the effect of an Oriental temple. At night the ensemble is seen to advantage—the exterior in a pale blue light producing an effect of moonlight while the interior is lighted from within.

Remey, who is well known in Washington, has traveled extensively in the Orient, where he has made a special study of the architecture of India, now recorded in several of his published works. Remey is architect for some important building operations now being carried on in the development of modern Palestine.

In his talk last week at the library before the class in Oriental art from George Washington university, Remey sketched the development of Indian temple architecture from the initial impulse brought by the Mogul invasion from the north during the Middle Ages, and its subsequent fusion with Mohammedan influence.

Temple Built for Wife.

"Although woman in Mohammedan countries," said Remey, "is supposed to occupy a less exalted position than with us in the West, it is a singular fact that the Taj-Mahal, considered the most beautiful temple in the world, was built as a memorial to a woman, the favorite wife of Shah Jehan of India.

"As the romanesque grew out from the Roman classic style, and as the Gothic developed from the Romanesque, both under the impetus given by the Christian religion, so the Arabian style was an outgrowth from the Byzantine under the influence of Islam," he said. "The Arabian style was the first distinct style of Moslem architecture; its most beautiful examples are found in Cairo.

"The Indian style of architecture reached its greatest period in development during the Moslem tenure of India under the Mogul dynasty, extending from 1526 to 1707. This epoch marks a very splendid age of Oriental culture, when elements of civilization of Persia were brought by virile conquerors from the north and planted amid new conditions, racial and economic, during a time of comparative peace and prosperity.

"The world-famous Taj-Mahal at Agra, built by the Mogul Emperor Shah Jehan during the middle of the seventeenth century as the mausoleum of his favorite wife, without doubt is the best known and most admired building of that epoch," he said.

Remey's model varies in style and is unlike the Taj-Mahal in detail. It represents a commission to be erected in the Near East. It will remain on view at the library this month, and the public is invited to view it.

Italian Wins at Carnegie.

A young Italian artist, Ferruccio Ferrazzi, of Rome, was awarded first prize in the twenty-fifth international exhibition of paintings which opened Thursday at Carnegie institute. The prize is $1,500. The title of the painting which won the award is "Horitia and Fabiola."

The fact Ferrazzi took the first prize this year and that young Italian artists have taken the second prize at the last two Carnegie internationals, indicates the new Italian renaissance, like the old one, is developing rapidly along artistic as well as political and economic lines. No national group in the present and the two preceding internationals has shown such rapid advancement as the Italian.

K. X. Roussel, of Paris, carried off the second prize of $1,000 for his painting, "Faun and Nymph Under a Tree." Russell was born in 1865 and is generally associated in the art world with his two contemporaries, Bonnard and Vuillard. His favorite subject is, as in the painting which won second place, landscape in which fauns and nymphs dance before the trees. Throughout his paintings there is the joy of living and a love of life.

The third prize of $500 went to a well-known American artist, Robert Spencer, of New Hope, Pa. Spencer had been awarded an honorable mention in the nineteenth international and has won a number of other important prizes in America. He was born at Harvard, Nebr., studied under Chase and Henri, and is a member of the National academy.

First honorable mention which carries with it a prize of $200 was won by Max Kuehne, an artist of New York city. He was born in 1880 and studied under Kenneth Hayes Miller, Chase and Henri. He has achieved a place in the first rank of American contemporary landscape painters. John Carroll, of Woodstock, N. Y.; Dod Proctor (Mrs. Ernest Proctor), of Cornwall, England; and Antoine Faistauer, of Salzburg, Austria, also were awarded honorable mentions.

Housewarming at Studio.

Wednesday afternoon Alexis B. Many gave a housewarming in his new studio on Randolph place northeast, in honor of the new director of drawing in the public schools, Miss Bray, who takes the place left vacant by Miss Annie M. Wilson. There were 40 or 50 artists present, mostly teachers and friends of the department of art. Many's new quarters are in the old studio owned by the late Paul Bartlett. It has a garden and is attractive and unusual. Paintings by Many and sculptures by Bartlett were on exhibition.

Modern Art Show Nov. 20.

The Brooklyn museum announces the opening November 20 of the international exhibition of modern art arranged by the Societe Anonyme for the Brooklyn museum. The exhibition has been assembled by Miss Katherine S. Dreier, president of the Societe Anonyme, an organization which was formed by herself and Marcel Duchamp to provide the people of this country with an opportunity for the study of the most recent movements in art. Further details regarding the exhibition will be announced later.

Sickert Wins Garden Prize.

A special prize of $500, offered by the Garden club of Allegheny county for a garden picture, was awarded to Walter Sickert, of London. Sickert is one of the pioneers among modern British painters. He was born in 1860 and in 1924 was made an associate of the Royal academy.

Of the eight awards, one—the first—went to an Italian, two to English artists, three to Americans, one to a Frenchman, and one to an Austrian.

Ferrazzi, who won first prize, was born in Rome in 1891. He copied old masters for a time under the guidance of his father and then studied under Coromaldi and Sartorio at the Institute of Fine Arts in Rome. At first he painted after the manner of Segantini. He then passed a short but interesting interval in the impressionist movement from which he reverted to the masters of the fifteenth century. Now at 35 years old he has developed a highly original art, not without traces of the varied influences of his early years.

He won the national pension in Rome in 1914. At the Roman International in 1924 Ferrazzi was honored with a group of 25 paintings, mostly psychological portraits of himself and his family. A number of his paintings also were shown in the Italian exhibition at Carnegie institute in 1925, and in an exhibition of modern Italian art which toured the United States in 1926. He also has attained considerable distinction as a sculptor.

There are 378 paintings in the exhibition. Of this total 272 are from Europe and 106 from America. There are sixteen nations represented, the largest number in the history of the international. The nations in the order of the number of paintings contributed by each are as follows: United States, France, Italy, Great Britain, Spain, Germany, Russia, Sweden, Norway, Belgium, Holland, Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and Roumania.

One Man Show a Feature.

A feature of this year's exhibition is a one-man show of a group of paintings by Giovanni Romagnoli, one of the most distinguished of the younger artists of Italy. He was born in 1893 and is a teacher in the academy at Bologna. He was awarded second prize in the twenty-third international, and served on the jury of award for the present exhibition. He is to remain in Pittsburgh for some months as a visiting instructor in painting at the college of fine arts, Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Three distinguished painters who died during the year will be represented for the last time in the Carnegie international. They are Charles Cottet and Felix Vallotton, French artists, and Mary Cassatt, the American artist, who was born in Pittsburgh, but lived for many years in France. Mary Cassatt undoubtedly was the most important woman painter born in America. The Carnegie institute has in its permanent collection of paintings a very fine example of her work.

The prize of $500 given by the Garden club of Allegheny county, was awarded for the second time. This prize is a unique one among awards given in the United States. In establishing it, the club desired to call attention to the opportunities for subjects which artists will find in gardens and, moreover, to encourage people in general to make gardens that will be worthy of the best efforts of artists.

The prizes for the exhibition were awarded by a jury of six artists, presided over by Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts. The jury of award met in Pittsburgh September 22. The members were Pierre Bonnard, of Paris; Giovanni Romagnoli, of Bologna, Italy; Charles Sims, of London; and three American artists, Charles W. Hawthorne, Howard Giles and Gifford Beal, all of New York. Bonnard is a leading French painter. He was awarded third prize at the twenty-second Carnegie international. Charles Sims has the official position of keeper of the Royal academy. He was awarded first prize at Carnegie in 1912.

Exhibits Begun in 1896.

The Carnegie international was begun in 1896 and each year since that time, with the excepton of the five years of the world war, an exhibition has been held. It is the only one of its kind on the American continent and, in fact, the only annual international exhibition in the world, since the Venetian international is held only every two years. During the last 30 years the Pittsburgh salon has introduced many of the outstanding figures of European art to America.

A special effort has been made in the present exhibition to have not only different nations represented but also the various schools and tendencies within each nation, thus offering to the public the current news of the art world.

The exhibition will continue through December 5. Immediately thereafter a group of approximately 150 of the European paintings will be shown at the Cleveland Museum of Art, January 4, through February 14, 1927, and at the Art Institute of Chicago, from March 7 to April 18.

Under the terms of Andrew Carnegie's gift of the institute to Pittsburgh, the exhibition is "free to the people."

FISHER BACKS PROHIBITION; ITS SUCCESS HELD PROVED BY CHARTS AND STATISTICS

One of America's greatest economists and students of living conditions, Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale university, has written a book, "Prohibition at Its Worst" (The MacMillan Co., New York).

He first takes up the matter from a personal standpoint and treats it from the viewpoint of 25 years' observation of its effects. He draws the definite conclusion that alcohol is a physiological poison, and out of place in the human body." He also declares very early in his book that "Prohibition is the ultimate solution, when public sentiment is adequate to enforce it."

Fewer Are Drinking.

The author sees a great falling off in the number of recruits yearly to the drinking habit since prohibition came into effect. He presents numerous charts and statements to prove this contention, and sets out that "if, under the severe tests obtaining in New York city, we find no justification for the loud claim that drunkenness in general, youthful drunkenness and female drunkenness, are increasing; but, instead, find that first offenders or first convictions have dwindled to less than a third of the pre-prohibition numbers, and even convictions of old offenders diminished from 1916 to 1925 by more than one-half, the main contention of the wets collapses at the start.

An interesting chart is printed of the situation as regards intoxication in Washington, D. C., showing the condition for fourteen years. Before prohibition, according to this chart, arrests for drunkenness had been steadily rising. "Since prohibition," writes Prof. Fisher, "the number of arrests has not been as great while the probable amount of drunkenness these represent is less than 50 per cent of the average for 1910 to 1916, and only one-third of the 1914-1916 average."

Washington Is Cited.

Prof. Fisher takes issue with the contention of Stanley Shirk, research director of the Moderation league, that there is increased drinking among the young people of Washington. Mr. Shirk made the bald statement: "A bone-dry law was enacted for Washington before national prohibition became effective, and immediately youthful drunkenness increased. In 1918 it rose to 73 and by 1924 had reached 282, an increase of 540 per cent above the pre-prohibition level. This condition in Washington merely confirms what is known to exist in the rest of the country."

Prof. Fisher attributes some of this increase based on arrests of persons under 22 years of age on the fact of the artificial growth of the National Capital due to the world war and the thousands of young persons who came here from all parts of the country. Prof. Fisher states further: "The artificial atmosphere and stimulations of the Nation's Capital might easily produce among certain of the youth who flocked there a record of excesses that would hardly be typical of conditions among the youth in other parts of the country. It is unfortunate for Mr. Shirk's contentions that he fails to present such a record for any other city."

Better Situation at Yale.

Nor is Prof. Fisher pessimistic about the enforcement of prohibition in the colleges. He admits frankly that the prevailing sentiment among Yale students is wet, but a survey of the drinking situation there made and checked through eight sources shows that the number of discipline cases at Yale in which drinking is a factor is much smaller than before prohibition and that the improvement has been especially noticeable in the last few years. He also quotes a survey of the Literary Digest among college and university heads which brought answers declaring the beneficial effect of prohibition on the student bodies and on youth in general.

Prof. Fisher also found that the extent of the dislike of prohibition is much exaggerated. Statistics are quoted showing the degree of Federal enforcement and the extent of local cooperation which is constantly improving, he asserts.

The case of alcohol and longevity is also discussed by Prof. Fisher. Insurance statistics show that total abstainers reveal a mortality of 84.3 per cent of that expected; moderate users," 97.2 per cent; "regular beer drinkers," 111.3 per cent, and "regular spirit drinkers," 128.9 per cent.

Alcohol Held Poison.

That alcohol is a poison is asserted in a chapter and also, that according to many authorities, it is a depressant, not a stimulant, and is a habit former.

That the general public health is improved by prohibition is another statement by Prof. Fisher, who says "it represents the greatest hygienic experiment in history and one of the most successful."

The economic value of prohibition has been based as $6,000,000,000 a year. It has been estimated that prohibition saves 5 per cent of what used to be wasted from incomes, and he adds another 5 per cent into the bargain.

More than the monetary gain is the gain to small children in better homes, better parents and better educational facilities due to the saving from liquor expenditure, he adds.

In the matter of enforcing prohibition, Prof. Fisher believes it can and will be done. He advocates granting more powers by Congress to Gen. Andrews, who is in charge of the work of enforcement; the deportation of alien bootleggers when captured; instruction in schools on the physiological effects of alcohol, and the abandonment by so-called good citizens of serving bootleg liquor in their homes.

Latest Books Tersely Reviewed

In this story Mr. Benson has added a new angle to the usual society romance of the hour and has written a really readable book around a rather hackneyed theme.

Is ten years difference in the age of a man and woman, with the woman the elder, an insurmountable bar to marital happiness? This question the reader asks after he has finished the book. With true art Mr. Benson leaves the reader guessing as to the outcome as the woman goes to meet her husband hours after she has given him the option of seeking a divorce in order to marry a boyhood sweetheart or of putting the other woman entirely out of his life.

The wife is a noble, high-minded woman for whom this man younger than herself at first entertained a really romantic love then respectful affection quite similar to that usually given to wives and mothers of children. For the younger woman who comes again into his life after twelve years of happy married life he has a romantic affection but it is not leavened with respect. The book is well worth reading.

The real old-time villainess posing as a saint of the melodrama of premotion picture days is within the pages of this book, in all her beauty and intrigue.

The villainess, a beautiful adventuress, appears this time in the guise of a governess for the child of a society butterfly and her handsome young husband. She manages by bribery and false witness to separate the husband and wife and to gain control of the child and thus through her the young husband.

After the divorce, the marriage of the governess and the young father seems to be a matter of course. But the child of 8, the wistful young daughter, unwinds the tangle, vindicates her mother and exposes the villainy of her governess and brings her father and mother together and they live happily for ever as in the good, old-fashioned story-book way.

THINKING ABOUT THINKING. By Cassius J. Keyser, Ph. D., LL. D. (E. P. Dutton Co., New York).

Psychologists have not yet been able to tell us what thinking is, this volume points out. The author asserts that most knowledge is knowledge of the undefined, such as knowledge of love, for example, or knowledge of life. As for thinking, according to this great thinker, though we can not define it, we know that there are many kinds of thought.

The book deals on the great problems in regard to thought, beginning with the question as to thinking from an organic behavior point of view, autonomous or postulational thinking, the importance and availability of autonomous thinking and detection of postulates.

THE CLEAN UP. By Mark Lee Luther (The Bobbs- Merrill Co., Indianapolis).

Quick action, romance, intrigue and politics play important parts in the compilation of this book which is quite modern and human in its theme. Mr. Luther introduces a new character in the many of the accepted characters of fiction in the city manager of a New York suburb, an ex-army officer, very honest, very efficient and very conscientious.

The wily old crowd who found the old ways more lucrative in politics naturally watch this new pathfinder in order to catch him in some false step to shake the faith of his followers. When he falls in love with another man's wife, this scrutiny is, of course, increased.

In this book the reader will see the Suburbia he knows, with its urban aspirations, its modern improvements, snobbishness, scandal eye to keyhole society, its cultural pose, and faking its feminine jealousy and its problem of modern young people.

This book is particularly pleasing because while it is written with a large hand, it is notable for its absence of bitterness. The author displays a keen sense of humor and great delight in human nature.

We are very glad Mr. Train has paged Mr. Tutt for the edification of the reading public once again. In our previous acquaintance with the old gentleman in high hat and with stogy, we were all of one mind that we did not want to let the friendship die.

In this book Mr. Tutt is with us in all his shrewd, legal, whimsicalities and benevolence in ten episodes, which are readable from human interest, mystery and just plain story writing points of view.

This book is an attempt to meet the demand for reality in religion, an endeavor to answer the question as to what Jesus actually achieved in his teachings.

THOMAS BURKE, whose latest novel, "The Sun in Splendour," has just been published.

Book Notes

The poetry of the passing generation of poets among whom Edith M. Thomas was preeminent, is preserved in "Selected Poems," by Miss Thomas, which Harper & Brothers have just published. The death of Edith M. Thomas last year brought forth a wave of eulogy from the press which would have amazed the gentle, modest poet. From all of her poetry, written during a long life, much published, some hitherto unseen except by friends, Jessie Rittenhouse has chosen the best and has made a book upon which Miss Thomas' reputation may firmly rest.

Margaret Wilson, author of "The Able McLaughlins" and the recently published novel, "The Painted Room" (Harpers) has returned to her native land for a short visit. She has been living in England since her marriage to an Oxford professor. When she goes back she will live in the shade of the historical old Wormwood Scrubs prison in London, as her husband has been appointed deputy governor of the prison. Miss Wilson stopped off in New York city only several days on her way home.

"Englishwomen in Life and Letters," by Miss M. Phillips and W. Tomkinson, will soon be published by the Oxford University Press, American branch. The main part of this volume is devoted to a detailed study of women in England during the past two hundred years, viewed from the aspects of domesticity, politics, scholarship, education, economics, labor and even crime. In addition there is an introductory chapter dealing with the earlier centuries. The whole is written in a most entertaining manner, and the illustrations are delightful.

Moysheh Oyved is the proprietor of "Cameo Corner," a tiny but famous jewel shop in London. His autobiography, "Visions and Jewels," one of those rare documents that warm the heart with their humanity, was recently issued by the Holts. Born a Polish peasant, this little man is now the valued friend of statesman, sage, and artist. "Visions and Jewels" is the story of a life that has dreamed, suffered and attained, a lovable life that has given much of quaint humor and gentle philosophy. Moreover, the book is the work of a genuinely gifted writer.

Arthur Bowie Chrisman was awarded the John Newberry medal for "the most distinguished contribution to American children's literature during 1925," at the conference of the American Library association in Atlantic City October 4. The medal was presented by Miss Nina C. Brotherton, chairman of the Children's Librarians' section. The book for which Mr. Chrisman received the award is his "Shen of the Sea," a series of Chinese stories for children, published by the Duttons.

The Newberry medal takes its name from John Newberry, an Englishman, and the first publisher of books for children. It was given first for the year 1921 to Hendrik Van Loon, author of "The Story of Mankind," at a meeting of the American Library association held in Detroit. The 1922 award went to Hugh Lofting, author of the "Dr. Dolittle" stories. The 1923 medal was given to Charles Boardman Hawes, author of "The Dark Frigate," and the award for 1924 went to Charles J. Finger, author of "Tales from Silver Lands."

The feeling that a genuine contribution to literature for children should be recognized as an event in the same way that achievement in any field is recognized, was responsible for the idea of the Newberry medal. The first suggestion was made at the conference of the American Library association at Swampscott, Mass., in 1921, where the possibilities of children's literature were discussed from every possible angle.

BOOK TELLS OF WORLD'S AIR HEROES

Every boy and man with a zest for adventure will revel in "Heroes of the Air," by Chelsea Fraser (Thomas Y. Crowell, New York), a volume in which the epic of aviation is told in terms of the life stories of America's eagles, her flying sons who risk their lives for her sake.

From Wilbur and Orville Wright to Commander Richard Byrd, American air men have laughed in the face of the danger which lurks in the air. Intrepid of soul, daring of deed and with visions an air empire, these gallant men literally climb the "steep ascents of heaven" to a place in the nation's golden book of remembrance.

Youth is the time for high risk, and aviation gains its recruits from the ranks of mere lads, as a general rule. From every type of home have come these aviators.

As the author points out in this book, since the world war ended the energy of aviators has been put on the question of peace-time conquests of the air, making long flights and high flights, often more perilous than actual warfare.

Aviation history has been written anew in the ten short years since the war, and American aviators have done their full share in winning these additional glories.

A comprehensive chapter traces the history of aviation from the development of the balloon in the eighteenth century to the day of the dirigible in the twentieth century. The author reminds us of the heroic attempt of Andree to reach the north pole in the summer of 1897, a feat which was to be accomplished by Commander Byrd near 30 years later.

Prof. Langley is given due credit for his share in early aviation and Mr. Fraser declares that Langley's treatises on aerodynamics are still without a peer.

The author asserts his belief that "while, as shown, the United States has been one of the most backward nations about taking to the air, she has proven conclusively by her remarkable records that she is not keeping in the outskirts of activity because she is clumsy at aviation. Her notable distance flights show her real ability, according to the author.

Among the flights described is the first across the Atlantic, when American aviators, headed by the daring Commander Read, won their way into fame. It is notable that the NC-4, in which the trip was made, went from New York to Plymouth, more than twice the distance covered by Columbus in discovering America, in less than 71 hours. It also traveled twice as fast as the fastest Atlantic steamer of today.

The next feats were the flights for the nonstop flight prize across the Atlantic. Lieut. Alcock and Lieut. Brown, of the British navy, succeeded in winning this laurel.

Other special flights recorded by Mr. Fraser are the transatlantic flight of the ZR3, now the Los Angeles, sister of the ill-fated dirigible Shenandoah. The runaway trip of the Shenandoah is graphically told and her first trip across the continent related in such a manner that one can feel the thrill of this glorious adventure as the pages are turned. The world flight and the polar trip also come in for their share of the discussion.

Altogether this is a book to make the heart of any boy happy on Christmas morning. It will be found much more of a character builder than mere fiction romances. Parents also will enjoy the book.

Give a Thought To Your Friends whose chief joy of living is to be found in companionable books.

Some of them, maybe, are "shut-ins," inescapably held—so far as outdoor adventures are concerned—to escapades toward which their minds will wander only as they read the lively narrations of virile-penned writers of books. For their contemplative moments, send them peaceful prose.

To match lilting moods, send them highly imaginative and inspirational verse.

For otherwise dull and dreary restless hours send them smart and colorful fiction.

They have hobbies, most of them. So give them books they can ride.

Activities of the Women's Clubs

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

REPRESENTATIVES of nearly 3,000,000 women will meet in Washington January 11, 12 and 13 to check up on the progress being made by the women of the country in educational, welfare, social service and nonpartisan political movements for the advancement of women and children when the executive board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will be in session at the national headquarters, 1734 N street northwest.

Coincident with the federation board meeting or directly afterward there will be meetings of many of the organizations with which the federation is cooperating in securing national legislation on the various issues indorsed at the recent biennial convention in Atlantic City.

The reports of the chairmen of the departments of work of the federation are always particularly interesting and the dinners and teas which are scheduled for the period of their presence in Washington are important events in the social life of the Capital.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, national president, and the other officers have let it be known in advance that social engagements must not interfere with the board's meetings. Hostesses are arranging their hours of entertainment so that they will fall at the exact hour the board members would "have to eat any way," or welcome the relaxation of a cup of tea after a day of deliberation. The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, as the hostess organization, always gives a tea in honor of the visiting board members. There are usually several receptions by Mrs. Sherman and the board at the national headquarters.

But, for the most part, the women leaders of clubdom will work hard early and late. The millions of women workers in the clubs affiliated with the federation are always anxious for the decisions and statements of the midwinter meeting in order that they may conduct their own local and State-wide work accordingly.

Among the issues to be discussed are those relating to child labor, prison and prison labor, infancy and maternity, and the many matters which have to do with the safeguarding and improvement of the American home.

One of the most interesting features of the meeting will be the reports on the survey of American homes carried on by the club women throughout the country.

"A man works from sun to sun, but a woman's work is never done" is an old saying. Yet the United States government in its census reports lists the housewife and mother who does not work outside of the home as having no occupation.

Mrs. Maggie Barry, of Texas, chairman of the department of American home, has sent out letters to the candidates for political office in November asking how they stand on having the women homemakers so listed in the government reports.

The General Federation intends to carry on an active campaign to put in operation in the American home practical science to conserve energy resources. Mrs. Sherman said recently in regard to the home making features of the Federation program:

"It never can be said that women haven't courage. We have been criticized and we meet the issue squarely. If we women are not functioning well in our supposed spheres, if the American home is being cruelly neglected and women are not content to stay there and do their full duty, if children are evidencing a lack of training and the health schedule is not what it should be there is certainly some reason for it, we assumed. So we turned on the searchlight of investigation in exactly the same manner that a man sets an efficiency expert to work upon an expiring business organization. If home making was a declining art we proposed to find out why.

"We surveyed with a brilliant spotlight—encased in complete and well-arranged questionnaires—the housekeeping equipment in 7,911,630 families. The results were rather startling though not altogether discouraging."

The National League of Women Voters has created a new department to embrace the work of the committees on child welfare, education, living costs, social hygiene and women industry, to be known as the department of public welfare. The women organized for suffrage for women have gone a long distance since that fateful day when the suffrage amendment was added to the Constitution. They have come to realize that women's rights do not merely mean the privilege of casting a vote but that the scope of their work, even as suffragists, embraces every phase of human conditions. It is quite feasible to have a secretary in charge of the welfare work separate from the leaders in securing suffrage for the District and kindred movements.

Miss Julia Margaret Hicks, of Connecticut, formerly of Columbus, Ohio, the new secretary of the welfare department, is established in her office in the headquarters of the National League of Women Voters and is busily studying the attitude of individual members of Congress in regard to their attitude on the various legislative measures affecting her department. Miss Hicks is a graduate of the Yale law school and has been executive secretary of the Connecticut League of Women Voters and editor of its bulletin.

The investigations of the woman's bureau of the Department of Labor show that far too many women in this country are not receiving a living wage, according to an address made by Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the bureau, at the meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York recently.

"We also find," Miss Anderson said, "that in comparison with wages paid to men, women's wages are very far down the scale; so far, in fact, there is little semblance of equality between the wages of men and women."

Miss Anderson pointed out that one of the prevailing reasons given for the inequality of wages between men and women has been that men are the providers for the family and that women have only themselves to support with their incomes, supplemented by other members of the family when living at home.

That this thought is a fallacy many women who have been working in the interest of working women agree with the chief of the woman's bureau. In the investigations of the bureau, she states, it has been found that women are often providers for the family and that they supplement the men's wages. It is also a fact that it is the young girls more often than the young boys who take home their pay envelopes unopened to their mothers.

There is another point in which all women will agree with the head of the woman's bureau either from personal experience or from observation. That is that women who work either in the schoolroom, the office or the factory have, as a general rule, additional work to do, as the housework where there is no maid is left almost entirely to the women of the family whether they are employed outside or not.

There are at present over 8,500,000 women and girls gainfully employed in the United States and of these 4,000,000 are employed in the producing and distributing trades.

No woman is so far removed from the industrial pursuits of men, whether she presides over a boudoir of her own with a handmaiden to wait on her or is a woman chemist making important discoveries for the world of science, that the welfare of the working woman is not her own individual responsibility.

There are very few clubs or women's organizations today, no matter what they may have been originally organized for, that do not take anxious thought and gravely consider the conditions and welfare of the great army of busy working women of this nation; homemakers, family providers and pathfinders in many fields.

The future of the girl of today, Miss Anderson warns, is closely linked up with the conditions which prevail in the places where she works. It is necessary, of course, Miss Anderson acknowledges, that the girl be efficient. The bureau wants also to be assured that the industry offers a future for the woman and is an institution in which a girl can prosper and grow.

Washington women study the various issues political and welfare, especially those affecting women. Most of them have arrived at their conclusions on these issues through investigation of all sides of the questions and logical thought. The women of the District are also alive to the needs of the District and are active workers in projects to obtain the best for the National Capital.

We will be very gald to hear from these women, and will print as many of their letters as our space allows if they are signed with their full names and addresses. We would also like the organizations to which they belong put after their names. We wish to establish an open forum of opinion for our women readers on this page by this means. These letters must not be more than 200 words long and must be written double space on one side of the paper. They must be personal expressions of opinion on issues concerning women and may not contain personal attacks or other matter of a libelous nature. The forum will be nonpartisan in every way possible, impartial and constructive in its scope.

The District chapter of the American Red Cross was asked last week to send two of its motor corps members to Miami, to assist that community in organizing Red Cross Motor corps for disaster relief work. Mrs. C. H. Jewett and a companion worker of the corps went to the Florida city. It is planned to have the Miami motor corps a permanent feature of the Red Cross chapter there.

District chapter workers have now turned their attention to preparation for the tenth annual Red Cross roll call which will begin as usual on armistice day. Brig. Gen. John A. Johnston, whose effective services have been so great an aid for the past two roll calls, will be chairman of roll call again this year and he is busy already at the task selecting personnel of committees and special groups for the roll call. The cooperation of all women's clubs in the city is asked for the roll call, both in the matter of working volunteers for the roll call and in securing 100 per cent enrollment of their membership.

All club women wishing to give service during the roll call should apply to District chapter headquarters, 16 Jackson place northwest, unless there is a Red Cross unit in their membership and they will be assigned to definite service for the roll call. District chapter officials state that even an hour or two service daily will be of the utmost value to the roll call and help to insure its success.

Mrs. Alexander Ennis Patton, chairman of special committee on planting thirteen original colony trees in Independence square in Philadelphia to commemorate the part taken by the men and women of the thirteen colonies in 1776, has written another chapter in the history of the place where American independence and liberty were born 150 years ago.

High government, State and city officials, representatives of both the army and navy of the United States, leaders in national patriotic and civic organizations and the great American public joined in the patriotic service of planting a fine specimen of American red oak tree for each of the thirteen original colonies.

As Mrs. Patton called the roll of States in the order of their adoption of the Federal Constitution, the governor of each State, or his official representative, planted a tree in historic native soil of his State. Then followed the State regent of the N. S. D. A. R., who placed a bronze name-plate on the tree pledging perpetual care thereof "so long as there remains a Daughter of the American Revolution living in her State."

These name-plates suitably engraved, were the gift of Representative Martin L. Davey, of Ohio, to whom also belonged credit for the inspiration leading to the ceremony of planting sturdy oaks in Independence Square to mark this sesquicentennial year. Mrs. J. Willis Martin, founder of the Garden Clubs of America, was one of the first to indorse the movement.

The District of Columbia chapter American War Mothers will celebrate its seventh anniversary Friday evening at 8 o'clock at the Lee house. Vocal and instrumental music by well known artists and an address by the Hon. William Tyler Page, clerk of the House of Representatives, will be followed by roll call of charter members.

Mothers of men and women who served in the army, navy or marine corps during the world war are eligible for membership and are invited to be present at this meeting.

The tea given at the Women's City club today will have members of the membership committee as hostesses. Mrs. Virgil C. Miller, chairman, will have assisting, Judge Mary O'Toole, Mrs. Peter A. Drury, Mrs. Charles H. Cecil, Mrs. George Eastment, Mrs. Wymond Bradbury, and Mrs. Grattan Kerans. The guests of honor will be the new members admitted at the last board meeting. They are Mrs. Anna D. Barnes, Miss Gertrude Bowling, Miss Jennie M. Brannan, Miss Della Burdette, Mrs. Lydia C. Berlew, Mrs. John H. Collier, Mrs. Martha Jane Cooper, Mrs. Ella Lewis Copenhaver, Miss Gertrude A. Coyle, Mrs. Inez Crater, Miss Adelaide Crowell, Miss C. Virginia Diedel, Mrs. Frederick F. Dumont, Mrs. Norman E. Pratt, Mrs. George H. Reynolds, Mrs. Charles B. Brooke Smith, Mrs. W. H. Snider, Miss Katharine F. Williams, and Miss Fannie Wolfson.

Tomorrow the bridge section will hold the first regular meeting of the season at 2 o'clock in the ballroom. Club members who play bridge are invited. Mrs. Charles H. Cecil is chairman.

The public health committee will hold an open meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Wymond Bradbury is chairman, Mrs. Agnes Stewart, vice chairman, and Dr. Amy Rule, secretary. All doctors and nurses who are members of the club are especially invited to attend as well as the club members who are interested in this all important work.

Tuesday evening the free and easy auction section met with fourteen tables playing. Miss Hazel Swift assumed her duties as chairman and instructor and Miss Mada Ann Martin as hostess. Guests of members for the evening were: Mrs. T. S. Hogan, Mrs. Howard Gaylord, Mrs. George M. Dauer, Miss Edith I. Cooper, Mrs. Marcy Gill and Mrs. A. B. Allen. Playing for the first time this season were: Mrs. L. W. Walker, Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. Mary A. O'Connor, Mrs. Lulu E. George, Miss Grace Osgood, Miss Mollie W. Anderson, Mrs. Nellie G. Schech and Miss Alice Trefts.

Mrs. Mary Lazenbury, chairman of the parks and zoning committee, has called a meeting for Wednesday, October 20, from 3:30 to 4:15 p. m. Members of the club and especially home owners are invited to communicate with the chairman and attend these meetings. Committee members are: Mrs. Alva Gardner, Mrs. Virgil C. Miller, Miss Maybelle Raymond, Mrs. A. J. McKelway, Mrs. Frances William, Mrs. William A. Domer, Mrs. Clara Sears Taylor, Mrs. Karl Greene, Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, Dr. A. Frances Foye, and Mrs. Kate K. Briggs.

The music section will meet Friday evening. Mrs. Gertrude Lyons is in charge. A lesson in voice culture will be given to those of the section interested. This section is to join the drama unit in giving an entertainment at the club the evening of October 27.

Mrs. Patrick Gallagher, chairman of the drama unit, assisted by Mrs. Edith Sears, is directing the cast for Pinero's "Playgoers," the opening production of the season.

The child welfare committee will hold an open meeting Monday evening, October 25, at 8 o'clock. The speakers will be Mrs. Susie Root Rhodes, playgrounds; Miss Ruth Bowling, tubercular schools. Day nurseries will be the subject of the president of the Myra McCoy nursery, and Mrs. E. J. Brennan will tell of the Holy Family nursery. Mrs. Edmund Brennan is chairman of this committee, and included in the membership are Dr. Winifred Richmond, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Wymond H. Bradbury and Mrs. Andrew Stewart.

Miss Olive Beatty, chairman of law and legislation, is arranging the program for this section. Members of the committee assisting are Misses Pearl McCall, Adele Stewart, Mary E. Black, Antoinette D. Hechmer, Agnes Winn, Nell V. Price, Maybelle Raymond and Mesdames Edna L. Johnson and Ellis Meredith.

Mrs. Jennie O. Berliner, instructor and chairman of the Spanish section, opened the season's class of study Tuesday evening. Members of the club desiring instruction are invited to enter promptly.

The French section resumed its meetings the first week in October. Beginners and advanced classes are under instruction of Mme. Marie Boulay-Anderson. Mrs. Anna H. B. Kinney is chairman. Members of both classes gather at stated intervals in the coffee room, where they dine together at the French table. A special dinner will be given at an early date.

Reciprocal relations have been established with the Pioneer club, of London, England; the Women's City club of Minneapolis, Minn.; the Women's City club of Rockford, Ill., and the Women's City club of Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Alvina M. Carroll will be hostess at the teas in the tearoom of the club every week-day afternoon from 3:50 to 6 o'clock under the auspices of the chapter members committee this week. Assisting will be Miss Maybelle Raymond, Miss Loretta Barnes, Miss Gertrude Leonard, Dr. Edith Coale, Mrs. Frank Gregory Stewart, Miss Fay Bentley, Miss Lou Ballinger, Mrs. Patrick Gallagher, Miss Maude Aiton and Miss Agnes Winn. Mrs. William E. Chamberlin is general chairman of hostesses.

The sports section activities have commenced, and members may get in touch with the various groups by applying to the chairman of the subsection in which they are interested. The riding group will take its first canter this Sunday morning. The hiking group strolled along the banks of the old Chesapeake and Ohio canal last Sunday. It will leave the clubhouse this morning at 10:30 o'clock for a country walk. Mrs. Eva Dell Myers will preside at the sports section dinner on Saturday. This will be an informal affair for the purpose of promoting good fellowship and acquaintance among those interested in sports. Members and guests are requested to wear sports costumes. Prizes will be given for the most attractive costumes, conventional, fancy, or comic. All members of the club are welcome to come to this dinner, but as seating capacity is limited, only the first 100 who sign up can be accommodated.

The American Association of University Women will have as their guest of honor at a tea tomorrow Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of the Smithsonian institution, who will discuss "Anthropological Explorations in Alaska." Mrs. Eugene E. Stevens will be the hostess.

Miss Eleanor Boswell, executive secretary of the A. A. U. W., who spent her vacation in England, has returned to Washington.

Miss Mabel Dunham of the University of Chicago, the new club manager, is giving particular attention to supervision of the dining room. The new schedule of meal hours is as follows: Breakfast, 7:30 to 9 o'clock; luncheon, 12:30 to 2 o'clock; and dinner, 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

Those from Washington who will attend the meeting of the board of directors of the A. A. U. W. to take place in Denver, Col., November 8 to 10, are Miss Boswell, executive secretary; Dr. Lois H. Meek, educational secretary, and Mrs. James K. McClintock, assistant treasurer.

Educational week will be observed the first week in November by the Woman's club of Bethesda with a gift to the school of a reference library to be used in one of the classrooms. The appropriation for this gift was made at the first club meeting of this year held Tuesday at Wild Acres, the country home of Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor. The hostesses for the day were Mrs. Edwin Morris, chairman; Mrs. F. C. Getzendanner, Miss Mona Gill, Mrs. J. A. Holmes, Mrs. W. W. MacFarlane, Mrs. C. W. Walton and Miss Florence White. The department chairmen outlined their plans for the coming year. The legislative committee under Mrs. Ashby Leavell reported that a canvass of the club showed that all members that were eligible to vote in the coming November elections had registered. The social service committee under Mrs. James C. Adkins will ask the local clubs to cooperate in a theater entertainment the proceeds to be given to the Social Service league at Rockville. The club indorsed the campaign which the general federation is starting to have the home makers recognized in the United States census. Three entertainments will be given by the building committee, Mrs. Elisha Hanson, chairman—a dance at Thanksgiving, a dinner at the New Year and the usual card party in the spring.

The Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs held an executive session at the Montgomery Country club in Rockville Tuesday. The semiannual meeting to be held in Rockville at the courthouse on Monday, November 1, was discussed. Two new chairmanships were created and designated as American citizenship and international relations. Mrs. Peter Remsen was appointed chairman of American citizenship to work in cooperation with the chairman of a similar committee in the State federation. Mrs. William C. Dennis, of Chevy Chase, has been appointed chairman of international relations.

The reports of committee chairmen were especially interesting and instructive. Mrs. Lewis W. Call, chairman of library extension, spoke on the need of more libraries in the county and outlined her plans for the coming year.

Mrs. Ivan Weld, chairman of education, said that she had had a meeting of the chairmen of education of individual clubs in the federation and had invited the superintendent of schools to be present. One important point brought out at that meeting was the matter of school attendance. Mrs. Weld said that she felt that this was the parents' problem because, perhaps in many instances, the parent did not fully realize the necessity of perfect school attendance. And the education committee this year will stress 100 per cent school attendance and make it the goal of the committee's endeavors. The problem of health was also brought up, as was the fact that the kindergarten movement has gotten well started in the county.

Miss Annie Wilson, chairman of fine arts, announced the appointment of two subchairmen for literature and music and, to illustrate the work of her department, gave a few delightful poems in connection with her report.

Mrs. J. Darby Bowman, chairman of the social service committee, gave a splendid report on the condition and needs of the Social Service league and invited every one to be present on Thursday, October 14, at an open meeting of the league to be held in the Montgomery Country club in Rockville. She stressed the importance of the league's work and asked for aid for some of the opportunities which she listed during her report. Replying to a question on the advisability of aiding the needy in their localities by each locality or by personal efforts, Mrs. Bowman said that the league made a business of their charitable work and did it consistently and regularly. Cases were kept track of until the need was met and, as far as possible, every case was discovered and investigated.

She asked the cooperation also of the clubs in finding some one in each community who would give transportation one day a month for needy cases to bring them to Rockville. This would solve one of the league's biggest problems. Some cases were mentioned which were in need of friendly visitors to assist in brightening the family atmosphere and with friendly counsel, and in these cases the names would be disclosed.

Other chairmen who spoke briefly were Mrs. Waters, chairman of club extension; Mrs. Elmore, chairman of conservation, who advocated a conservation program for each club, and Mrs. Scott, chairman of scholarship. The matter of the scholarship fund was discussed at length, and the rules and regulations will be worked out by the official board and the chairman of scholarship in the very near future.

A new club, the Woman's Club of Woodside, was admitted to membership in the federation.

The semiannual meeting of the Montgomery Federation of Women's Clubs will take place Monday, November 1, at 10 o'clock at the Rockville courthouse. This will be a most important meeting and a very large attendance is expected. Directors will make their reports at this meeting.

The Federation of Republican Women of Montgomery county met Thursday. Mrs. John A. Holmes, the president, presided. Tea was served. The two women candidates on the Republican ticket of the county were present, Mrs. Edward L. Stock, candidate for the State senate, and Mrs. Eugene E. Stevens on the ticket for the house of delegates. Mrs. Stock is the first woman in the United States to win on the primary ticket for State senator.

The Clover club met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. H. Raymond Bresnahan, 1322 Madison street. The chairman of the program committee assigned to the members topics for the next meeting. Mrs. Vernon V. Lowery gave a very interesting description of the first steps of "A Tour Around the World," which is the basis of the year's program. Mrs. Claude Owen presided. Mrs. William E. Lawrence and Mrs. Burnside were guests.

Mrs. Louis S. Grigsby, Mrs. Vernon B. Lowery and Mrs. Godfrey L. Munter were appointed a committee to make the necessary arrangements for a Halloween tea to be given in honor of the members of the Thirteen club and their wives.

The next meeting of the club will be held Thursday at the home of Mrs. Godfrey L. Munter, 3527 Porter street northwest.

The Women's alliance of All Soul's church will meet Friday at 11 o'clock in Emerson assembly, Pierce hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets. Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, director of the national illiteracy crusade and founder of Kentucky's moonlight schools, will address the alliance relating her experiences and successful work among the mountain people and the excellent work done on the Blackfeet Indian reservation.

Luncheon will follow the meeting. Mrs. Howard Hosmer will be hostess.

Mrs. Philip Sydney Smith, president of the Twentieth Century club, will be at home to the members of the club at a tea given at her home, 3249 Newark street, Cleveland Park, Friday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. It has been the custom of the club to give one large reception during the season at one of the larger club homes, but this winter it is the intention of the members to hold three afternoon teas at the homes of its own members.

Tuesday Mrs. William H. Herron, leader of the parliamentary law section, will give a tea to the members of that section at her home in Florence court from 4 to 6 p. m.

The nature section will meet at Dupont circle at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning for a trip along the canal. Mrs. Leo D. Miner, the leader of the section, will be in charge of the outing.

Mrs. Thomas W. Sidwell, leader of the section of education, will hold the first meeting of the season of the public health committee of the Woman's City club.

The Woman's club of Chevy Chase, Md., will hold its first meeting of the season in the assembly hall of the Presbyterian church, Chevy Chase circle, at 12:50 o'clock, Wednesday. An address on Modern Russia will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president and director of Georgetown university and regent of the school of foreign service. During the reconstruction period following the war, Dr. Walsh spent two years in Russia as a member of the directing staff of the American relief administration under Herbert Hoover, and as director general of the papal relief mission.

Friday, the nature section visited the rose gardens of the United States experimental farm and American Rose association.

The Soroptimist club of Washington will give a dinner Wednesday at the Women's University club in honor of the "little cabinet," consisting of women holding high executive positions in the government. Among its members are Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney General; the Hon. Mary O'Toole, judge, municipal court; the Hon. Kathryn Sellers, judge, juvenile court; Miss J. Beatrice Bowman, superintendent, navy nurse corps; Miss Anita Phipps, director of women's relations, War Department; Miss Lucy Minnigerode, superintendent of nurses, United States public health service; Miss Mary Anderson, director of woman's bureau, United States Department of Labor; Miss Grace Abbott, chief, children's bureau, United States Department of Labor; Miss Jessie Dell, commissioner, United States civil service commission; Dr. Louise Stanley, director, bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture; Mrs. Bessie Bruggeman, chairman, board of commissioners, United States employes' compensation commission; Maj. The Catholic Daughters of America, Court District of Columbia No. 212, was instituted October 19, 1913, so Tuesday evening, the thirteenth birthday, will be celebrated by a program arranged by a committee of which Miss Margaret Coyle, financial secretary, is chairman. A more formal celebration will be held in connection with the initiation of a class of candidates to be known as "Bishop Hafey's Class," Monday evening, November 22. Bishop Hafey will be present to address the candidates and guests. Applications for this class will be accepted on October 19 and November 3.

The Fireside club will meet Friday evening from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock, instead of on Thursday. The Friday night dances, under direction of Miss Bess Calnan and Mr. Jack O'Connell, and the Friday Night Card club, Miss Williams and Mrs. Leisman in charge, are proving features of the Catholic Daughters community center. Miss Ethyl Sweet is in charge of the athletic program for the season. Mrs. Rose McAuliffe, chairman, and the ladies in charge of the fancy table for the bazaar to be held in November will entertain at cards and tea tomorrow. On October 29, Mrs. Mary Coyne Baker, of the hostess committee, will entertain in a similar manner. The members of Court District of Columbia No. 212, have been invited to assist at the mass of the Rev. John Sherry, O. M. I., on the occasion of his silver jubilee, Monday morning, November 1, at 9 o'clock, at the shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic university. As in previous years the Catholic Daughters of America will take an active part in the Catholic charities drive. Many of the members were present at the preliminary meeting on Friday. So as not to conflict with plans made by the committee in charge of the annual dinner of the Catholic charities, the Catholic Daughters have postponed the opening of their bazaar from November 15 to November 16. Meetings of Court District of Columbia No. 212 are held on the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

Florence Crittenton board meeting was held at the home Friday. The president, Mrs. Robertson, gave a report of a recent meeting of the advisory committee of the national organization. A bazaar will be held at the Mayflower hotel November 22 and 23.

COLLEGE RETREAT BEGINS TOMORROW AT GEORGETOWN U.

Religious Services Will Be Conducted by Prefect McGovern, of Boston School.

MASK AND BAUBLE CLUB TO GIVE "JULIUS CAESAR"

Member of India Cabinet Lectures Before Foreign Service School.

The annual retreat of Georgetown college will commence tomorrow evening and continue until Friday morning. The Rev. James L. McGovern, S. J., prefect of studies at Boston college high school, will conduct the religious services in its connection. Thursday morning requium mass will be held for members of the university faculty who have died since the last retreat.

The Hoya, university publication, contained an editorial in its current issue lamenting the departure of Dean Louis J. Gallagher, S. J., who has been succeeded at the college by the Rev. Robert A. Parsons. "His term of office coincides with a period of unprecedented growth in the history of Georgetown college," the editorial stated, "and it is a sufficient tribute to the character and capacity of the retiring dean to state that he carried the burden and the inevitable difficulties associated with rapid growth without too much shock, and he left the institution tranquil with her greater numbers and increased problems." Father Gallagher is stationed in Boston as assistant to the provincial of the newly created New England province of the Jesuit order.

Plans of Dramatic Club.

Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" is to be the initial offering of Georgetown's Mask and Bauble club shortly before the Christmas holidays. Trials already are being held by the members of the aggregation. The new president is Francis I. Brady. Other officers are John McDonough, vice president; Philip D. Dean, treasurer; John F. Thaete, corresponding secretary, and Christopher T. Clark, recording secretary. Mr. McDonough is chairman of the business committee and Mr. Clark is the stage manager.

An interesting lecture was given at the foreign service school Friday night by a distinguished Indian official, Sir Alvion Rajkumar-Banerji, member of the cabinet at Madras, India, who is touring the United States. Sir Alvion, a graduate of Oxford and Calcutta universities, is one of the best-informed men on Indian affairs. He has been in the Indian service of the British government for many years.

The morning junior law school class has elected Edward L. Wright, of Little Rock, Ark. This is the second time that Mr. Wright has headed his class. The other officers are Frank Leo Smith, of Portland, Oreg., secretary; Robert Ponsa, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., treasurer; John O'Laughlin, of Independence, Iowa, sergeant-at-arms, and Patrick Morganson, of Oshkosh, Wis., historian. A smoker soon is to be given by the class.

Senior Is Flying.

Charles F. Kunkel, of the senior class at the Georgetown university school of foreign service is touring the country aboard the Josephine Ford, the Fokker monoplane which carried Commander Richard E. Byrd over the north pole.

Writing to Dr. Thomas H. Healy, assistant dean of the school, while en route from Albany, N. Y., to Syracuse, flying at an altitude of 3,200 feet, Mr. Kunkel describes the Josephine Ford as having "all the conveniences of a Pullman." The flying student is the personal representative of the Daniel Guggenheim foundation, which is financing the trip under the direction of the Department of Commerce, the object of the tour being to interest the public in commercial aviation.

Mr. Kunkel is going along as the official lecturer of the tour and also as auxiliary pilot for Bennett. His own aviation experience comes from arduous service on patrol duty on the North sea as a naval aviator during the war.

Hopkins Worrell, who spent the summer working in the interest of the national organization, gave an account of the extension work and stated that in 1896 80 per cent of our electorate voted while in 1924 less than 50 per cent of the qualified voters manifested enough interest in our form of government and the character of the men who make our laws to vote. The field organizer reports 22 wheels organized in Los Angeles.

RUSH FOR MEMBERS BEGUN BY SOCIETIES AT COLLEGE PARK

INSTRUCTORS SELECTED FOR HOME ECONOMICS

Calvert Forum at First Meeting of Term Considers Founding Oratorical Contest.

Tomorrow fraternities of the University of Maryland will stage their first rush function, although the rushing season officially started Friday. The functions will continue until pledge day, December 7, with freshman athletes and others of this class giving promise of becoming leaders being the most sought after.

Mrs. Eleanor Murphy has been appointed an instructor in the home economics department of the university and will assume her duties October 25. She will have charge of the practice house and also will do some work in the clothing department.

Miss Evelyn Slater also has been appointed an instructor in the home economics department. She is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and will have charge of the institutional management courses. She will take up her duties in a few days, it is expected.

A large number of couples attended the first dance of the school year by the Rossburg club Friday evening in Ritchie gymnasium.

Robert Settle was chosen temporary chairman of the freshman class at a recent meeting. Ed. Melchior, president of the students' assembly, presided.

Coeds of the university are preparing for a busy basketball season. Elizabeth Taylor is manager. Class teams are being organized and keen competition is foreseen.

The university water system is being hooked up to that of the Washington Suburban Sanitary commission.

The Hort club has set November 11 for its next meeting. Freshmen as well as old members are invited. Duncan Clark gave a humorous talk; Frank Terhune told of the world series, and Grace Maxwell gave piano selections as features of the Poe Literary society's program Wednesday evening.

Literary Program Given.

A literary program and social session was in order at the meeting of the New Mercer Literary society Wednesday evening. The society plans to double its active membership and to devote more time to the social side. Mothers of Kappa Ki girls were given a house-warming Tuesday night.

Calvert Forum, organization of students interested in public speaking and relative subjects, held its first meeting Thursday evening. A freshman oratorical contest with the winner receiving a gold medal is under consideration by the organization, the aim of which is to foster and administer the university's public speaking activities.

A social club has been formed by girls of Practice house to be known as Practice House club. Ethel Grove is treasurer. At the social following the organization meeting Miss Adele Stamp, dean of women, gave a resume of her trip to Europe during the summer.

Dr. De Voe Mead and Prof. S. H. Harvey, of the animal husbandry department, have returned from Detroit where they attended the national dairy show as representatives of the university.

Maryland's Military band will make its first appearance October 23 at the football game at College Park between Maryland and North Carolina. Maj. Lytle, head of the military department, plans to organize a field music corps, membership of which would be taken from the various companies. Master Sergeant Otto Sebeneicken, of the military department, army musician, will instruct.

Rural youth problems were discussed by Dr. E. L. Kirkpatrick Monday night before the student grange. The address was an introduction to the conference on rural youth to be held in Washington next month under auspices of the American Country Life association. Mary Stewart York and N. C. MISSISSIPPI PIANO LIKE MT. VERNON'S

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Though its strings have long since become corroded and from its keyboard resound horrible discords, a little piano, said to be one of the first two to reach the New World, will be a feature exhibit at the Mississippi State fair.

The instrument is the property of City Commissioner R. M. Taylor, who secured it from Miss Rosa Fisher, octogenarian of this city, in whose family it has been for generations. The mate to the piano is said by Miss Fisher to be in Mount Vernon, home of George Washington. Visitors to Mount Vernon describe the pianos as identical.

It is of French make, about 15 inches thick, 28 inches wide and about 60 inches long. There are 73 keys, connected in a vastly different manner from the pianos of today.

Y. W. C. A. ACTIVITIES

There will be an open board meeting Thursday night at 614 E street at which Mrs. Thomas Edwin Brown, the president, will preside. The summer work will be reported on by Miss Helen T. McQuillen, assistant office secretary, and the report on work at camps and conferences will be given by Miss M. O. Buckingham. A musical program has been arranged by Miss Imogene B. Ireland. There will be vocal numbers by several groups within the association, including the young business and professional, the Girl Reserves, the Greek and possibly the German club of the industrial department, girls of the Elizabeth Somers residence, and the staff. An instrumental number — an eight-handed, two-piano duet—will be given by Miss Ireland, Miss Blinn, Miss Dawson and Miss Nelson.

The joint institute of the industrial department and the Women's Trade Union league of Washington on The Community and the Worker" will be held Saturday and Sunday at Vacation lodge, Cherrydale, Va.

Miss Lois MacDonald, research worker of the national industrial department of the Y. W. C. A., and Dr. A. J. Muste, chairman of the faculty of Brookwood college, Katonah, N. Y., will be the speakers. Mrs. Albert H. Putney, chairman of the industrial department will be the hostess, and Mrs. G. C. Orr, the register. Miss Elizabeth Eastman, of the board of directors of the Y. W. C. A. and chairman of the legislative committee, and Miss Saida Hartman, secretary of the industrial department, Miss Ethel Smith, chairman of the national legislation of the Women's Trade Union league and Miss Selma Borchardt, president of the local Women's Trade Union league will preside at the different sessions, and Miss Imogene B. Ireland will lead the singing.

Topics for discussion are the history of American economic development, activities of women's clubs, legislation, employers' efforts, and the labor movement. Delegates are coming from Baltimore, York, Allentown, Harrisburg, Richmond, Philadelphia and New York.

There will be a one-day conference of industrial secretaries from this region at Vacation lodge, October 25. Miss Louise Leonard, national industrial secretary, will remain for this conference.

On Tuesday night, at 614 E street, the young business and professional women's department will have a "big sing" under the leadership of Miss Imogene B. Ireland. The music will begin at 7 o'clock and will continue for one hour.

The speaker at the vesper service at the Elizabeth Somers residence this afternoon at 5:30 will be the Rev. Earle Wilfley of the Vermont Avenue Christian church. There also will be special music.

WOMEN ARE CHOSEN FRESHMAN OFFICERS

Men at Washington College of Law Withdraw Names in Tie Vote.

Although men in the freshman class at the Washington College of Law outnumber the women two to one, a tie vote resulted in the preliminary election of temporary officers held on Wednesday, Miss Frances Wright Porter and Allen McFarland Boettcher tying for chairman and Miss Edith L. Cline and Thomas O'Neal tying for secretary. The men quickly withdrew and made the election of the women unanimous.

Miss Porter, of Illinois, a student from Monmouth college, became temporary chairman and Miss Edith L. Cline secretary. Miss Cline is a graduate of Business High school.

With these officers the class will proceed to organize permanently. The chairman will appoint a committee to draw up a constitution and by-laws and also nominate a committee to prepare a ticket for the election of permanent officers.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membrance.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Elections to Undergraduate Councils Indicate Growing Power on Campus.

JUNIOR CLASS SELECTS OFFICERS FOR TERM

Football Squad Moves Into New Gymnasium; Next Game Saturday.

Students are to have an increasingly large influence in the control of college life on the campus of American university, it was indicated last week by elections to the newly formed Student Council and the Women's Self Government Association.

The Women's Self Government Association elected Miss Ruth Ely, Millersville, Md., president; Miss Dorothea Mehring, Harrisburg, Pa., head proctor; Miss Martha Bricker, La Moyne, Pa., secretary; Miss Ruth Rinkel, St. Paul, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth Clay, Hutchinson, Minn., social chairman.

The junior class has elected members of the new Student Council Hugh Speer and Gordon Smith. The juniors also have completed election of officers for the year as follows: Howard Rash, president; William C. Warner, vice president; Gordon Smith, secretary-treasurer; Arthur Gerth, to be a member of the "Gosling Court" which supervises freshmen activities.

Freshmen Name Chairmen.

Taking preliminary steps toward organizing their class, the freshmen have named Miss Margaret Sikes, of Los Angeles, as temporary chairman, and will hold a meeting shortly for election of officers.

The college orchestra, under leadership of William Warner, saxophonist, is holding regular rehearsals and is expected shortly to be increased by several additional members.

Dr. Lucius C. Clark, chancellor of American university, and Mrs. Clark have returned from Atlantic City, where Dr. Clark spoke in the interest of the university.

Dr. Paul Kaufman has been elected secretary of the faculty board of the graduate school of the university.

The football squad moved into the locker rooms of the new gymnasium last week, providing facilities much improved over the quarters which have been temporarily occupied in the basement of Hurst hall. Quarters for men's dormitory rooms in the new gymnasium also will be ready soon.

The next football game will be Saturday with Shenandoah college at Dayton, Va. Coach G. B. Springston feels confident his squad is proving stronger with each game, and he hopes for victory at Dayton. Capt. Birthright is improving from recent injury.

Phi Beta Kappa Delegate.

Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, has been named to represent the Carleton college (Minnesota) chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the 150th anniversary of United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa at William and Mary college next month. Dr. Woods will address the Parent-Teacher association of Langley Junior High school Tuesday night.

The Phi Delta Gamma sorority of the graduate school entertained last night at 1901 F street at a reception for the trustees, faculty, graduate students and members of the John Marshall chapter of Phi Psi Omega, graduate fraternity. In the receiving line were Mrs. Lucius C. Clark, Mrs. Albert H. Putney, Miss Mae Pendleton, president of the sorority; Mrs. Laura Halsey and Miss Vera Brungart, past presidents. The room was decorated in autumn foliage and flowers. The committee in charge: Miss Arline Dufour, Mrs. Phylla Stevens, Miss Effie Ross, Mrs. Margerette R. Zahler.

The Women's Faculty club will entertain at dinner in honor of new members of the faculty at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McCulloch, Kensington, Md., Saturday night, the date having been postponed from last night.

Dr. Joseph Dawson, instructor in religion, is ill at his home here from complications developing after an attack of grip.

ACCOUNTANCY COURSE GIVEN FOR BEGINNERS

Instruction of Y. M. C. A. College Will Be Offered Three Times Weekly.

A beginner's course in accountancy is announced by the Washington School of Accountancy of the Y. M. C. A. College to begin Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. The course is planned for those who have had no experience or training in bookkeeping and sufficient attention will be devoted to the fundamental principles of accounting to give these students an elementary training. The various types of business organizations are discussed and financial statements referring to each will be exemplified. In addition to contracts, the course takes up the principles of business.

Joseph A. Gormley, a certified public accountant and a new addition to the faculty of the school, will teach accounting; George W. Offutt, a local attorney will teach contracts and Thomas J. Fraley, dean of the accountancy school, will teach in principles of business.

The classes meet Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

Bridge Is Too Slow For London Society

London, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Denizens of Mayfair, back from their continental holiday, have so had their appetities whetted by the casinos of France and Monte Carlo that they find bridge slow work.

They have purchased private gambling outfits and roulette or baccarat now take the place of bridge at many afternoon and evening parties. Stakes thus far have been limited to small amounts and the games indulged in only by the wealthiest set.

PRETTY WOMAN LEADING DUTCH CHEESE EXPERT

PASSES ON 2,500 FARMS

Utrecht, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Miss Rita Spanjaard knows more about cheese than any other woman in Holland. She is director of a cheese control station and the first woman cheeseologist in the world.

No cheese in the Utrecht region, no matter how strong-minded, can slip past Miss Spanjaard and across the sea, unless she gives it a passport. It has to be a genuine farm cheese with a Dutch accent, just red enough, just large enough, just rich enough to get a clearance.

During a year's time Miss Spanjaard pronounces life and death sentences upon millions of cheeses. And so carefully does she fingerprint the cheeses, as it were, that she could recognize any cheese from her home town, even on Broadway. By deciphering an easy code stamped into its rind, she can tell exactly from what Utrecht farm it came, the date it left home, the cow it came from, the herd to which the cow belonged and its rating.

When Miss Spanjaard took control ten years ago, only 250 farmers were subject to inspection. Now 2,500 in the Utrecht district alone avail themselves of the inspection.

This feminine dictator is a graduate of the University of Utrecht with a degree in science and, if she is somewhat formidable to a cheese, she is extremely attractive to behold—young pretty and dressed in the Parisian manner.

BANK IS INSPECTED BY BUSINESS CLASS

Franklin U. Students Also Will Visit Other Commercial Houses.

The day classes in accountancy and business administration of Benjamin Franklin university began last week a series of educational tours with a trip through the Federal-American National Bank. The members of the classes were conducted through each of the departments of the bank and the operation of each department explained to them. John Poole, president of the bank, was in charge of the tour.

During the course of the school year the students will visit a representative institution in each field of commercial enterprise. These expeditions are planned to give students of business an insight into the conduct of business in all industries. Field trips to certain of the government offices have also been planned.

The sixth new freshman class in the Pace course in accountancy will open Tuesday at 7:30. The additional class section has been made necessary by the unusually heavy registration which has filled each of the previous sections this fall before the opening date. The new class will be a late evening class, meeting on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, from 7:30 to 9:20 p. m. The new class will be in charge of Edwin C. Bosworth, who will teach accounting, and Needham C. Turnage, who will teach law.

NATIONAL U. HEADS PLAN LECTURES BY BUSINESS OFFICIALS

Extraordinary Interest Shown in Talks by N. T. Guernsey Responsible.

WILL CONTINUE STEVENS' COURSE ON INVESTMENTS

Instructor in Journalism and Authorship Also Takes English Classes.

Of particular interest to National university last week were the lectures on public utilities given by Nathaniel T. Guernsey, vice president of the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. The series of five lectures, which began Monday night, proved of extraordinary value and interest not only from a legal point of view, but also in the speaker's discussion of the economic aspects of public utilities and public service companies.

This departure in giving information of this kind to law students by men prominent in the business life of the nation, having proved of such success, university officials now are contemplating other courses of a similar nature during the current year.

In the school of economics and government, it is announced that the course on investments, given by Dr. William H. S. Stevens, will be continued throughout this year. This course originally was intended by school officials as a fall and winter term subject.

This change, school officials explain, will give an opportunity for a more detailed discussion and study of the subject.

During the winter term Dr. Stevens will conduct a course in business organization and administration.

Gratified at Interest.

William Boyd Craig, instructor in journalism and authorship, also has taken charge of the classes in English I and English II.

Organization activities now are on in full swing, and the last week has been marked by a number of meetings.

Among the organizations to launch its program immediately upon the opening of the fall term is Omnicorn chapter, Kappa Beta Pi, legal sorority. Those who will direct the affairs of the sorority this year are: Miss Kathryn Raney, dean; Miss Esther Martin, associate dean; Mrs. Bertha R. Lane, registrar; Miss Constance Fogle, chancellor, and Miss Blanche Enterline, marshal.

One feature of the work undertaken by the sorority last year was the awarding of a yearly scholarship to a member of the present freshman class.

The Cy Pres club of the university held its first regular meeting of the season Tuesday.

The Glee club, prominent last year in the activities of the student body, has appealed to all students interested in enlarging the club to get in touch with club officers.

2 Families Exchange Sons for Education

Minneapolis, Oct. 16 (By A. P.). Two families, one in Minneapolis and the other in Vienna, Austria, have "exchanged" sons for a year to further their educational advantages.

Dr. Frank S. Bissell's 19-year-old son has gone to Vienna to live with Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Schuller there and attend the University of Vienna, while Franz Schuller, 19, has come to live with the Bissells here, and atend the University of Minnesota.

The following have become due for promotion as of the dates stated: Commanders P. L. Carroll and B. V. McCandlish October 6; Lieut. B. S. Dague, October 6; Lieut. L. K. Swenson, October 8; Lieuts. (junior grade) S. S. Bunting and A. E. True, October 6; Lieut. (junior grade) G. B. H. Hall, October 8, and Lieut. (junior grade) A. G. Cook, October 12.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brilliantine and no grease!

Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Navy Medical Promotions To Be Recommended Soon

Board May Meet This Month to Approve Officers for Captains and Commanders; Similar Move Pending for Supply Corps.

A board of senior officers of the navy medical corps will convene probably late this month to recommend officers of the corps for promotion to the ranks of captain and commander. The board will consider commanders and lieutenant commanders whose line running mates were selected for promotion last June and will select fourteen commanders, for advancement to the rank of captain and 34 lieutenant commanders to the rank of commander.

A similar board also will convene for the supply corps, but it can not meet until reports are received from the examinations for promotion to commander of those of that corps whose line running mates were recommended for promotion to captain by the last line selection board. The board, when appointed, will be advised that it may recommend 27 for the rank of captain and 6 for the rank of commander.

A board, consisting of Rear Admirals Andrew T. Long, Henry A. Wiley, Montgomery M. Taylor, Charles B. McVay, William A. Moffett and Frank H. Schofield, of the line, with Lieut. Henry R. Delaney, dental corps, as recorder, has been directed to convene at the Navy Department, October 25, to recommend not more than seventeen officers of the dental corps for promotion to the rank of commander.

Prior to enactment of the line-staff equalization-of-promotion law of June 10, the rank of lieutenant commander was the highest authorized for the dental corps, but the law makes officers of that corps eligible for selection for promotion to the ranks of commander and captain when their line-running mates have been selected for those ranks.

The line-selection board that made its report last June recommended for promotion to the rank of commander the running mates of senior seventeen dental officers, who thus became eligible for consideration for promotion. No running mates of dental officers yet have attained the rank of captain, but they eventually will do so, and then dental officers will be eligible for promotion to that rank.

RESERVISTS INVITED TO MARINE BARRACKS

Maj. Gen. Lejeune Would Have Them Learn Routine at the Posts.

Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps, has issued a circular letter to commanding officers of all posts of his corps, stating that reserve officers should feel at liberty to visit any marine barracks at such times as may be convenient.

Although such visits necessarily will be informal, commanding officers are enjoined to endeavor to make them of interest and benefit to the reservists, and reserve officers should be informed, so far as practicable, as to the routine of the post and the details of the work of the various officers and should be encouraged to visit the rifle range. General information should be imparted by having them accompany the officer of the day or the commanding officer during inspection.

ARMY OFFICERS GET RAISE TO NEXT GRADE

The following officers of the army have been promoted to the next higher grades: Lieut. Col. William G. Doane, infantry; Maj. Ulysses S. Grant 3d, corps of engineers; Capt. Carl L. Marriott, coast artillery; First Lieut. Robert W. Hasbrouck, field artillery, and Second Lieuts. Paul A. Berkey, field artillery; Robert C. Padley, coast artillery, and Dana G. McBride, cavalry.

These promotions leave the following as seniors in their respective grades and next due for promotion: Lieut. Col. James M. Kimbrough, infantry; Maj. Julian L. Schley, corps of engineers; Capt. James A. Pickering, field artillery; First Lieut. John T. de Camp, coast artillery, and Second Lieut. Donald B. Phillips, air corps.

There now are 93 vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant.

Wandank Ranks First Among Mine Sweepers

Following is the relative standing of leading boats of the minesweeper class of the navy in engineering performances for the competitive year to August 31:

1, Wandank; 2, Tatnuck; 3, Umpqua; 4, Sandpiper; 5, Rail; 6, Kalmia; 7, Bobolink; 8, Cormorant; 9, Gannet; 10, Finch.

ARMY MEDICAL MEN WILL BE PROMOTED

5 Advancements to Colonels This Month Will Be the First Since 1918.

Lieut. Cols. M. A. W. Shockley, T. L. Rhoads, H. L. Gilchrist, W. J. Lyster and W. N. Bispham, of the army medical corps, will be promoted this month to the grade of colonel. These are first promotions to that grade in the corps since 1918.

Under the old system of promotion whereby officers were advanced as vacancies occurred in the higher grades, these officers would have been promoted long ago, but the new system of advancement on the basis of length of service in grade has served to retard them.

The prevailing system was established by the national defense act of 1920, which provides officers of the medical and dental corps shall be promoted to captains after 3 years, to majors after 12 years, to lieutenant colonels after 20 years, and colonels after 26 years. Although the system has delayed promotion of individuals, it nevertheless assures officers of advancement after definite periods of service, and thus dependence on the uncertainties of vacancies for producing promotion is avoided.

ARTILLERY SCHOOL TO HAVE LECTURES

Coast Chief Announces the Course to Be Given During Winter.

Maj. Gen. Andrew Hero, jr., chief of coast artillery, is making arrangements for a series of special lectures to be delivered during the current term at the coast artillery school, Fort Monroe, Va.

The lectures so far scheduled are the following: November 17, "Ordnance Materiel," Maj. John B. Rose, ordnance department; December 15, "Coast Artillery Personnel," Maj. Clifford Jones, coast artillery corps; December 16, "Navy Gunnery Methods," by Commander Andrew D. Denny, of the navy, lately gunnery officer of the battleship Arizona, and now attached to the office of the director of fleet training, Navy Department; January 19, "War Department Training Policies," by Maj. Gen. Malin Craig, assistant chief of staff G-3 (training), and March 16, "Coast Artillery Training," by Col. James B. Mitchell, coast artillery corps.

REWARD PROPOSED FOR MAN WHO AIDED RAISING SUBMARINE

Believe Department Would Fight Move to Retire Ellsberg at Higher Rank.

CELLER TO INTRODUCE BILL, IT IS UNDERSTOOD

Unlikely Navy Will Urge Special Legislation to Favor S-51 Salvage.

A proposal has been made to bestow a substantial reward on Lieut. Comdr. Edward Ellsberg, of the navy construction corps, for distinguished and valuable services rendered in the salvage of the submarine S-51, which was raised from 130 feet of water off Block island nine months after being rammed and sunk by a merchant vessel.

The most direct and certain way by which this object could be attained would be for the Navy Department to make original recommendations to the congressional naval committees for special legislation to this effect. It is not believed, however, this action will be taken.

At least there are no indications the naval authorities will request Congress for special authority to recognize the services of this officer and those associated with him in the undertaking, since all of them have been the subject of departmental commendation and action, including award of distinguished service medals and navy crosses, with promotion of certain enlisted men.

It is understood Representative Emanuel Celler, of Brooklyn, intends to introduce a bill in behalf of Lieut. Comdr. Ellsberg, authorizing his appointment as a rear admiral on the retired list. In that event, the measure would be referred to the House naval committee and submitted in regular course to the Navy Department for comment.

It is a question as to what the department would do in those circumstances. In that quarter, however, there has been a reluctance to favor special legislation transferring officers from the active to the retired list with increase of rank. Primarily, there is objection to retirement of any officer, still in his prime as to age and in full possession of his professional qualifications, with a reasonable expectation that he should be retained on account of his prospective usefulness to the service.

In other words, the naval authorities regard the officer in this instance as one eminently desirable for retention on the active list, with preference for some form of recognition for his achievements that does not terminate his service career.

DENTAL CORPS OF NAVY WILL SHIFT OFFICERS

Many to Be Made Assistants After Approval and Taking Oath.

Duties and stations of officers of the navy dental corps will be changed as follows: Lieut. Ray E. Farnsworth, from navy yard, Puget Sound, Wash., to U. S. S. Nevada; Lieut. Edward A. Hyland, from naval station, Guam, to naval training station, Newport; Lieut. Andrew L. Burleigh, from U. S. S. Altair to New York navy yard; Lieut. Clarence A. Chandler, from naval training station, Hampton Roads, to U. S. S. Texas; Lieut. John W. Grassl, from naval hospital, Norfolk, to U. S. S. Arkansas; Lieut. Joseph W. Baker, from naval training station to naval air station at Hampton Roads, and Lieut. Leon W. Billings, from marine barracks, Parris Island, S. C., to naval hospital, Mare Island, Calif.

The following recently found qualified for appointment to navy dental corps, upon acceptance of commissions and execution of oaths of office as assistant dental surgeons, will be assigned to duty:

"HAIR-GROOM"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which costs only a few cents a jar at any drugstore. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair — that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair.

WEST POINT HEADS SEEK TO CONTINUE PRESENT TRAINING

COL. HOLT WILL ADVISE IN ACADEMIC COURSES

Plan to Move Toward Better Relations Between Cadets and Teachers.

As a result of observation, inquiry and experience, the authorities of the United States Military Academy at West Point have reached the conclusion that no material changes should be made in the training now given at that institution.

The work now allotted to the cadets takes up all of their available time, and, according to Brig. Gen. Merch B. Stewart, superintendent, the program of instruction is such as to familiarize the graduate with all of the duties he ordinarily will be called on to perform as a platoon leader.

It appears that during the last year an effort was made to obtain from the army an expression of opinion in regard to the quality of this training as evidenced by the way in which recent graduates perform their duties. A questionnaire for unit commanders was prepared, but in many instances it did not reach the immediate commanders, and in other instances the purpose of the questionnaire apparently was not understood.

Held to Aid Stewart.

Col. Lucius H. Holt, member of the academic board, has been designated to assist Gen. Stewart in the supervision and coordination of the academic work. He will exercise the functions of a college dean in his contacts with the instructor and student personnel. As a part of his duties, also, he will conduct a coordination course of lectures designed to acquaint cadets with the scope and purpose of their academic work.

He, moreover, will familiarize himself with the progress of individual cadets and advise with them in their academic difficulties. He is expected, further, to keep in touch with heads of departments, consult with them about the courses of study under them and acquaint himself with the operation of the curriculum.

It is believed that this plan will result in valuable suggestions for improvement of the curriculum, the better coordination of the various courses, a clearer understanding by the cadets of the nature and purpose of the work laid out for them and more sympathetic relations between the students and instructors.

REORGANIZATION URGED OF ARMY MEDICAL CORPS

Ireland Also Suggests Change of Name; Asks Three More Brigadier Generals.

Maj. Gen. Meritte W. Ireland, surgeon general of the army, has made to the Secretary of War recommendations contemplating important and far-reaching reorganization of the army medical department and contemplating also amendment of section 10 of the national-defense act of 1920, regarded as vitally needed if the efficiency of that department on a peace-time basis is to be maintained satisfactorily.

Specifically, it is recommended that there be three additional brigadier generals in the medical department, adoption of allowances for the various component corps of the department, increased relative rank for members of the nurse corps, reorganization and expansion of the medical administrative corps and change of its name to medical auxiliary corps, revision of law to secure longevity pay to officers of the veterinary corps, increase of the medical department personnel, in addition to the three brigadier generals, by 335 medical officers, 113 dental officers, 60 veterinary officers, 35 auxiliary corps officers and 2,050 enlisted men, and provision for the rank, pay and allowances of a brigadier general of the medical department in the case of any medical officer of the army on duty as White House physician, this at the pleasure of the President and regarded as a temporary appointment not to be counted against the allowance of general officers contemplated by the reorganization measure.

PROMOTION PLANNED OF NAVY CHAPLAINS

Two Are Summoned to Take Examinations; Episcopal Dean in Number.

Lieuts. (junior grade) George G. Murdock, attached to marine barracks at Quantico, and Stanton W. Salisbury, attached to New York navy yard, are under orders to appear before a board at the Navy Department for examination for promotion to the rank of lieutenant in the chaplains' corps.

The Very Rev. Stanley Long, dean of the Episcopal cathedral at Orlando, Fla., has been designated to report before a board for examination for appointment as an acting chaplain in the navy.

A series of conferences of army and navy chaplains belonging to the Episcopal Church will be conducted this week at Governors island, N. Y., and during the meetings the chaplains will be addressed by prominent clergymen of that denomination.

NAVY PROMOTION BOARD WILL MEET IN NOVEMBER

Vacancies Will Be Filled in the Reserve, Medical and Supply Corps.

BASED ON ENLISTED MEN

It is the intention of the naval authorities to convene a board at the Navy Department late in November to select and recommend officers for promotion to fill existing vacancies in the grades of commodore and captain in the line of the naval reserve force, and to fill vacancies in the rank of captain in the medical and supply corps of that force.

The act providing for creation, organization, administration and maintenance of a naval reserve and a marine corps reserve prescribes, in part that "the actual number of line officers so commissioned in higher grades shall be distributed in the proportion of 1 in the grade of commodore, to 15 in the grade of captain, to 28 in the grade of commander. The actual number of staff officers so commissioned in higher ranks shall be commissioned in the proportion of 8 in the rank of captain, to 16 in the rank of commander. The total number of line officers in such higher grades shall not exceed forty-four one-hundredths of 1 per cent and of staff officers in such higher ranks shall not exceed twenty-four one-hundredths of 1 per cent of the actual number of enlisted men regularly assigned to divisions or other organized units of the fleet naval reserve entitled to pay as provided in section 21 of this act * * *."

The number of vacancies thus is based on the number of enlisted men in the fleet naval reserve assigned to divisions and entitled to pay. The number of vacancies available for the forthcoming selections will be approximately 1 for commodore and 7 for captain in the line, 3 for captain in the medical corps, and 2 for captain in the supply corps.

ART OF MAKING FACES LED LADY PEEL TO FAME

From Stardom and Revue, She Passes Into the Films as Comedienne.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.)—"Making faces" won fame and a peerage for Beatrice Lillie, who as a little girl imitated people all day long. Today she is the only British peeress in motion pictures.

Miss Lillie, in private life Lady Peel, wife of Sir Robert Peel, is unique among the noblewomen of England. She has two identities—one as a society leader, wife and mother; the other as a stage and screen celebrity. She keeps the two distinctly apart.

Born in Toronto, the daughter of a musician, she was predestined for a musical career. But—she liked to "make faces."

She imitated her family—she imitated the neighbors. She developed an ability at impersonation, and her mother, being wise, encouraged it. It did not help her toward fame in music—but it eventually led to fame on the stage. Her marriage to Sir Robert resulted from stage stardom, indirectly. And her debut in pictures, in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy, with Jack Pickford, resulted from her success in "Charlot's Revue."

While in school, Miss Lillie worked out a series of comic songs—"just for fun." She had played in New York, and decided to essay London. She tried one of the "comic" songs. The effect was instantaneous. She was given a hearing by Charlot. The result was that London acclaimed her impersonation of the grand opera prima donna and the rest of her droll imitations.

After her marriage she quit the stage for a time to rule over the Peel mansion. But as soon as her small son was able to accompany her, she and her husband worked out their present system. During the show season she's "Beatrice Lillie." Between seasons she's "Lady Peel."

Motion pictures are a new adventure to her but her talent for "making faces" will be reemployed in accurate portrayals of real types that are in themselves humorous. The studio hails her as the discovery on the screen of a comedienne.

LOWNDES' REAR ADMIRAL RANK AS OF NOV. 23, 1919

Promotion and Precedence Have Been Approved by President Coolidge.

SHIFTS AMONG STATIONS

Capt. Charles H. T. Lowndes, in command of the naval hospital in this city, who will be promoted to the rank of rear admiral, in accordance with recommendations of a selection board of his corps, which have been approved by the President, will have precedence and take the higher rank as of November 23, 1919, with his line running mate, Rear Admiral Philip Andrews.

Officers of the navy medical corps will be shifted among stations and duties as follows: Capt. David C. Cather from naval medical supply depot, Brooklyn, N. Y., to bureau of medicine and surgery, Navy Department; Commander Frederick W. S. Dean from U. S. S. Idaho to New York navy yard; Lieut. Comdr. Heber Butts from U. S. S. Rigel to naval hospital, San Diego, Calif.; Lieut. Comdr. Alma C. Smith from U. S. S. Langley to naval hospital at Boston; Lieut. Comdr. Richard C. Satterlee from naval hospital, San Diego, to naval station at Guam, and Lieut. Comdr. Martin Donelson from naval hospital at Boston to first brigade of marines in Haiti.

Lieut. Comdrs. R. H. Laning, J. W. Allen, E. A. M. Gendreau and H. R. Boone have been ordered to temporary duty in attendance upon a course of instruction in operative surgery and surgical anatomy at University of Pennsylvania Graduate School of Medicine.

Lieuts. F. W. Carll, W. P. Maul, F. W. Granger, C. D. Allen and H. L. Weer have been found qualified for promotion to the rank of lieutenant commander, and Lieut. (junior grade) G. C. Gayler for the rank of lieutenant in the navy medical corps.

SACRED PINK ELEPHANT IS COMING TO AMERICA

Increasing Motor Accidents Put a Serious Strain on English Hospitals.

London, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—A woman's skull, a thigh bone of a woman about 5 feet, 1 inch in height, and a man's left shinbone, a man's right arm bone found under the bed of the Thames at Sudbury, are believed by Sir Arthur Keith, famous anthropologist, to be those of lake dwellers who lived 4,000 years ago.

The shinbone is flattened with the "squatter's facet," showing that the man passed much time in a crouching position. Bones of oxen, horses, pigs and deer also were found. An antler found belonged to an exceptionally large and early species of red deer, common in the Neolithic age.

Sa, the Burmah pink elephant, is such an expensive guest that the London zoo authorities are happy he is to sail for the United States on the Olympic in a few weeks.

The Siamese visitor is an epicure of the first water. Only the finest hay and grain appeal to his taste. And, as he is sacred, in the opinion of his Siamese owners, it is impossible to have him help pay for his keep by permitting children to ride him.

Sa is only 8 years old and will not be full grown until he is 20. The owner of the elephant has arranged to have a special stall constructed for the animal in the Olympic. The pink beauty will make a trip to California, where a wealthy American wants to see him and may buy him.

The increasing number of motoring accidents, not only in London, but in the country districts, is putting a serious strain on hospitals, where the cost of such accidents is from $22,500 per year upwards. At some hospitals, it is said operations on hundreds of other patients are delayed by the motor accident victims.

Committees are being appointed to consider the better way to meet these additional costs. One suggestion which finds favor is that the motorist and the insurance company behind him be made to contribute systematically to hospital funds. Another plan would provide that insurance companies guarantee to pay the cost of injured clients while in hospitals.

They have just returned from a vacation on the continent, where they have grown the necessary hair for the fashion. Hair dressers say that many comparatively young men come into their establishments to have their beards trimmed, but they doubt if the vogue will last long.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

WASHINGTON music lovers are interested in the dinner to be given on November 6 in honor of the president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley. The federation does much for the cause of good music in the National Capital and this dinner should mark a high point in the season of things musical.

One of the musical magazines is asking the pertinent question of its readers "How would you spend $15,000,000 in the cause of music in America?" One thing is certain, no matter what is contained in the answers, that such a sum expended on American music would place this country in the front rank of the musical world. We have abundance of talent but not abundant means of developing it.

The old system of patrons of fine arts had many merits.

That this sentiment still exists was evinced here last week when Washington enjoyed the chamber music concerts at the Library of Congress made possible through the generosity of Mrs. Frederick S. Coolidge. The smallness of the auditorium barred out many and as yet no adequate system of distributing the tickets has been devised. It is hoped that this problem can be solved before the next chamber musical festival.

On Monday evening, November 1, at Continental Memorial hall, M. Maurice Dumesnil, French pianist, who was heard last season, will return to Washington in a recital of French composers. M. Dumesnil is returning this year under the auspices of the National League of American Pen Women. It is the first time the league has presented a professional artist in a public recital.

The peculiarly interesting circumstances surrounding this recital made the league eager to sponsor M. Dumesnil's return to Washington. The audience hearing this program will be the first American audience to hear the piano upon which Chopin created some of his most enchanting masterpieces.

This instrument has been especially intrusted to M. Dumesnil for a brief tour in America. M. Isidore Phillipe, directing head of the musicians' relief organization, and a world famous figure in the world of music, arranged for the release of this art treasure of France. The benefits of the tour will aid the unfortunate musicians of France.

All who attended the interstate students' contest held recently under the auspices of the local federation of music clubs were highly entertained by the beautiful contest. The winners were: Piano, Glenn B. Carow, 10 years old; voice, Miss Dorothy Wilson Halbach; organ, Miss Katharine S. Fowler, and violin, Isaac Minovich.

These four young students will carry with them the best wishes of the local federation when they go to Morgantown, W. Va., to compete with winners from Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland Monday, October 25. Winners from that district contest will then compete in Philadelphia November 1, 2 and 3 with winners from the other twelve districts into which the United States is divided. National winners will each receive $500.

Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, chairman for local contests, announces that the folders with requirements for the biennial students and artists contest to be held next March are now ready. Student contestants must have reached their sixteenth birthday, but not have reached their twenty-fourth birthday on April 1, 1927. In the artists' contest, contestants must have reached their twentieth birthday, but must not have reached their thirty-second birthday on April 1, 1927.

Probably the most unusual musical event in the entire series of all-star series booked by the City club will be given Thursday in the lounge of the club, when the Minister of Latvia, Dr. Charles Seya will give an illustrated talk on the art and music of his country. He will be assisted by Paul Bleyden, tenor, a native of Latvia, with Mrs. Bleyden at the piano.

Henry Smidt-Gregor, Washington concert pianist and professor at National Park seminary, has completed during the summer vacation a "Valse Caprice in F Major" for piano. His "Norrland Scherzo," published last spring, is used by many concert pianists.

The famous Wagner festival plays at Bayreuth, Germany, will again be given in 1927. The opening date has been fixed for July 19. "Tristan und Isolde," will be given on the opening night. The entire program, which continues until August 20, contains three performances of the "Ring," five performances of "Tristan," and six performances of "Parsifal."

At a recent evening meeting of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs ways of raising more money for the local work were discussed and it was decided to try to put on a massed concert of all choirs and choral clubs sometime in the late winter or early spring. William Braithwaite accepted the chairmanship for the concert and urges all choir and choral club directors, whether federation members or not, to attend a meeting Tuesday evening at 8 in Vermont Avenue Christian church, Vermont avenue north of N street northwest, to make general plans for the concert. If the director can not attend, it has been suggested that he send a representative from his organization to this meeting, to report back to the organization.

Washington has been very slow in doing any concerted music work. It is hoped that directors will lay aside personality and cooperate in giving this massed concert.

The first public appearance of the Washington trio, Helen Ware, violinist; Margaret Day, cellist, and Eugenia Cherneafskaia, pianist, will be made on October 25 in a concert at Rauscher's at 8:30 p. m.

The program will include the following numbers:

Trio in B flat, op. 97 (Beethoven), allegro moderato, scherzo allegro, andante cantabile ma pero con moto, allegro moderato, presto; trio in B flat, op. 99 (Schubert), allegro moderato, andante un poco mosso, scherso, allegro, rondon, allegro vivace, presto; trio in B, op. 8 (Brahms) (by request), allegro con brio, scherzo, allegro molto, adagio, allegro.

HARRIS & EWING

INEZ BECKER, talented violinist who has gone to Hungary to study under Jene von Hubay.

The Ukrainian national chorus will be heard at the New Auditorium next Sunday.

This singing organization has been likened to a great orchestra. It was declared by all Europe to have discovered new paths, opened up wonderful new vistas in choral singing. The two Americas and Mexico have since concurred in this verdict. Through the Ukrainian National chorus the music and literature of what was formerly little Russia have been made known to the world. This traveling body of singers from the Ukraine has furnished the most interesting musical event of the post-bellum period. Their art is fresh and drastic. Their songs are vital and probe to the very heart of things.

Carolyn Manning, contralto, has resigned her position as soloist in the quartet of St. Patrick's church.

The first meeting of the Peter Pan Troubadours, N. F. M. C., will be held at the National Academy of Science on October 30. The members of the club, under the direction of R. B. Chopin Keith, will have their voices measured and avail themselves of the opportunity to examine various instruments in use. The first "exploration" is made possible through the courtesy of Mr. Schloer.

Miss Inez Becker, well known in Washington music circles, sailed last week for Budapest where she will continue her musical education under the great Hungarian master, Jeno von Hubay.

Miss Becker will study at the Royal Conservatory at Budapest and remain abroad for at least three years. She is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Lawrence Becker.

Mary Garden will return to the United States aboard the Aquitania on October 22, and on the following day will open the Roosevelt recital series with a concert in which she will be supported by Geza de Kresz, a new Hungarian violinist. This is Miss Garden's first appearance before a New York audience in five years.

When the Chicago Grand Opera Co., under Miss Garden's directorship, closed its New York engagement five years ago, word went forth that it would not return. Miss Garden would sing in New York no more, because New York had grown too provincial. In its appreciation of the arts she rated it with the small farming communities of the hinterland.

But that was five years ago. Today it appears that New York has overcome its provincialism, for Mary Garden is to be heard again on a metropolitan platform, her fellow artists in the Roosevelt series including Albert Spalding, De Gorgorza, Esther Dale, Marguerite d'Alvarez, George Gershwin, Rozsi Varady, and others.

Christine Irish, Jesse Veitch and Woodruff Youngs furnished several vocal numbers at the meeting of the Eastern Homeopathic Medical association at the Washington hotel last Sunday evening. Nina Norman, sang for the association on Monday evening.

The Washington College of Music has made a schedule of concerts and recitals for the coming season. This includes six senior student recitals, five junior recitals, four special voice, two special violin and one special piano. All of these are to be given in the concert hall of the college, which has been rearranged with a stage and handsome curtains and draperies. In addition to the recitals at the college, three public concerts will be given at Central High school. They will be Monday evening, November 22; Thursday evening, February 10, and Thursday evening, April 21.

The first of the recitals at the college was held Friday evening and was given by advanced students from the piano, violin and voice departments. The concert hall was filled with students and their friends.

The Russian club, having for its members former Russian army and navy officers, Russian artists and their American and Russian friends in Washington, met yesterday at the home of Miss Elena de Sayn, 1705 K street, who arranged an informal musical program. Jascha Heifetz, barytone, remembered by his interesting song recital last spring in Washington, rendered a number of vocal soli, accompanied by Mme. Zalipsky at the piano. Miss de Sayn plans a series of musicales to be given for the club, at which young artists will be given an opportunity to appear. Miss Jack Ward, mezzo-soprano, will be the next soloist. The members of the club meet bimonthly and extend an invitation to representatives of other nations who are interested in Russian literature and arts to join them.

Mary Helen Howe, coloratura soprano, was soloist at the meeting of the Catholic Women's Benevolent legion, Mrs. Henry Hunt McKee accompanying. Miss Howe was also heard at the joint meeting of Lincoln and Grant circles of the G. A. R. at the residence of Gen. and Mrs. R. L. Hoxie. Beatrice Deeds, soprano, gave "One Fine Day," from the opera "Madame Butterfly." Marie Howe Spurr presided at the piano for both singers.

The choir of the Vermont Avenue Christian church has elected the following officers for the coming year: Mrs. B. D. Shreve, president; Mrs. F. M. Shore, secretary, and Mr. Cook, librarian.

On Wednesday evening the choir will have a "wienie roast" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Littlefield, Jewell Station, Va. Mr. Marion Kiess, has resigned as bass in the male quartet. He is leaving Washington to accept a position in Fort Worth, Texas.

The Harmony entertainers gave a program at the Jewish country center Sunday. The artists were: Theodore Rosenfelt, pianist; Ray Palkin, soprano; Helen Zeller, reader; Ann Brinley, violinist; William Single, tenor.

The program was composed of classic numbers.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. W. A. EVANS

PUBLIC BATTLE ON DIPHTHERIA.

HUDSON, N. Y., is one of the small towns that seems determined to have no diphtheria. There are 4,000 children in its public schools, 1,300 of them under five years of age. While diphtheria may attack adults and adolescents, we are all agreed that when the children are protected, the danger from diphtheria will be at an end, practically speaking.

Health officials commenced immunizing the children of Hudson in 1923. The number the first year was 128. Each year after that there was an increase of about 50 per cent. For one year prior to the 1st of June this year there had not been a case of diphtheria in Hudson. Prior to five years ago there were about 30 cases of diphtheria a year. In the four years since immunizing was begun no immunized child has had diphtheria.

Diphtheria comes in waves. It is possible that Hudson may again have diphtheria. No final word can be said on the basis of an observation which has lasted only four years. If Hudson stays free from diphtheria for six years more, the evidence will be valuable. Meanwhile, all we can say is that Hudson seems determined to rid itself of diphtheria, and in doing so is using the best procedure that we know of.

The Connecticut State board of health reports that they find diphtheria has a distinct downward trend in their State and a good share of the decline they attribute to the growing tendency to immunize.

The approved method of immunizing used widely in the United States is to make three injections of a mixture of toxin antitoxin. The common name for this combination is T-A. In Canada they prefer a related vaccine which they call toxoid. They have immunized as large a part of their child population as we have of ours. They claim their results to be quite as good as ours.

At one time it was the custom to give a Schick test before immunizing, regardless of age. At present that plan is followed with grown-ups, with adolescents and with older school children, but not with children under 5.

Young babies are immune to diphtheria, but the immunity wears out gradually. At 1 year of age and for several years thereafter all children are subject to the disease.

Of older persons not more than one-half can have diphtheria; the others are immune.

The Schick test is used to save the immune from having to use T-A.

BEST FOODS FOR BOY.

Mrs. S. C. J. writes: 1. Is hot chocolate bad for the digestion of a 2½-year-old boy?

2. In what way is sugar harmful to his body?

3. Are peanuts bad for this child and how?

REPLY.

1. No. But warm milk is somewhat better.

2. Candy and sugar are very good foods. They furnish heat and energy. They are especially good for men who endure cold. Athletes find them helpful. Long distance swimmers find them helpful. They are not good food for children because they make other foods taste flat. They destroy the appetite for meat, milk, bread, cereals, vegetables and fruit—foods that are necessary for growth and vigor.

3. Peanuts are rich food. Children are likely to eat too much of them.

SACCHARIN NOT FOOD.

I. J. C. writes: Will you be kind enough to tell me if a person using saccharin as a substitute for sugar each day is likely to injure his heart? I have been informed that this is a coal tar product, or at least it contains a substance which, if used freely, is injurious to the heart.

REPLY.

Saccharin is not a food. In the ordinary amounts taken in coffee and other foods, it has no physiologic action. It is very sweet and therefore very little need be used.

Eaten as a condiment in moderation, it does not harm the heart nor any other organ.

CAN'T REDUCE BY HOT BATHS.

Interested Reader writes: Do you think it wrong to take hot baths twenty minutes each day? I have been doing this for reducing.

REPLY.

It will do you no harm; neither will it cause you to lose flesh.

POST HOUR AT WRC TO REVIEW HISTORY OF SHERIDAN CIRCLE

Radio to Broadcast Traditions of Neighborhood That Will House Queen Marie.

EVENTS AMONG WOMEN TO BE ANOTHER TOPIC

Musical Program Will Be Given by Students of Paul Bleyden Studios.

The Post hour at 6 o'clock tomorrow night from WRC, will include a historical talk on Sheridan circle and the neighborhood of the Roumanian legation where Queen Marie will reside during her stay in Washington.

Elisabeth E. Poe, who has collected considerable information concerning this section of the Capital, will describe the circle and its significance with reference to the approaching visit of the Queen of Roumania. Katherine Moose, soprano will appear in a brief recital followed by the only other talk of the hour on "National and Local Women's Events," by Vylla Poe Wilson, editor of women's news of The Post.

Musical Program Offered.

A varied vocal and instrumental program will be presented by Miss E. McIntosh, contralto, James A. Barr tenor and Ruth Linder pianist. These students of the Paul Bleyden studios have appeared in several local programs. Their offering tomorrow night included new songs and a group of selections by Miss Linder. Charles Kramer, violinist, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. C. DeLano will play several selections some of which are comprised in the term "old time fiddlin'."

The concluding feature of the hour will be the initial appearance on the air this season of Paul Cassassa and his orchestra in novelty dance numbers.

MARGARET MATZENAUER ON AIR AT WRC TONIGHT

Metropolitan Opera Stars to Be Heard in Atwater-Kent Concert Series.

CHURCH SERVICES TODAY

The question, "Which is the greatest voice of Metropolitan opera?" may be put up to the radio fans of America to answer through the Atwater-Kent series of Sunday evening programs. Among the Metropolitan artists whom Mr. Kent has signed up for this season is the famous prima donna, Margaret Matzenauer, who will be heard over the usual fifteen stations, including WRC, at 9:15 o'clock tonight.

Margaret Matzenauer, a woman of international distinction, has been credited with being the Metropolitan's greatest voice. One thing that has contributed to her reputation is the unusual fact that she is both a contralto and a soprano, an achievement rarely found.

The evening program will be opened at 7:20 with the regular Sunday night entertainment broadcast from the Capitol theater under the direction of Maj. Edward Bowes.

This morning, beginning at 11 o'clock, WRC will broadcast church services from the Calvary Baptist church, where the sermon will be delivered by the Rev. William S. Abernethy, pastor.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock the services from Bethlehem chapel of the Washington cathedral will be broadcast. The cathedral sermon will be delivered by the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington.

FLORIDA MACHINERY RUSHED BY AIR MAIL

Westinghouse Sends Parts for Motor to Fort Lauderdale at Cost of $160.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 16.—In response to a plea from the Fort Lauderdale municipal water works in the midst of Florida's devastated regions, recently, the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. sent coils for a 100-horsepower motor from its Atlanta plant by air mail to the stricken region. The coils were received by the water works, which soon was able to resume operations.

According to officials of both companies, it is the first time any large industrial machinery has been shipped by governmental air service. The postal charges of the shipment, which went first class, were more than $160.

When the wire was received by the Westinghouse company, the shipment was sent by rail on a fast express. Shortly after the express had pulled out for the Fort Lauderdale section, it was discovered that even with the delay in retrieving the material, a saving of more than twelve hours could be made if the shipment were rerouted and sent by air mail. A telegraphic tracer intercepted the machinery. After taking the consignment from the train at the first stop, the shipment was sent on by airplane to the air mail station, whence it went to Florida.

Pigeons Flock to Library.

CONVENIENT TERMS

FRANCE WILL USE RADIO IN EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

Called Most Valuable of Auxiliaries in Teaching School Pupils.

DIRECTOR NOW IS HERE

France has adopted radio as the means of developing a new intellectual order among its citizens, according to Eric H. Palmer, of the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corporation.

In this system of education, founded under the patronage of the University of Paris at the Sorbonne, the University Extension Radio institute has taken the leadership, and while radio is not doing away with direct teaching, it is believed to be the most valuable of all auxiliaries thereto.

The committee in charge is headed by Raymond Poincare, ex-president of France. At the head of the administrative council is Jean-Louis Faure, professor of m dicine, with Senator Paul Dupuy, director of Le Petit Parisien, which controls one of the principal broadcast-'ng stations, and president of the Radio federation, and Henri Abraham, professor of science and member of the radio technical commission, as vice presidents.

The secretary and director, Gaston Antignac, is at the present time in the United States studying the utilization of radio here as an adjunct to the schools and colleges.

The program of the University Extension radio institute includes teaching through regular courses especially adapted for the radio, the broadcasting of courses and lectures given at prominent educational institutions, and lectures in pedagogy for the teaching staff.

The project is financed through the payment of an annual fee of 1,000 francs by its large number of active members. Cooperating in the work are the leading colleges of France, the scientific bodies, technical institutions, societies of musicians and composers, the electrical industry, commercial organizations and other important interests.

NEW POWER AMPLIFIER TO BE DISTRIBUTED HERE

CUTS OPERATING COSTS

The Doubleday-Hill Electric Co. will distribute here a power amplifier and B battery eliminator which they have determined, after careful analysis, serves as one of the best units for this dual service to be found on any manufacturer's list.

The new rectifying tubes tend to increase the efficiency of B battery eliminators. The modern radio set utilizes some form of power unit which does away with the cumbersome A and B batteries and at the same time assures smoother operation than the old method. The receptrad power amplifier and B eliminator plugs into the first stage of audio amplification, substitutes a power tube for the last tube of the set, supplying B current for the whole set. This replaces B batteries, diminishes the drain on the A batteries, gives a distinct power tube tone desirable for use with a cone or drum type loud speaker. For the less elaborate tube sets this power unit is particularly adaptable, for it makes the operation of a loud speaker much more efficient. Least operating cost and maximum efficiency are the advantages claimed. The unit may be used on alternating current, with which nearly all residential houses are wired.

ELECTRICAL INDUSTRY UTILIZES MICA WASTE

Particles Heretofore Discarded Now Combined With Lead Borate for Insulators.

HAS MANY ADVANTAGES

Mica particles which heretofore could not be used, are now utilized as an insulating material for the production of radio high-frequency insulators. The new insulation, known as mycalex, is a composition of ground mica and lead borate.

Mica previously presented a difficult problem because of the enormous amount of waste. Obtained in India and Canada in large sheets, there was considerable waste at the mines, it being estimated that only about 5 per cent of the material taken from the mine could be used. In manufacuring, there were still further wastes of small pieces of mica, but some years ago it was found that these mica flakes, mixed with a binding material and compressed under heat, made very good insulation. Such sheets of prepared mica are used by the General Electric Co. in manufacturing processes. And now a product has been developed which uses mica particles, so that even more of the mica is utilized.

The new material has better insulating properties than has porcelain, and several applications for it have been developed by engineers of the General Electric Co. The substance, light gray in color and with a metallic ring, is being used in the manufacture of bases for radio transmitter tubes, for aerial insulators in high frequency work, and for numerous similar applications.

Chief among its characteristics are that metal parts may be inserted or combined with Mycalex during the process of molding, and, although a hard and stonelike product, it can be subjected to ordinary machining methods.

Mycalex is softened or made plastic by heating to dull redness, and the plastic mass is then formed into the desired shape by compression in steel molds closed under hydraulic pressure. Not only has it better electrical properties than porcelain, but it is stronger mechanically except under pressure. It is not as heat-resistant as porcelain or mica, but tests show that it is far superior in this respect to the ordinary molded insulations made with phenolic resins, schellac, gums, pitches and other materials.

The fact that metal parts can be combined with Mycalex during the molding process means a tighter and a stronger combination. As a rule, metal inserts can not be imbedded in ceramic products during the process of manufacture, and this is especially true of porcelain, in which it is impossible because of the considerable shrinkage and the high temperature which causes melting or slagging of metal parts.

Although Mycalex can be drilled, filled, sawed, polished and similarly treated by usual machining methods, it is necessary in some instances to use special tools, since the wear when working with mycalex is greater than when cutting metal.

The new compound has been recommended for use where the requirements demand an insulating material of high mechanical strength, high dielectric strength and insulating resistance, low losses under high frequencies, heat resistance beyond the ordinary range of molded or sheet materials, and compact construction with metal inserts securely molded in place.

ELECTRIC MODEL HOME ON INSPECTION TODAY

House Open From 10 to 10 o'Clock Every Day Until November 1.

BUILT FOR AVERAGE MAN

Prominent among the attractions featured in the display of the model electric home, which opens to the public today at 522 Rittenhouse street northwest, and which remains on display from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. from today until October 31, inclusive, is the fact that the "model home" is set out in a house that sells for less than $10,000.

In making the selection of house, the officials of the Electric League of Washington, had in mind a "model home" that could be owned and lived in by the average wage earner of our city.

The house selected was erected by the Wardman Construction Co., of which Harry Wardman is president. It has often been said that Harry Wardman is the friend of the man of limited income, for it is through his organization that many now own their homes, who under ordinary circumstances could never hope to do so.

The model electrical home is situated in a high Northwest section, surrounded by attractive homes of high-class owners. The house is of brick construction, and of the semi-detached type, allowing air and light on three sides. It contains six rooms, all of comfortable size, and a built-in two-car garage. The house is 20 feet wide and 32 feet deep, with screened-in sleeping and breakfast porches. There is also a front porch, of cement construction, and ample size.

One of the features of the home is the fact that there is little necessary in connection with it, in the way of maintenance. A minimum amount of painting will be required as the years go on, and wherever it has been found practical other material than wood has been used.

Although Wardman houses generally are well equipped with electrical convenience outlets and proper lighting and fixtures, in this newly furnished home the Wardman organization has increased the electrical installation to conform to the requirements and the plans of the Electric League of Washington, which specified those things which were considered to be of importance in a "model electrical home."

This Wardman house, which is one of several English Georgian type and character, sells for below $10,000, on terms which make it possible for the salaried man of moderate income to own his own home.

Electric League Briefs

By N. H. BARNES, Assistant Secretary.

Today is the opening day of the model home electric, available for Mr. Average Washingtonian, and on exhibit for every one to view at 522 Rittenhouse street northwest. A trip to this house costs nothing and is bound to result in the obtaining of some knowledge of electrical installation and equipment shown. There is nothing "tricky" or novel about the home. There is nothing to be sold. It is educational in purpose and has for its object the hope of showing our neighbors throughout this city the opportunities which await them to live more comfortably, more conveniently and more happily. George P. Mangan, sales manager of the Potomac Electric Power Co., is chairman of the home electric subcommittee of a larger educational committee, of which Howard P. Foley, national electrical contractor, is chairman.

Every one is strongly urged to visit this house. One thought alone—the thought of the conservation of eyesight of young America—is worth the time that it will take. There are many poor eyes in the Washington schools, and to a great extent the cause is in the home lighting, where thought has not been given to the avoiding of dangerous glare and gloom. Among many other things, in the home electric, parents will see that every source of light should be shaded.

With further regard to the men who are heading this model electrical home activity for the Electric League of Washington, it is of great interest to note that these men are leaders in their field. G. P. Mangan is a member of the Association of Sales Managers, an organization of executives of electric light and power companies all over this country, and during the past summer delivered before that body a paper on "lighting in Washington." In addition to this national connection, Mr. Mangan is also chairman of the "Electric light and power group" of the Maryland Utilities Association.

Howard P. Foley, electrical contractor, has active offices in Miami and Philadelphia as well as in Washington. Mr. Foley is an active worker in the Association of Electragists, International, and a member of the New York Electrical Board of Trade. Howard P. Foley designed and executed the electrical installation in many large hotels, office buildings and other structures in Miami, and in recognition of his activities there a large photograph of this Washingtonian recently appeared on the front page of a large Miami daily. In Washington, Howard P. Foley installed the electrical equipment in the Mayflower hotel, and is now doing the work in the new National Press Club building. Such is the caliber of brains behind the "model electric home" at 522 Rittenhouse street northwest. You are urged to visit this display.

H. W. Keefe, assistant manager of the Doubleday, Hill Co., is an active member on the attendance committee of the Electric league. Every Thursday, prior to a meeting of the league, Mr. Keefe talks with some one connected with the electrical department, the power company, and each of the jobbers, and has a permanently prepared sign announcing the forthcoming meeting place in a conspicuous place. Each month these signs, says Mr. Keefe, greatly increase the attendance, which this year has far exceeded anything of the past. L. L. Hayes is chairman of the attendance committee.

One of the biggest weeks yet known was had in the Electric league from the point of view of active interest in the organization. At an executive committee meeting, held Monday, the following were present and active in the discussions: H. A. Brooks, L. T. Souder, J. C. Harding, Jos. Kirchner, E. R. Bateman, R. P. Gibson, P. A. Davis, C. D. Kenney, F. B. Dillon, F. T. Shull, C. P. Hill, G. P. Mangan, J. H. Potts, Howard P. Foley and N. H. Barnes. The full executive committee, excepting one member, all of the officers and two invited visitors attended this meeting at the City club.

At this meeting P. A. Davis, chairman of the fixture dealers' group, presented applications for membership in the league from the following fixture dealers: E. R. Brooks, 910 Fourteenth street northwest; Atwood & Rupprecht, 819 Thirteenth street northwest; Ross & Wells, 915 Twelfth street northwest, and C. A. Muddiman, 709 Thirteenth street northwest. Application of O. A. Ward, Standard Sewing Machine Co., also was approved.

The Electric league meeting held on Thursday night of last week was also one of the best attended meetings of its kind yet held. The meeting was characterized by snappy reports and interesting discussion. President L. T. Souder carried the affairs to be brought up through without letting a minute drag at any time. Several new members were welcomed.

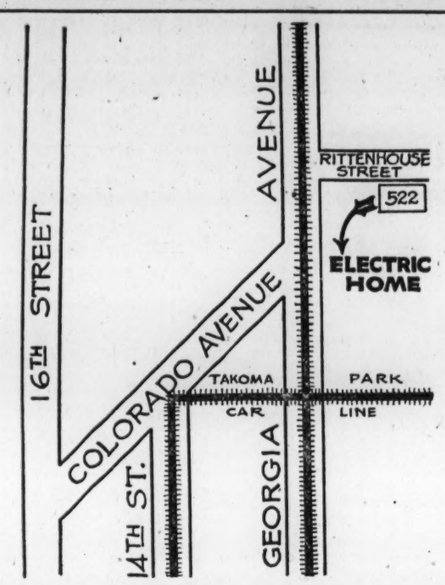

H. A. Brooks, member of the National Electric League council, made a hurried trip from Washington to Cleveland, leaving Washington on Monday night and being back to his desk on Wednesday morning. The occasion for the trip was a gathering at Cleveland of the aforementioned council where plans for the detail of putting into effect the national and local market development plan were worked upon and in some instances cleared up for immediate use. H. A. Brooks and L. T. Souder attended the conference of representatives of 75 electrical leagues, where this plan for market development was first presented, and it was on motion of L. T. Souder that it was accepted. In such a way is the National Capital becoming recognized nationally in things electrical.

A fishing trip last week, of which little should be said, resulted in twelve hours of trolling by three prominent electrical men, and "nary, a bite." Doc Souder, president of the league; Ed Bateman, vice president, and Bob Frank, of the electrical department, were the participants in the "boat ride."

Decorated Candle Fixtures.

Most charming electric candle fixtures for the nursery are in green with Kate Greenaway children in painted wood about the bases. These are safe and sane.

LOCATION OF THE HOME ELECTRIC

Arrow indicates 522 Rittenhouse street northwest, the "home electric" and its approaches. The home, which contains every modern electrical convenience, will be open to visitors from today until October 31.

ELECTRICITY SOLVES HOSTESS' PROBLEMS

Cooking Troubles Vanish Before Handy and Convenient Devices for Meals.

Electric cooking devices have solved this problem for the hostess and there is hardly a wired home that does not boast of chafing dish, grill or waffle iron.

The electric waffle iron is adapted particularly to the company supper. It does not have to be greased—there is no heavy, smelly smoke involved and the waffles it turns out tickle the palate and may be served at table with electrically percolated coffee.

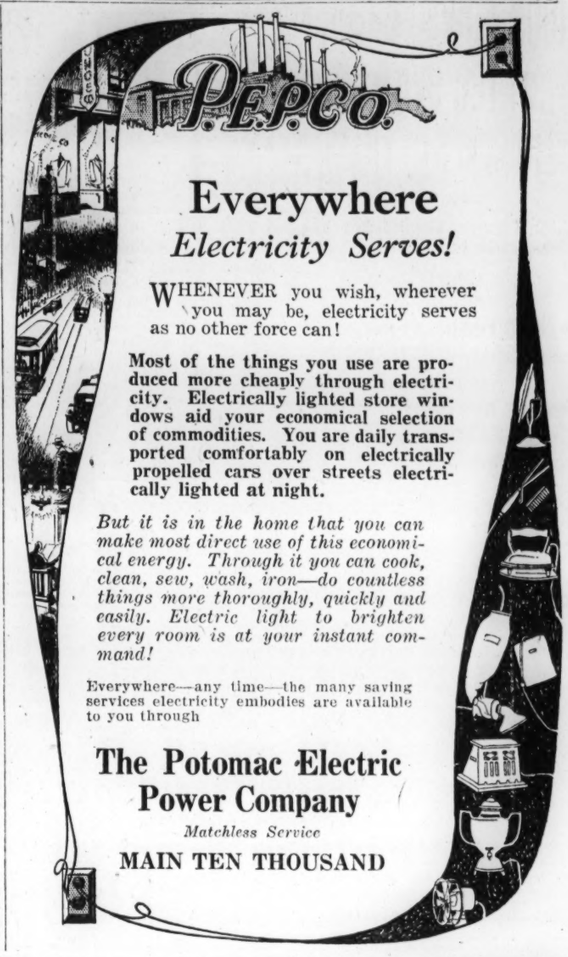

These table appliances are so convenient and handy to use that the hostess who is planning card parties, sewing bees or club meetings this winter would do well to equip her dining room electrically. If she has not enough electrical connections to use those appliances conveniently, she can press into service "Electric Susan," a compact little table with three places where devices may be plugged in and fed current. A master cord runs from "Susie" to the wall connections thus making three efficient electrical connections from one.

Lights for the Shaver.

For the man of the house who shaves himself there should be two brackets, one on either side of the bathroom mirror for light, and a convenient outlet near the basin to attach a vibrator to an electrical shaving mug which heats its own water.

$1,400,000,000 for Power.

There are in the United States about 13,000,000 customers of electric light and power companies who pay approximately $1,400,000,000 for electricity each year.

Everywhere
Electricity Serves!

WHENEVER you wish, wherever you may be, electricity serves as no other force can!

Most of the things you use are produced more cheaply through electricity. Electrically lighted store windows aid your economical selection of commodities. You are daily transported comfortably on electrically propelled cars over streets electrically lighted at night.

But it is in the home that you can make most direct use of this economical energy. Through it you can cook, clean, sew, wash, iron—do countless things more thoroughly, quickly and easily. Electric light to brighten every room is at your instant command!

Everywhere—any time—the many saving services electricity embodies are available to you through

RADIOS FORGE AHEAD OF WATER SYSTEMS ON MIDWEST FARMS

Only 10 Per Cent of Nebraska Properties Have Piping in Houses.

STATE OFFERS LARGE MARKET TO PLUMBERS

College Stages Campaign to Encourage Use of Labor-Saving Devices.

It is surprising to know the amount of water that is used on the average farm of the middle West. The water used on the average 160-acre farm for one year would fill a tank 200 feet square and 6 feet 3 inches deep, or, in other words, it would cover about 5½ acres of ground 1 foot deep, or 1 acre 5½ feet deep. The majority of water used in the barnyard is pumped by a windmill or gasoline engine.

A study of statistics seems to indicate that out of 127,700 farms in Nebraska only about 10 per cent have water piped into the house, and only about 6 per cent have bathrooms.

This is surprising when you consider that there are 108,000 farm-owned automobiles and that there are more radio sets on the farms of the State than there are bathrooms. In other words, there are 100,000 farms or more in Nebraska which are a market for some sort of a water system which would furnish running water at the kitchen sink.

At $100 per farm this would make a potential market for $10,000,000 worth of goods. There is no doubt but that the farmer's wife deserves water piped to the kitchen when we consider that from 40 to 70 tons of this life-giving fluid are used each year and that if she carries them 20 feet from the well to the kitchen sink she walks 33 miles per year. There are many farms where the housewife walks more than 100 miles per year between the well and the kitchen sink, expending enough labor to dig five wells per year 40 feet deep, or to plow approximately 19 acres of land.

Decided on Campaign.

Even a casual observation will convince any one that the men on the farm have the best of the situation as far as labor-saving equipment is concerned. On one particular place in Nebraska it was found that the farmer and his hired man were using a hay-loader, manure-spreader, manure loader, hay-carrier, a litter-carrier, an automatic elevator in the granary, automatic hog waterers and many other such items which totaled more than $1,200, whereas a conservative estimate of the labor-saving equipment at the house would have been $15 to $20.

Realizing this situation, the extension service of the College of Agriculture decided to stage a rather intensive campaign in nine counties to encourage the use of labor-saving devices and conveniences in the farm home.

Inasmuch as the farm women were the ones who were to profit most from this work, it was decided that the farm women's club of the State would be the best medium of contact.

Trained 300 Delegates.

March, 1926, was spent training more than 300 delegates in regard to the use and construction of simple water supply and sewage systems for farm use. These local delegates in turn went back and taught the people of their communities what they had learned, by means of charts and bulletins, furnished by the extension service.

The local plumbers in these nine counties received bulletins and written material advising them of the campaign that was in progress and asking them to cooperate in every way possible.

A series of demonstrations on the construction of the septic tank is being held in each of the nine counties in cooperation with the Portland Cement association. H. J. Young, the representative of the Portland Cement association in Nebraska, and R. W. Oberlin, of the extension service, are conducting this work, using a truck as a means of transportation and carrying with them a complete set of tools and forms for building a concrete septic tank. It is not intended that the home-made tank shall be especially advocated, since many will prefer to buy ready-made tanks. The purpose of the demonstration simply is to get the crowd together and hold them for a discussion of sewage disposal for the rural home.

Berlin "Rotten Row" Soon to Be Memory

Berlin, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The "Rotten row" of Berlin, which runs through the middle of Kurfuerstendamm, the Broadway of the aristocratic West End, will soon be a memory.

Car tracks are being removed from the street and laid on the bridle path where once rode members of the house of Hohenzollern and the nobility. "Rotten row" lost its glammour when Wilhelm II fled to Holland. And the increasing traffic made necessary the replacement of the car tracks. But the two lanes of elms will remain so that in summer street cars will travel through a bower of green.

COST OF PLUMBING TAKES 10 PER CENT OF BUILDING DOLLAR

Total Labor Charges Consume More Than Half of Construction Money.

Some recent figures, purported to have been given out by the United States Department of Labor, show where the building dollar goes in the average home. While many person from years of experience have had an idea, perhaps a little vague, as to the distribution of building costs among the different trades, now they can have some definite figures on the subject.

The total labor cost of the average dwelling is computed to be 59.5 per cent, based on recent costs obtained from all sections of the country. At first thought this may appear rather high, but when we consider the present wage scales of building mechanics, it probably is correct.

Of particular interest to the plumbing and heating trades is this: In the foregoing Federal tabulation of the division of the building dollar we are informed that 10 per cent of it goes into plumbing and 8.70 per cent into heating, or 18.70 per cent for both.

Many persons seem obsessed with the idea that the cost of plumbing and heating installations is out of all proportion to the cost of other branches of building construction. This may be due to the fact so much of these installations is out of sight—buried underground and hidden in partitions and walls and under floors; they only see the fixtures and a few exposed pipes.

Considering the importance of plumbing and heating to every well-ordered home and the modest financial standing of the average practitioner of these arts, one is strongly of the opinion that plumbing and heating contractors are far from overpaid in receiving something less than 19 cents of every dollar which enters into home construction.

WATER SYSTEM MAKING LIVING ON FARM HAPPIER

Men who are in close touch with conditions say that there seems to be a general tendency of the population to get back to the soil. If there is not an actual movement back to agricultural pursuits, there is, at least, a stoppage of the exodus toward the city.

There are several explanations, all of which seem plausible, that serve to account for this change in the movements of the population.

The development of hard-road systems, improvements in farming machinery, and last, but of great importance, the manufacture of farm equipment for electric lights and running water service, have all served to make farm life more pleasant and profitable.

Running water on the farm, in every building, calls for only a moderate investment, and the maintenance cost is but a few cents a day. The farm water system is the greatest aid to save time, labor and money, to say nothing of health, since the farmer threw away the forked stick and shaped a plow out of iron. Running water service in the house, for the laundry, bathroom and kitchen, saves the housewife a great deal of hard work. Water piped to the dairy and other farm buildings makes farm chores a quicker and easier task. A water system is also a reliable fire protection.

Such conveniences make for better and happier living. They bring city comforts to the farm and are a powerful force in making farm life attractive, especially to young folks and competent farm labor.

GREAT NUMBERS DIE AS BUBONIC PLAGUE SWEEPS ON BAGDAD

Rats, Believed Responsible for Origin of Disease, Blamed for Spread.

HUMANS GET INFECTION FROM FLEAS ON RODENTS

Seen as Sickness of Filth, Cleanliness Is Declared Only Preventive.

Recent press reports tell of the bubonic plague raging in Bagdad and that great numbers of persons are dying daily. The bubonic plague is a germ disease and one of the most contagious known to the scientific world. The black death, which is said to have carried off millions of Europeans during the fourteenth century, is supposed to have been bubonic plague.

The disease seems to have had its origin in countries of the Far East, and rats are charged with being the main cause of its spread. We are informed that infection is carried by the fleas which have their habitat on the bodies of rats, and that, therefore, the rat is the chief offender. These fleas, once they are introduced into human society, convey infection.

We also are advised that an unhealthy and filthy environment favors the disease, and that the best preventive of plague is a clean and hygienic mode of living. There can be little doubt that the bubonic plague is a filth disease, and could filth be universally abolished over night, like fish out of water, the plague germs probably would not survive long.

The rat population of this country has decreased materially within the memory of most of us, and for this the plumber deserves much of the credit. In the days when many of our public sewers were built of plank and broken stone, and the drains to our buildings were constructed mostly of plank, installed by carpenters, nearly every building was visited by rats. The sewers and drains made fine runways for the rodents.

Modern plumbing and sewers have changed all this. Again we see where the plumber is as important as the physician. The former's work is to prevent; the latter's to cure. Yes, there are fewer rats because of sanitary plumbing, and, equally important, there is less filth. Proper building construction and sanitation today are solving the problem of public health, and with greatest results where most faithfully observed.

U. S. Demands British Spurs, Bits, Bridles

London, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Thanks to the demand from the United States for bits, spurs and bridles, the "loriner" or saddlers art is not yet dead in England.

Speaking at the livery dinner of the Loriners' Co., Daniel Hone said the chief loriner at Walsall told him that the people of the United States insisted on having English forged loriner's work at any price, despite the enormous tariffs against it.

SANITATION IS HELD CHIEF REASON WHY NATION IS HEALTHY

United States Leads World in Study of Improving Public Health.

SURFACE SCRATCHED; MUCH YET TO BE DONE

Wear-and-Tear of Things Require Constant Watchfulness and Replenishing.

The United States is the healthiest nation, the public health service reports, and also the wealthiest, according to the Federal Trade Commission—our national wealth being placed at $353,000,000,000.

Is this a mere coincidence, or are we the wealthiest mainly because we are the healthiest? Certainly the healthiest people ought, in the very nature of things to be the most active, blessed with a maximum of mental and physical endurance, naturally then, we should be the greatest producers—wealth creators.

As a matter of fact, wealth would mean little or nothing to an unhealthy man or aggregation of unhealthy men—a nation, for instance. Again, isn't health wealth; the only wealth, in the last analysis, that really counts?

We all know wealthy people, some of them very wealthy, but it means next to nothing to them—physical and sometimes mental wrecks, actually burdened with life because of their inability to enjoy it.

If the United States is the healthiest nation—and we believe it does hold the record for longevity—it is largely the result of sanitation. The public health has been the concern of students of sanitation and governmental officials in this country for some years now, and there isn't any doubt but what we lead the world in this direction at present.

Notwithstanding the wonderful advancement made in this respect, there is much yet to be accomplished; the surface, so to speak, hasn't been much more than scratched. Besides, there is the wear and tear of things, which calls for constant watchfulness and replenishment, and, too, the grave problem of an everincreasing population.

A people which refuses or neglects to concern itself with sanitation will never build up a very healthy nation, and an unhealthy nation will not stand much of a chance in the race for wealth.

Blindness Checked By Ultra-Violet Rays

London, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Surgeons have succeeded in restoring sight to diseased eyes and by standardizing the method of treatment have opened up the way for a new attack on blindness, said A. J. M. Tarrant, secretary of Moorfields, the biggest eye hospital in the British Empire. A year's experiment with a tiny mercury vapor lamp throwing out ultra-violet rays, has just been successfully concluded there.

The secretary said the violet-ray treatment had been successfully used in cases of threatened total blindness, the eye trouble in these instances being due to tubercular disease.

BATHROOMS INSTALLED IN PALACE QUAI D'ORSAY

Modern Facilities Put In for Visit of Czechoslovakian President.

Two bathrooms were installed recently in a Parisian palace in honor of Czechoslovakia's president. The president was paying an official visit to Paris. The palace Quai d'Orsay, where he was to stop, was remodeled to the extent to include modern bathing facilities.

Previous to this time there had been no bathrooms in this famous palace. Yet the royal apartments therein at different times had been the home of Edward VII, Czar Nicholas, King Albert of Belgium and all the other sovereigns and dignitaries who have been the guests of the French republic since 1900.

No bathroom! But the tapestries, sculptures and furnishings are classed among the art treasures of Paris. Paris now realizes that pleasing the esthetic senses demands more than art treasures and visible luxuriousness. Facilities for personal nicety and cleanliness are being considered.

America has no palaces and no royalty. But even our most modest homes have enjoyed the health protection and convenience of modern plumbing for years. The highest dignitary from over the Atlantic could visit this country and whatever hotel he chose would give him facilities for personal comfort that are notably absent from most of the palaces and noted hostelries of Europe.

A bathroom is not a luxury. It is a necessity. Except for ignorance or for the cupidity of landlords, through the United States "a bath in every home" would be more than a slogan; it would be an accomplished fact.

MARMON EXECUTIVE DISCREDITS DANGER OF LACK OF MARKET

Need for Replacements Will Take Care of Output, Says Sales Director.

NEED FOR NEW BUYERS HELD TO BE DIMINISHING

Increase in Demand for American Cars Abroad Will Provide Wide Field.

By H. H. BROOKS,
General Sales Director, Morman Motor Car Company.

Has the automobile industry reached its maturity? Has it, within 25 years, become stabilized, like the steel and iron industries or the shoe industry? If so, the bugaboo of the saturation point has been encountered and has proved not nearly so formidable or spooky as was feared.

There are certain things one always dreads, such as walking through a graveyard at midnight or attaining the mellow age of 50. But once in a graveyard at midnight or once turned 50, fears somehow have a way of vanishing, and the situation is not at all uncomfortable. One merely has to adjust himself to it.

We may even have passed the saturation point without knowing it. There are indications, according to some economists, that the industry has attained the replacement stage, whatever that may mean. In other words, new buyers are becoming more and more difficult to find, but less important, strange as it may seem, in maintaining the present rate of output. And the replacement stage may be equivalent to the saturation point. Even at that, there is little to fear, and no reason whatever for alarm as to what the future holds in store.

Horseless Carriage Era.

In its earliest stages, the industry tapped a virgin field. Almost soundless depths of prospective buyers had to be convinced only that the automobile was practical. They had to be sold on the "horseless carriage."

The snowball was a bit slow in starting, but once under way, sales multiplied almost in geometrical progression. Once convinced that the automobile had been weaned from its experimental stage; that it was no longer a fad, a novelty, or a rich man's toy, the great American public began buying cars.

Today, almost everybody in the United States either owns a car or rents one. And while, because of the general popularity of the motor car, it has become difficult to make new converts, the situation is by no means so desperate as it might seem.

Replacements automatically keep the factories at normal production. The present rate of output—a matter of some 4,300,000 cars this year—can be maintained, it is indicated as a result of replacement sales alone, even if new buyers are becoming scarce.

This is comforting news to the industry and should make for contentment and stability. The replacement stage, if we have actually entered it, should presage, if anything, an era of prosperity, such as that enjoyed by long-established industries.

Sales Are Assured Today.

It should be remembered that more than 1,500,000 cars were scrapped last year. This would result in a permanent demand for more than a third of the annual production. Exports in 1925, to the value of $399,914,268, took up 12 per cent of the production. As European conditions become more settled the demand for American-made cars will increase, and here, in the world market, is an almost unlimited field.

It has been estimated by one student of industrial trends that 2,000,000 new buyers will be required this year to keep production normal. Owing to the increasing replacement sales, however, this number, theoretically, will diminish, until by 1930 only 900,000 new buyers will be necessary.

There is nothing, however, to indicate that the birth rate is appreciably falling off or that America's army of young wage earners, business men and farmers is growing any poorer.

Theories, while interesting, are not always conclusive, but as one of the optimists of the automobile industry, I should say we have little to worry about, even if the replacement stage or saturation point actually has been reached. We never know what may be around the corner.

A. A. A. OPENS DRIVE TO END GIVING RIDES TO YOUNG CHILDREN

Practice Causes Hundreds of Wrecks Annually, Says Motor Group.

KINDLY DRIVER LIABLE IF ACCIDENT RESULTS

Cooperation of Teachers and Parents Sought in Nation-Wide Campaign.

Calling on all motorists and parents for the fullest cooperation, the American Automobile Association has launched a nation-wide campaign to bring to an end "the dangerous practice" of passing automobilists giving rides to school children.

"Hundreds of accidents are caused annually because children do not realize this practice constitutes one of the gravest of highway hazards, and parents and motorists should concentrate their energies on discouraging this habit which seems to be manifesting itself on a constantly larger scale," says a statement from A. A. A. national headquarters.

"The reopening of schools has found an ever-growing tendency on the part of pupils everywhere to ask lifts from passing motorists and the time is ripe for a concerted effort to bring this practice to an abrupt end."

In the opinion of the officials of the national motoring group, the problem calls for full cooperation on the part of the parents and motorists. Neither, they declare, can afford to shirk responsibility. Teachers, too, can do much toward discouraging the child from taking such risks.

Motorist Always Liable.

"It is a trying situation that the motorists faces when he signaled from the curb or roadside by a little child who wants a ride," says the A. A. A. statement, "but in a majority of cases it is best to pass by in the interests of safety. The driver who stops to pick up a youngster renders himself liable for anything that might happen to his suddenly acquired ward during the course of the ride. Children thus picked up too often are careless or unruly and the host faces the doubly hard task of trying to drive and at the same time keep an eye on his passenger. The situation makes for accidents and the motorist is liable.

"The man who follows out the advice of passing up an opportunity to give a child a lift has the expert opinion of traffic officials everywhere to back up his attitude. The risk is too great to be assumed lightly."

The role parents should play is in warning the child of the risk he takes in crowding out into the traffic stream to beckon his desire for a lift, the A. A. A. contends. The practice should be discouraged and parents should make it their duty to see that the warning is followed strictly.

Do Not Realize Peril.

"Children are not conscious of the extremely hazardous position in which they place themselves under such circumstances," the statement continues.

"It is a common sight to see youngsters of all ages forcing their way right into the middle of onrushing traffic if they see what looks like a good chance to obtain a ride.

"They not only endanger themselves, but interfere with the flow of traffic in a manner that distinctly is menacing.

"Motorists continually are being forced to swerve quickly from one traffic lane into another and, compelled to act with such celerity, it frequently is the case that they have no time to give signals, one of the most common causes of accidents. Hundreds of accidents are caused by these conditions and many of them are attended with fatal results."

School officials and teachers can do a great deal to discourage children under their care from resorting to this practice, according to the motor club officials.

"It is far better for the child to ignore his plea for a lift than to allow him to endanger his life and the lives of others," the statement concludes.

HUPMOBILE OFFERS NEW VICTORIA BODY OF INDIVIDUAL TYPE

Seating Arrangement Gives Unusual Accommodations to Care for Five Passengers.

MODEL COMPLETES LINE ON 8-CYLINDER CHASSIS

Wide Doors Give Easy Access to All Parts of Interior, Says Dealer.

The new Victoria on the Hupmobile eight-cylinder chassis announced last week combines the close-coupled seating arrangement peculiar to this type of body with an unusual amount of seat room for five passengers.

"The Victoria has ever been a favorite among those who demand exclusive and individual body types, and the Hupmobile interpretation of it will surely extend that vogue as a result of its unusual and distinctive beauty, says Robert F. Fleming, who is quite enthusiastic over the sales possibilities of this latest addition to the line.

"Body colors have been selected to accentuate the original pleasing lines of this model. The lower body is finished in Southfield light green; the belt and rear deck in Monte Carlo darker green with black upper body; beading is black with thin white striping on belt, hood louves and wheel hubs. The upholstery in gray wool mohair with button tufting gives an attractive tone to the interior compartment.

Seats Assure Comfort.

"Comfort for passengers is assured by the generous dimensions in all seats. The rear seat, 52 inches wide, gives ample room for three passengers. Arm rests and deep back-cushion springs further add to the comfort of the luxurious body. A luggage compartment in the rear deck is convenient for carrying grips, traveling bags or small parcels.

"Wide doors (30 inches) and tilting front seats give access to or exit from all seats. The right front seat folds completely under the cowl when not in use; both front seats are adjustible for height to suit the individual owner.

"The steering wheel is all walnut, with walnut-grained instrument boards and door mouldings. The body hardware is an attractive pattern of the newest and most convenient design, such as 'remote-control' door opened and crank controls on windows and windshield.

"We now have," Fleming points out, "a complete line of bodies, ten in all, on the eight-cylinder chassis. This gives us the widest offering we have ever had, which leads us to expect a large increase in sales during the fall and winter months."

Reduction of Oil Viscosity Causes Serious Auto Ills

Crankcase Dilution Sometimes Results in Added Wear on Piston Rings and Cylinder Walls, Series of Tests Shows.

Viscosity, or thickness, of a lubricating oil for use in motor vehicles is the quality by which its lubricating ability usually is measured, and the seriousness of excessive dilution of oil in the crankcase by the unburned heavy ends of the gasoline fuel is due chiefly to the reduction of viscosity.

A series of tests made at the United States Bureau of Standards and reported by S. A. McKee, assistant mechanical engineer of the bureau, in the October number of the Journal of the Society of Automotive Engineers, indicates dilution also has an effect on the oiliness of the lubricant, and that under certain conditions this may result in increased friction and wear of the piston rings and cylinder walls.

Oiliness is defined as the property that causes a difference in friction when two lubricants of the same viscosity at the temperature of the oil film are used under identical conditions.

The test runs were made with two especially prepared journal bearings in a friction machine. In the first series a light mineral motor oil was used as a basis of comparison; in the second a blend of 64.25 per cent of cylinder oil and 35.75 per cent of kerosene was used, and in another series the lubricant was a light mineral oil to which 2 per cent of oleic acid was added.

These samples were chosen because their viscosities were very nearly the same at the temperature of operation. In the last test series blends of spindle stock and cylinder stock from the same crude oil were employed, and 10, 20 and 30 per cent of kerosene was added to the different blends to produce equal viscosity in the samples.

Results of the tests showed that under normal conditions of bearing speed and load on the bearing, all of the oils and the blends with kerosene showed practically identical friction, but at low speed and high load the oils containing kerosene developed rapidly increasing friction sooner than the others as the load was increased and the speed decreased.

The light mineral oil to which 2 per cent of oleic acid was added gave much better results in subnormal operation than the same oil blended with 35.75 per cent of kerosene. This indicates the addition of kerosene to lubricating oil causes the oil film on bearing surfaces to break down under less severe operating conditions than when straight mineral oil is used, and that the kerosene decreases the oiliness effect.

If used crankcase oils suffer such a decrease in oiliness, concludes McKee, it is reasonable to expect that at least during some periods of operation the piston rings are operating in a region of unstable lubrication where a decrease in oiliness may have an appreciable effect on frictional loss and wear. There probably are times, also, as when starting or stopping the engine, during which the oil film on the bearings is not complete and undue wear results.

ALL CLASSES CONTEND FOR JEWETT NAME PRIZE

Ecclesiastic and Penitentiary Prisoner Submit Proposals on Slogan for Sedan.

FRENCH COUNTESS ENTRY

An ecclesiastic and a penitentiary lifer, a French countess and an inmate of a home for aged women—these contrasting types and scores of others, are matching their wits against all America trying to win the $10,000 prize offered for a slogan for the new Jewett four-door sedan.

Thomas Mott, president of the Washington-Virginia Motors Co., the Paige and Jewett dealer here, has received from Detroit preliminary reports on the progress of the contest. Although only half the period is past, the Paige Co. has received enough ballots to indicate that the contest undoubtedly is one of the most popular ever held.

The large capital prize offered, and the fact that the second and third best suggestions will be rewarded with a Jewett four-door sedan, have brought in a flood of suggestions. The ecclesiastic's entry blank indicated that he was just about as eager to win a car as to get the $10,000; on the other hand, it is believed that the penitentiary lifer would rather get the cash than win the automobile.

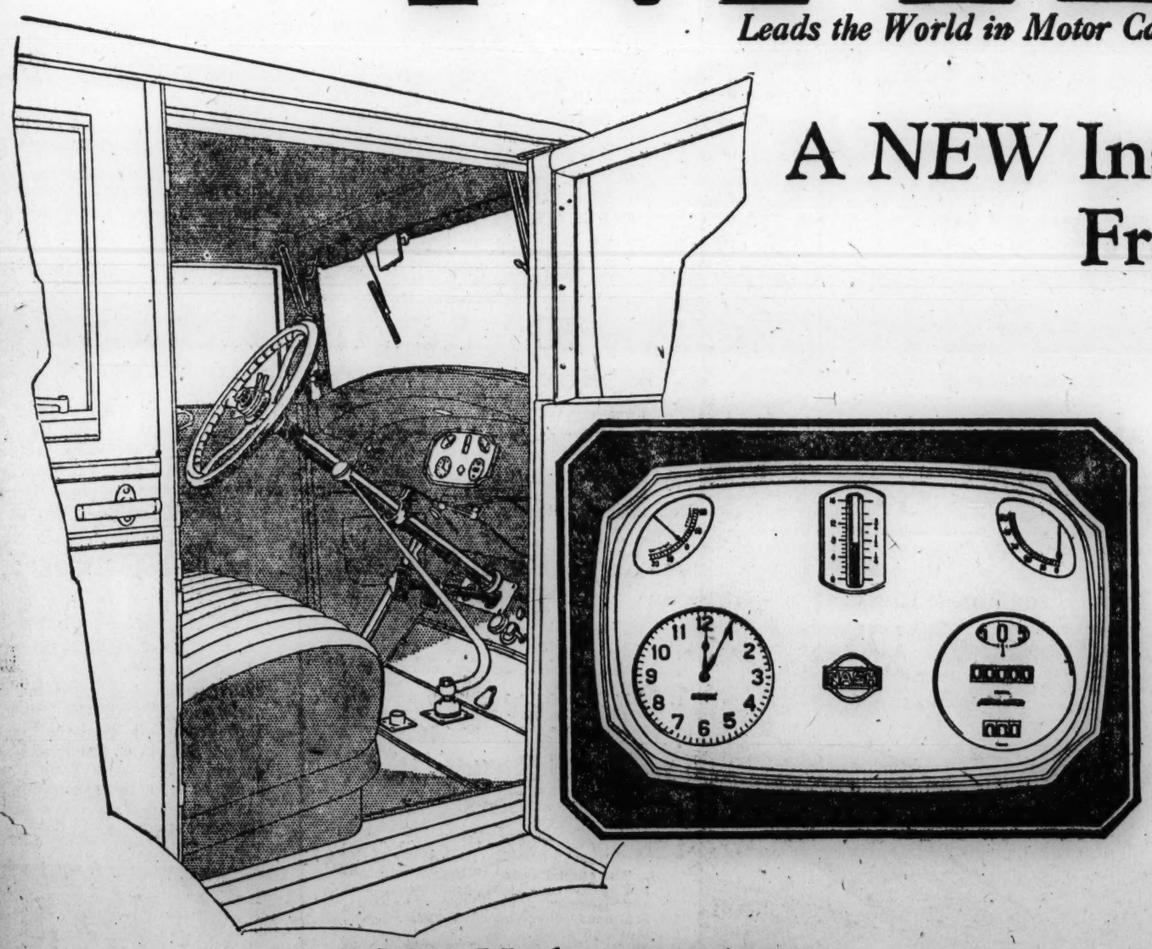

The contest, which is open to every one, runs till midnight of October 31, so there is still plenty of time to enter.

Official ballots for the contest are to be had from any Paige and Jewett dealer. The competitors are being informed by the dealers that what the Page Co. seeks is a good expressive slogan, in preference to a mere name for the car, though both classes of suggestions are eligible to win the prize. The Paige slogan—"the most beautiful car in America"—is well established, and a slogan as good, descriptive of the New Jewett, is deemed worth the $10,000 to be awarded the winner.

Ballots already received show that the contestants have searched far and wide for inspiration, ranging from Bible to slang, from mythology to biology, from ancient history to professional sports. It's going to be a difficult job for the judges to pick the winner.

NEW NASH MODELS

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

A NEW Instrument Board and Greater Front Compartment Convenience

One of the many outstanding advantages offered by the new Nash models is found in the arrangement and appointments of the roomy front compartment.

There is an attractive new instrument board with all instruments compactly assembled in a single panel under glass, indirectly lighted.

Included in the grouping is an electric clock, a hydrostatic gas gauge, ammeter, oil gauge, and speedometer.

Further forethought for the driver is shown in the way Nash has located the lever control of the new double-beam headlights on the steering wheel at your finger tips.

You'll observe, too, that Nash places the parking brake at the left toward the sidewall, thus giving the center of the front compartment greater leg space and foot room as well as adding to the sightliness of this space.

This parking brake (ordinarily called an emergency brake) is never needed for emergency use in a Nash because all Nash cars are standard equipped at no extra cost with the most efficient and powerful 4-wheel brakes known to the industry.

Come see the new Nash models and observe how expertly Nash has combined convenience with beauty and how much more comfortable you are in the Nash driving compartment.

New Nash Attractions

7-bearing crankshaft motor—world's smoothest type—powers all new Nash models.

New-type crankcase "breather" which prevents crankcase dilution.

Rubber insulated motor supports—(standard Nash practice for some time).

New-design motor muffler deepening operative quietness.

Motor heat control by new thermostatic water regulator.

Oil screen "agitator" preventing oil coagulation in coldest weather.

And many other new improvements.

EIGHT-DAY CADILLAC CLOSES SHOWING IN CITIES OVER NATION

Declared to Be Most Extensive Exhibition of Individual Manufacturer.

FIFTY TYPES OF BODIES INCLUDED BY COMPANY

Concern Organized in 1902 by Group of Detroit Business Men.

The nation-wide eight-day salon, held in 900 cities throughout the United States and marking the entrance of the Cadillac Motor Car Co. into its twenty-fifth year of manufacture, was brought to a close yesterday. With the 50 body types and styles now included in the company's manufacturing program shown by the distributing organization throughout the country, the salon is said to have been the most complete and extensive exhibition ever held by an individual automobile manufacturer.

It was in June of 1902 that a group of Detroit business men organized the Cadillac Automobile Co. and produced in September of that year its first unit, a model "A," one-cylinder car, embodying all of the latest automotive developments of the day.

The engine was suspended amidships beneath the front seat and was cranked from the side. It had patent leather mud guards, the evident product of a carriage factory, and offered as extra equipment all of the ultramodern trappings of the day, such as brass kerosene head lamps and tail lamps, and detachable tonneau with entrance from the rear.

With minor changes, 16,508 of the one-cylinder models were produced. They were practically indestructible and many are still in operation. One of these sturdy pioneers, stripped and geared high, at that time was driven a mile by Don Lee, the present California Cadillac distributor, in the marvelous time of 1:07 4-5 and 5 miles in 7:14, defeating a 16-horsepower, two-cylinder machine of a then well-known make. The same model, with tonneau, luggage and two to four passengers, was driven from New York to the St. Louis world's fair in 1904, winning first place and a perfect certificate for the entire trip.

Introduced 21 Years Ago.

A four-cylinder model was introduced in 1905, and in 1908 a sensation was created in automobile circles by the announcement of a Cadillac "thirty."

In the same year Cadillac was awarded the Dewar trophy by the Royal Automobile club of England, for the estbalishment and maintenance of a policy of complete standardization. That is, every part was manufactured to such close measurements that it was an exact duplicate of every other part of the same kind, and fitted in any car assembly without hand preparation.

Due to general performance, including the performance of its newly-developed electric starting, lighting and ignition system, the car again was awarded the Dewar trophy in 1913. It was the first American car to receive such recognition abroad, and it is the only car in the world to have been so honored twice.

The forerunner and basis of the present Cadillac was put on the market in 1914 with the production of the first V-type, 90-degree, eight-cylinder car in America. The V-63, presented in 1922, was a further improvement on this same V-8 principle. The engine was balanced inherently, its compensated crankshaft eliminating vibration and solving a problem which for years had baffled automotive engineers.

The new 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac was presented in August, 1925. During the next twelve months the company's sales showed 87.5 per cent increase over the sales for the preceding year.

With the announcement this fall of fifty distinctive body types and a choice of 500 color and upholstery combinations, added improvements and refinements, the company has prepared to meet the growing demand for individualized coach work and has embarked on a manufacturing program, the extent of which never before has been attempted by any automobile manufacturer.

TRADING FILM STARS MUTUALLY HELPFUL

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Large motion picture companies are interchanging players, thus indicating a measure of cooperative efforts to obtain the best casts for individual pictures.

Within a short time, for instance, Paramount has "borrowed" Ronald Colman, Jack Mulhall, Aileen Pringle and Renee Adoree. To offset this "borrowing," the company loaned Mary Brian, Lya de Putti, Charles Rogers, Noah Beery, Jack Luden and Betty Bronson to others.

Picture companies, casting a film, will discover that the player best suited to play a certain role is at present working. Rather than fill the role with another player not quite fitted to the part, they go to another company and "borrow" a player. The courtesy is returned when the situation is reversed.

Sometimes this borrowing and loaning has an additional advantage. A player under contract at a high figure might not be working. Loaning him at such a time saves the company considerable money.

AUTO, UPON POUND BASIS, RANKS WITH CHEAPER MACHINERY

Ford Is No Dearer Than Wheelbarrow and Rolls-Royce Than Typewriter.

BENEFIT EFFECTED BY PRICE REDUCTION

More Than Half of Cars Made in U. S. Are Selling Under 30 Cents a Pound.

So great have been the price reductions on motor cars in recent years that on a pound basis automobiles today rank with the cheapest form of machinery.

More than half the cars made in this country sell for less than 30 cents a pound. Light six-cylinder cars, although designed to meet artistic as well as utilitarian requirements, rank with heavy shop machinery on a pound basis. A random selection of twelve of the latter averages 38.7 cents a pound, against 38.5 cents for the ten lowest-priced six-cylinder sedans.

$2.91 for Costliest.

Motor cars range in price from 21.9 cents a pound for a Ford roadster to $2.91 a pound for a Rolls-Royce seven-passenger sedan. The former lists at $360 and weighs 1,645 pounds, while the latter lists at $15,285 and weighs 5,250 pounds. Generally speaking the bigger the car, the more it costs, not only as a whole, but on a pound basis. Four-cylinder cars average close to 30 cents a pound; six-cylinder cars around 48 cents, and eight-cylinder cars are usually more than $1 a pound.

The Wall Street Journal two years ago published a comparison of motor car prices with other machinery on a pound basis. Since then there has been a marked reduction in the price per pound of closed cars, while open cars show only a comparatively small drop.

Five four-cylinder closed cars in 1924 averaged 37.9 cents a pound; the same makes in 1926 average 32.9 cents. Open cars in the same lines remained practically the same, with an average of 28.5 cents for 1924, against 28.3 cents for this year.

The ten lowest price light six sedans in 1924 listed at 49.5 cents a pound, against 38.5 cents for the ten lowest price sixes today. Touring cars of corresponding makes dropped only 1 cent a pound, from an average of 40.7 cents in 1924 to 39.7 this year. The closed cars in this group now average slightly over a cent a pound less than the open cars; in 1924 closed cars averaged nearly 9 cents a pound more than the open cars. The Ford line two years ago averaged 28.3 cents a pound, against a present average of 24.5 cents.

The present Ford roadster at 21.9 cents a pound sells for about the same price per pound as a high-grade wheel barrow. The Overland touring car costs less per pound than a clothes wringer. An Essex coach might be exchanged, pound for pound, with cream separators. A Pontiac coach is worth its weight in lawn mowers.

Cheap as Electric Fan.

On a pound basis the price of the Studebaker "President" compares with an electric fan; a Packard six sedan, with a bicycle; a Chrysler "80" sedan, with a carpet sweeper; a Cadillac seven-passenger touring, with a sewing machine; a Lincoln seven-passenger sedan with a piano, and a Rolls-Royce seven-passenger sedan with a typewriter.

Following is a representative list of cars with the price equivalent of each on a pound basis:

Ford roadster	$0.219	Wheelbarrow
Ford Tudor sedan	.252	Pass. locomotive
Overland touring	.325	Clothes wringer
Essex coach	.318	Cream separator
Buick sedan (big six)	.475	Lathe
Studebaker, "President"	.554	Electric fan
Packard six sedan	.678	Bicycle
Chrysler "80" sedan	.733	Carpet sweeper
Cadillac 7-pass. touring	.83	Sewing machine
Lincoln 7-pass. sedan	1.09	Piano
Rolls-Royce 7-pass. sedan	2.91	Typewriter

E. L. CORD HEADS NEW DUESENBERG COMPANY

Plant to Specialize in Custom-Built Cars to Suit the Individual Buyer.

SEPARATED FROM AUBURN

The entire plant, equipment and assets of the Deusenberg Motors Co. of Indianapolis, Ind., has been purchased by a new company headed by E. L. Cord, president of Auburn Automobile Co. The new company is to be known as Duesenberg, Inc., and will continue to manufacture the Duesenberg car on a large program.

Mr. Cord announces that Duesenberg, Inc., is an entirely separate company, having no connection whatsoever with Auburn, and that there will be no intercompany relationship.

Fred S. Duesenberg, internationally-famous automobile engineer, will continue in the organization as vice president, in charge of engineering and experimental laboratory.

The purchase of the Duesenberg factory at Indianapolis gave rise to many rumors, causing Mr. Cord to explain that Duesenberg is entirely independent and separate from Auburn. He also gave his reasons for the purchase of Duesenberg, by saying:

"Ever since I have been in the automobile business, like every other member of this industry who has studied it, I realized that there is one outstanding engineering genius and that is Fred S. Duesenberg. The long list of his inventions and mechanical creations and perfections speaks for itself. The undisputed dominance that his creations have maintained on the race tracks of both continents is a matter of record. The purchase of the Duesenberg factory is the culmination of my plans to be able to offer the world an automobile of undisputed rank. Duesenberg cars will be strictly custom built, the owners selecting their own body styles, their own body makers and selecting their own colors. The price will probably be $18,000, no matter what model, from racer to limousine. We will give the buyer 120-mile-an-hour speed if desired. Naturally the production of this type of automobile, which carries a warranty of fifteen years, will be limited and we are now taking orders for delivery within six months."

Mr. Cord further stated that he had no other announcements to make at the present time as to changes in the personnel of the organization, the present organization will continue to function, but will be increased.

Gold Mine Covered When Tide Is High

Bandon, Oreg., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—This town, beside the Pacific ocean, its business district built on piling over the tide flats, has become the scene of a novel gold quest.

Indications of gold quartz were found recently while drilling for piling. Search was immediately started for gold in commercial quantities next to the First National Bank. The work has to be done when the tide is out, as the "mine" is covered with water at high tide.

The Kansas insurance laws, most of which have been in the statute books since 1871, have been rewritten into a new code for the legislature.

COLD WEATHER BLAMED FOR WEAR ON MOTORS

Pines Automatic Winter Front Tests Show Excessive Use of Choke Brings Trouble.

RADIATOR CONTROL VITAL

The belief of many motorists that the major wear on automobile engines is caused in extreme hot or cold weather has been proven wrong through an extensive investigation recently made by several eminent automotive engineers. Drivers are aware of the danger to motors running "hot" and take the necessary precautions of having plenty of water in the radiator during the hot summer months. And in winter months the engine is run for several minutes in the garage before starting out, to get the engine to run smoothly.

This investigation showed that cold weather causes excessive wear and that considerable damage is done even in the milder weather of September and October in the fall and of April and May in the spring, when motorists believe that no protection is needed. Wear that comes too soon after the auto is purchased and results in frequent visits to the service station and trading in of the machine long before adequate mileage is obtained.

It is the rush of cool air into the engine that necessitates overuse of the "choke" that is the cause of 50 to 75 per cent of all motor troubles, according to tests made by engineers of the Pines Automatic Winterfront Co. Excess use of the "choke" floods gasoline into the cylinders and washes away the oil film of protection and causes metal to rub against metal. Excessive crankcase dilution, corrosion and rapid cylinder wear result.

The cure for this trouble is automatic control of the air that comes through the radiator which can be obtained with the Automatic Winterfront. This problem is so important that the Automatic Winterfront has been included as standard equipmen on the Pierce Arrow, Packard "8," Willys-Knight Big "6," Wills St. Claire and Peerless "8" and De Luxe "6." There are only four months in the year when the engine should not be equipped with this device if proper care is taken of the engine. And it can be detached for this period.

When the air control is not automatic as with one standard car manufacturer, tests show that drivers who use the air control properly have many times the satisfaction that drivers do who neglect the control in cool weather. With the automatic feature, the driver is assured perfect control and thus longer wear and less trouble with his engine.

$47,500 Blue Diamond In Engagement Ring

(By the Associated Press.)

The new fall style in engagement rings, set by an enterprising London jeweler, though highly attractive, is not likely to prove popular. It is a diamond solitaire valued at about $47,500. Set in platinum, the slate-blue stone lies on a white satin cushion in an open window and flashes sparks of orange and crimson and jade at the passersby. It is said to be one of the only four blue diamonds in existence.

Many Rare Books Stolen.

Thefts of rare books have occured at such an alarming rate in Paris that police are keeping an international eye on old books shops and auction rooms.

Unseen Sources of Long Life

The basic sources of automobile value are not always apparent to the eye.

A motor car, like a house, may LOOK a great deal more substantial than it really is.

Because of this difficulty, more and more thousands are turning to Dodge Brothers product for insurance against disappointment.

The years have proved, and each year proves anew, that Dodge Brothers are as deeply concerned with the UNSEEN goodness of their motor car as with the seen.

The mileage it will deliver, the safety it will provide, the expense and trouble it will save the owner over a period of years, are quite as important to Dodge Brothers as the more obvious details of equipment and style.

MASONIC NOTES.

The closing service of the open-air meetings for this season at Temple Heights this afternoon at 4 o'clock under the direction of Rev. John C. Palmer, grand chaplain, will be Knight Templar Day.

Grand Comdr. Robert L. Middleton and the other officers of the grand commandery of the District of Columbia, Mark F. Finley, generalissimo; Cratz E. Dunkum, grand captain general; Charles F. Roberts, grand senior warden; Joseph H. Milans, grand junior warden; George L. Lohrer, grand treasurer; J. Claude Keiper, grand recorder; Eugene E. Thompson, grand standard bearer; L. Whiting Estes, grand sword bearer; William H. Harrison, grand warder; Roland M. Brown, grand captain of the guard; Edward P. Hazelton, grand inspector general; Arthur M. Poynton, grand assistant inspector general; Franz A. Birgfeld, grand instructor general together with the officers and sir knights of the six commanderies of the city, with their families, will be the special guests.

The address will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. J. Harvey Dunham, pastor of Western Presbyterian church. The music will be under the direction of J. Walter Humphrey, K. C. C. H., with Past Master Harry G. Kimball, K. C. C. H., as accompanist. All members of the Masonic fraternity and of the Order of the Eastern Star, with their families, as well as the public, will be welcome.

This is the fifth season of these open-air services and the attendance this summer is said to have been most gratifying, each season having indicated a growing interest in them.

National lodge, No. 12, announces the F. C. degree for Tuesday evening, with Senior Deacon Henry A. Kulze presiding.

Washington Centennial lodge, No. 14, will have the E. A. degree following its grand visitation Wednesday evening.

William C. Heider, master of Congress lodge, No. 37, announces that the Circle club, composed of Masons in the employ of the District, of which the master is a member, will attend the communication of the lodge Thursday evening in a body. There will be entertainment and refreshments.

St. John's lodge, No. 11, will have the E. A. degree Friday evening, with Junior Warden Clarence A. Chism heading the official line.

Junior Steward R. Earl Slye will preside during the conferring of the F. C. degree in Hope lodge, No. 20, Friday evening.

The Fellow Craft club, of Federal lodge, No. 1, will give its annual Hallowe'en dance at Meridian Mansions Saturday evening, October 30. There will be costume prizes and refreshments will be served. Music will be furnished by a well-known orchestra.

Washington council, No. 1, Royal and Select Masters, will confer the degrees of royal and select master at its stated assembly tomorrow evening.

Grand Master Sydney R. Jacobs, accompanied by the other officers of the grand lodge, will visit Benjamin B. French lodge, No. 15, tomorrow evening. A special program has been arranged for the occasion, and refreshments will be served.

ROYAL ARCH MASONS.

At the convocation of Mount Horeb chapter on Tuesday evening the degree of mark master was conferred, Raymond P. Boesch, scribe of the chapter, presiding. Among the visitors were William C. Daniel, past high priest of Capital chapter; George Turner, king of Mount Pleasant chapter, and Earle Standlee, of Bullson chapter, of San Antonio, Tex. Past high priests were Fielder I. Hunter, Richard M. Towson and Albert C. Shafer.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

The regular monthly meeting of Columbia commandery drill corps will be held Friday evening. Secretary F. A. Birgfeld will read the names of the members who have won honor badges and bars, and Commander A. N. Ross will make the awards. Adjutant Charles D. Shackelford and Capt. Whiting will speak. The annual competitive drill was won last week by Columbia commandery drill corps, and a celebration was held at the New Ebbitt immediately following the drill. The ladies' auxiliary will also meet Friday evening, Mrs. Sue Ross presiding.

THE SHRINE.

Acca temple of Richmond, Va., will stage a ceremonial at Leesburg next Friday evening. Carter N. Williams, jr., potentate of Acca temple, has extended an invitation to the potentate of Almas temple, Charles D. Shackelford, to be present with a delegation of the local nobility. In accepting the invitation, the potentate stated he would make the trip accompanied by the following members of his divan: Roland S. Robbins, chief rabban; Amos A. Fries, assistant rabban; George R. McGinty, high priest and prophet; Edwin C. Dutton, oriental guide; Frank E. Ghiselli, treasurer, and F. Lawrence Walker, recorder. The Almas Military band, William C. White, director, and the Arab patrol, George H. Whiting, adjutant major, and William F. Holmes, captain, will accompany the divan. In addition a number of unattached Shriners will join the party. Buses have been provided for the trip, and will leave Shrine headquarters, 1311 K street northwest, at 12 o'clock. Since the Leesburg ceremonial will be held in the afternoon, the return trip will be timed so that every one may reach home at a seasonable hour.

James C. Hoyle, chairman of the entertainment committee, says that the program for "stag night" on Thursday, October 28, is practically complete. The outstanding event of the evening will be the first official presentation to Almas temple of Imperial Potentate David W. Crossland. The divertissements of the evening are said to be of high order, some of which are numbers of pleasant novelty. Entertainment and visitation will be in the Washington auditorium.

Almas temple's last ceremonial of the year will be held in the Washington auditorium on Monday, November 22. A cast of past potentates, headed by Harry Standford, will present the ritualistic portion of the degree. The business session in connection with this ceremonial will be held on Saturday evening, November 20, at Shrine headquarters, 1311 K street northwest, at 8 o'clock.

KALLIPOLIS GROTTO.

During the past week Monarch L. Whiting Estes has been in conference with the officers of Yedz grotto of Baltimore regarding the joint grand monarch's ceremonial of Kallipolis and Yedz grottoes to be held on November 16, at which time Grand Monarch Frederick P. Walther, of Cleveland, Ohio, will pay the two grottoes an official visit. The ceremonial, which will be in short form, will be held at the Masonic temple auditorium and will be followed by an elaborate program of entertaining features. The membership has been admonished by Monarch Estes to send in as early as possible the petitions of candidates in order that they may be included in the class now forming.

A good fellowship night will be held at grotto headquarters tomorrow evening, to which all members and their master Mason friends are invited. Monarch Estes is especially desirous of having the candidates so far signed up present at this meeting.

The next grotto dance will be held at the New Willard hotel on October 30.

ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR.

Federal chapter, No. 38, will have charge of the religious services at the Masonic and Eastern Star home this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Charles M. Kreidler, pastor of the Mount Rainier Christian church, will deliver the sermon. Automobiles will be at Fourteenth and Rittenhouse streets at 2:30 o'clock to convey those wishing to attend the services at the home. As this is the first time this chapter has held services at the home a large attendance of the membership is expected. Activities announced by Federal chapter include a chicken dinner at the Northeast Masonic temple next Wednesday from 5 to 7 o'clock and a rummage sale next Saturday. The proceeds from the sale will be used toward the purchase of a United States flag for the chapter.

The country store committee of Lebanon chapter will give a card party tomorrow evening to which the public is invited. The business meeting of Lebanon chapter last Tuesday evening was followed by a social period, during which a unique program which included an art contest, was presented.

Areme chapter, No. 10, next Wednesday will receive its annual visitation from the officers of the grand chapter. Past Matron Helen Brashears is chairman of the evening, assisted by Past Grand Matron Bena Barnhart and Past Matron Grace Barr.

Joseph H. Milans lodge chapter, No. 41, will meet Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Northeast Masonic temple. The chapter will give a card party tomorrow afternoon at Hecht's auditorium.

The auxiliary home board of Washington Centennial chapter, No. 26, will meet Wednesday evening at the residence of Beulah Sehorn, 714 Allison street northwest, and on the same evening a meeting of the ways and means committee will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Cooksey, 3606 Sixteenth street northwest. Friday evening the endowment committee will meet at the home of Jennie C. Leese, 3463 Fourteenth street northwest.

Warren G. Harding chapter, No. 31, will have a theater party at Keith's next Wednesday evening. Mr. Waldman is chairman of the committee in charge. Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Johnson will be hostesses at a card party to be held at the home of Mrs. Johnson, 831 Rittenhouse street northwest on October 25. The auxiliary home board will hold its October meeting at the residence of Mrs. Keely, 612 Rock Creek Church road.

Brightwood chapter, following its business meeting Thursday evening, will be entertained in the auditorium by the members of the home board with a sketch entitled "How the Story Grew." Dancing will follow the sketch.

Hope chapter, No. 30, will hold a card party at the Hecht auditorium Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Naomi chapter, No. 3, was entertained by the following at its last meeting: Miss Rachel Niedomanski, Miss Dorothy Sawyer, Miss Wirt, Robert Miller, Miss Elinor Mumford and Miss Elaine McDaniels. Loretto Robinson was chairman of the entertainment committee and refreshments were served by the past matron of the chapter, headed by Ella B. Bladen. At the next meeting of the chapter the auxiliary home board will give the playlet, "Grandfather's Clock," under the direction of Associate Matron Florence A. Warner. Among those present at the meeting last Wednesday evening were Past Grand Matrons Helen B. Strait and Fannie Taylor and Past Grand Patron James W. Mowbray, all members of the chapter.

Unity chapter, No. 22, held its annual grand visitation Friday evening, October 8. Among the distinguished guests were Right Worthy Grand Treasurer Lamond, Past Grand Matrons Strait, Campbell and Fletcher and Past Grand Patrons Mobray and Betts. Matrons and patrons of 1926 were also guests. Grand Matron Milans was presented with a silver fruit dish by Past Matron Williamson, and Grand Patron Plitt was presented with silver butter spreaders by Past Matron Kennerly. Vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Susie Burns, of Martha chapter, accompanied by Mrs. Ida Johnson, of Unity chapter; Gilbert C. Clark, accompanied by Miss Wilber, and Miss Barbara Case, accompanied by Miss Fannie Amftrut Roberts. Musical recitations were rendered by Miss Hattie Noell. The auxiliary home board will meet at the residence of the chairman, Mrs. Anna Reeves, 117 Seventh street northeast Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The next meeting of the chapter will be a social evening. The entertainment will be in charge of the past patrons.

Brookland chapter Wednesday evening was visited by Grand Matron Gertrude Milans and Grand Patron George Plitt, accompanied by the line officers, Associate Grand Matrons Lena Stephenson, Associate Grand Patron J. Ernest Dulin, Associate Grand Conductress Pearl Watt Gibb and Matron Miss Effie T. Brodnax, acting, and the other officers of the grand chapter. The distinguished guests present were Past Grand Matrons Flora Campbell and Minerva Crawford and Past Grand Patrons William G. Betts and the matrons and patrons of 1926. The matron, Mrs. Virginia Carlton, extended a welcome to the grand officers. An allegory was given entitled "The Land of Heart's Desire," the lines written by the organist, Mrs. Gwynette Willis, and read by Mrs. Agnes Stallings, and the characters portrayed by the candidates of 1926, headed by John Williams, jr., who also presented the gifts from the chapter to the grand matron and grand patron. The incidental music was sung by Mrs. Meeds, accompanied by Past Patron Troy A. Nubson on the violin and Mrs. Willis at the piano. The decorations of the room represented the Orient.

Martha chapter's rummage sale will be held October 25, 26 and 27, at 2014 Georgia avenue northwest, with Mrs. A. L. McCathran, chairman of the committee, in charge. The Past Matrons and Patrons association will hold its regular meeting Saturday, October 30. The entertainment for the first meeting of the chapter in November will be in charge of Past Patron Richard E. Titlow and Carleton R. Fry.

Esther chapter will confer the degrees at its meeting Thursday evening for the last time during the present chapter year. This is also the final meeting for payment of dues to avoid delinquency. Endowment night will be celebrated and a short program will be given. Past Patron John L. McGrew will be in charge of these features. The auxiliary home board, Past Matron Katherine S. Merritt, chairman, met last Friday at the residence of Associate Matron Ada E. Phillips. The chapter choir will have its regular rehearsal Tuesday at the residence of Past Matron Theodora Cunningham, 214 Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md., with Matron May P. Gibbon assisting as hostess.

LaFayette Lodge chapter, No. 37, held its annual grand visitation Saturday evening, October 9. Among the distinguished guests were Grand Matron Gertrude B. Milans, Grand Patron George Plitt, Associate Grand Matron Lena Stephenson, Associate Grand Patron James E. Dulin, Grand Conductress Sallye Bogley, Associate Grand Conductress Pearl Watt Gibb, Grand Lecturer Mary E. Teachun and the other officers of the grand chapter. The past grands present were Matrons Strait, Chauncy and Campbell; Patrons Betts and Dunkun. The grand matron's address was inspiring. It was followed by encouraging thoughts from the other grand matrons and grand patrons present. The program was as follows: Piano solo, by Mrs. Flora Weber, of Bethlehem chapter; readings, Miss Blanche Entertine, of La Fayette chapter; remarks and presentation of gifts to the grand matron and grand patron; Misses Ruth Bates and Brenda Cleare, vocal selections; quartet of Bethlehem chapter, composed of Mrs. Weber, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Benhani and Mrs. Seltzer. The meeting next Saturday evening will be "Honorary Members' Night." Mrs. Mary Ella Hambly is in charge of a special program consisting of speeches, music and readings. The program will be given in open meeting and all members of the order and their friends are invited. Mrs. Helen B. Hall, chairman of the home board committee, is holding a card party at the home of Patron Koch, 202 Frazier avenue, Aurora Hills, Va., tomorrow.

St. Johns lodge chapter, No. 18, will meet tomorrow evening, the meeting to be known as "Donation Night," for the Masonic and Eastern Star Home.

Tuesday the grand matron, Mrs. Gertrude B. Milans; the grand patron, George Plitt, and the other officers of the grand chapter paid Bethlehem chapter its annual grand visitation. Among the guests of honor were Past Matrons Mrs. Kimmell and Mrs. Strait, and Past Patron William Betts. A large number of matrons and patrons of 1926 were also present. Dr. Stephenson, past patron, served in the east, the patron, Gustave E. Bittner, having been called out of town on business. A program was arranged by Mrs. Lillie Hall as follows: Vocal solos, by Mrs. Marie Deal; piano solos, by Mrs. Elsie Weaver; sketch entitled "Miss Deborah's Pocketbook," by Mrs. Margaret Gorsuch and the 1926 star points, Miss Edna Ford, Miss Elizabeth Van Fossen, Miss V. Marseglia, Mrs. Eugenia Corning and Mrs. Maude Gingell. Mrs. Hall and those taking part in the sketch then greeted the grand matron, grand patron and associate grand matron in song, presenting gifts to the grand matron and grand patron, and also flowers to the grand matron. The verses were written by Mrs. Lillie Hall. The matron, Miss Adele Marseglia, urges the members and friends to attend a chicken dinner on Thursday, and a bazaar on Thursday and Friday. Mrs. Carrie Batson, chairman of the dormitory committee, will hold a card party at the home of Mrs. Martha Stoops, 610 Eighth street northeast, on October 25 at 8 p. m.

Cathedral chapter, No. 14, is preparing for one of the biggest events of the year. This will be staged at it's next meeting and will be known as "Men's Night." The men of the chapter are rehearsing and are said to be ready to present a minstrel show second to none. The entire evening on this occasion will be turned over to the men and no lady will be allowed to participate in any way not even to handling or preparing refreshments, it is stated.

Mizpah chapter, No. 8, will hold a theater party at Keith's tomorrow evening. Tuesday, the regular meeting will be held, when the degrees will be conferred by the advanced line, Miss Mildred Connick, acting matron; Mrs. Mildred King, acting associate matron, and Mrs. Louise Kent, acting conductress. All associate matrons are invited to be present. There will be a zero hour, and refreshments will be served following the meeting. A masquerade dance will be held at the hall on Saturday, October 30.

The degrees were conferred at the last meeting of Acacia chapter upon two candidates, with Past Matron Helwig in the east; Past Matron May A. Watts in the west; Ethel E. Taylor in the south and Martha Moorhead in the north. The annual luncheon and theater party of the auxiliary home board will be held on November 9. The board held its last meeting at the residence of its chairman, Elizabeth Davis. Acacia chapter wil have its grand visitation on November 2.

Good Will chapter, No. 36, held its annual grand visitation at its last meeting. The distinguished guests included the matrons and patrons of 1926. At the meeting of the chapter next Friday evening the line will be advanced. Donation night will also be observed at that meeting.

Ladies' Oriental Shrine.

Su Zu court, No. 21, has recently added several new names to its roster. At the last meeting of the patrol, headed by its captain, Mrs. Henry, entertained with a unique Hallowe'en party. It is expected that the next meeting of the court wil be held in its new quarters. There wil be a new home rally and a bingo party on that occasion.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

At a meeting of the ways and means committee held last evening, the question of a fair and other matters looking to the cancellation on the debt of the temple, was considered and a committee was appointed to report on the advisability for these several schemes.

NATIONAL UNION

The executive board met Wednesday evening and perfected plans for the dance and entertainment to be given at the New Willard hotel on November 20. Chairman Arthur A. Wright presided and John E. Rhodes acted as secretary.

Victory council, at a special meeting Tuesday evening, completed arrangements for its annual entertainment, turkey distribution and country store to be held November 5 at the Pythian temple. The special committee having the affair in charge is as follows: Crawford Bennie, chairman; J. Harry Jones, William T. Bell, James A. Williams, Roland Bell, Clarence Ferguson and W. H. Barnholt.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

A large attendance witnessed the installation of officers of Potomac council by District Deputies William G. Feely and James T. Ryan. The officers are: Michael D. Schaefer, grand knight; William Foley, deputy grand knight; Joseph Fitzgerald, recorder; John Buckley, treasurer; Joseph Fitzpatrick, chancellor; J. J. McCarthy, inside guard; Patrick Gilhooley and Louis Nesline, outside guards; F. A. Heffernan, advocate, and Walter I. Plant, financial secretary. State Deputy Charles W. Darr outlined the proposed activities of the order for the ensuing year.

Announcement was made by Edward L. Tucker, chairman of the membership committee, that on the next meeting night, October 25, the council would exemplify the first degree. A great number of applications were received at the meeting last Monday evening and it is expected that there will be an unusually large class for this degree.

ODD FELLOWS

Grand Master Henry W. Tippett, accompanied by his official family, will pay his annual visit to Mount Pleasant lodge, No. 29, which meets at Fourteenth and Kenyon streets northwest Tuesday evening. Mount Pleasant lodge is said to have made a splendid record this year. Its membership includes Past Grand Master Bert V. Wolfe and many other prominent men of this city. Mount Pleasant lodge extends an invitation to all members of the order to be present Tuesday evening.

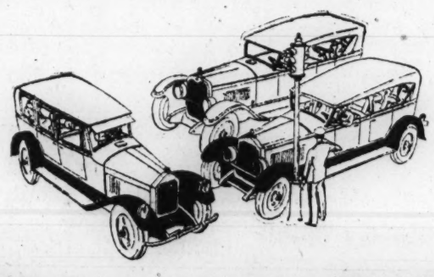

The official visitation of Excelsior lodge, No. 17, took place Tuesday evening in the presence of a large attendance which included members of that and other lodges. Addresses were made by Grand Master Tippett, Grand Representative W. W. Millan, Deputy Grand Master and Commandant Lemuel H. Windsor, Grand Representative John H. Wood, Grand Senior Warden of the Grand Encampment James W. Lyons, Noble Grand Morris L. Dreeben, Vice Grand Harry S. Marine, Past Grand Abraham Pavis.

Owing to pressure of business Grand Herald Calvin B. Kincaid, of the grand lodge, has tendered his resignation as grand herald and the grand master has appointed Past Grand A. Yates Dowell, of Beacon lodge, No. 15, to serve as grand herald for the remainder of the year.

are correcting this mistaken idea that is costing car owners millions

Wrong—You doubtless, like thousands of others, believe that it is not necessary to protect a motor from cold except in freezing weather. This erroneous belief is costing motor car owners millions annually. It is the cause, automotive authorities agree, of 50 to 75% of all premature motor wear. To wait until zero is costly delay. Damage to your motor begins at 60°. At freezing the damage is done.

At 60° Fahrenheit cold starts to damage your motor.

Right—At 60° Fahrenheit, your motor needs Winterfront protection. That's when cold starts its work of destruction. Makers of many fine cars provide Winterfront radiator protection the year 'round, guarding the motor against the damage wrought by cold.

That first "choke" morning is when damage starts—when you must drive blocks with the "choke" out. That's when your motor needs Winterfront protection.

What the Winterfront is and what it does
The Pines Automatic Winterfront is a thermostat controlled shutter that fits snugly over the radiator. Temperature changes are transmitted through the thermostat to the automatic shutters. When more heat is required the shutters close themselves. When less heat is required they automatically open to the exact angle desired. There is nothing to work loose or get out of order—nothing to remember. You put it on and forget it. Pines Winterfront will improve the appearance of any car, and outlast the car itself.

With your car Winterfront equipped—the "warming-up" period is cut to seconds. You form the habit of using the "choke" as it should be used—for starting only. Thus you eliminate the biggest cause of excessive crankcase dilution, high gas consumption, corrosion, fouled spark plugs and rapid cylinder wear.

Equip now
Winterfront is installed in 10 minutes
Note then the surprising increase in gasoline economy—the increased warmth inside your car—the summer-time smoothness and flexibility in your motor. Remember—there is but one Winterfront. It is the only automatic radiator shutter on the market.

Models for all cars priced $22.50 to $30.00. Special models for Ford, Chevrolet and Dodge priced $15.00, $17.50, $20.00

NEWS OF THE FRATERNAL ORGANIZATIONS

pointment of Past Grand A. Yates Dowell as the grand herald and installed him in that office. Grand Sire E. W. Bradford and the grand lodge officers delivered addresses.

The grand master has requested Federal City lodge, No. 20, to confer the second degree on the occasion of the official visitation Friday evening. The degree will be held in the auditorium of the temple. Federal City lodge invites all lodges to bring all candidates for the second degree to the visitation, when the degree will be conferred upon them all.

The grand master has issued a call for the appointment of four representatives of each subordinate lodge to meet with him in the I. O. O. F. temple on Monday evening, October 25, at 8 o'clock.

Fred D. Stuart encampment, No. 7, will hold its regular meeting tomorrow evening, at which time the golden rule degree will be conferred upon a class of candidates. A large attendance is expected, as the degree will be conferred by a specially selected degree staff, under the direction of Past Grand Master and Past Chief Patriarch James E. Chamberlain. All patriarchs are invited to be present.

Grand Chaplain John I. Dent announces that the order in this jurisdiction will have divine services at Lincoln Road Methodist church, Lincoln road and U street northeast, on Sunday, November 7. The Rev. Dr. Corcoran will preach a special sermon for the occasion.

Members are advised that a number of souvenir badges commemorating the recent tristate welcome celebration are in the office of the grand secretary and can be had upon application. Souvenir programs are also to be had upon request, it is stated.

THE REBEKAHS.

The chairman of the ways and means committee of the Rebekah assembly, Mrs. Margaret Royston, announces a masquerade dance and bazaar, to be held Saturday evening, October 30, in the auditorium of the I. O. O. F. temple, 419 Seventh street northwest. The bazaar will include a country store.

The celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Rebekah degree was held in the I. O. O. F. temple recently. Dr. Homer J. Councilor was the speaker of the evening, and Columbia quartet furnished vocal music.

The president of the Rebekah assembly, Mrs. Linnie A. Keiser, and her corps of officers, accompanied by the officers of the grand lodge, made the first official visit of the year to Miriam lodge, No. 6. The lodge presented the president a handbag.

President Keiser will visit officially Schuyler Colfax lodge on the evening of October 26.

Divine services will be held under the auspices of the Rebekah assembly at the Epworth M. E. church, Thirteenth and East Capitol streets, this evening. All members of the order and their friends are invited to attend.

A special committee of Dorcas lodge, No. 4, will hold a rummage sale in November, the date and place to be announced later. A large attendance of the members is requested at the next meeting of the lodge.

Members of the Rebekah degree interested in the formation of either a bowling team or a drum corps are asked to get in touch with Past Grand Master Wilfred E. Lawson, or Mrs. Linnie A. Keiser, the president of the Rebekah assembly.

DAUGHTERS OF ISABELLA

During a recent visit to Washington, Mrs. Mary E. Booth, national regent of the order, was the guest of honor at a reception given by the members of circle, No. 178, at the City club. At the October business meeting of the local circle last Monday evening the annual election of officers was held. Mrs. James G. Haskell was elected regent for the coming year; Mrs. F. C. Carpenter, vice regent; Miss Laura Luff, monitor; Mrs. Mae Buckley, custodian; Miss Jane Coleman, chancellor; Miss Catherine Sullivan, financial secretary; Miss Rose Ann French, recording secretary; Mrs. William A. Stewart, treasurer; Miss Virginia Offutt, inner guard; Mrs. Gerald Walsh, organist, and Miss Elizabeth Dolan, trustee. The retiring regent, Miss Catherine Moriarty, will serve as past regent. The State regent, Mrs. H. H. Bicksler, announced that a joint installation of officers with St. Charles circle, Clarendon, Va., and Santa Maria circle, Indian Head, Md., would be held the middle of November. Mrs. George A. Howe was appointed chairman of arrangements for the annual banquet of the circle, which will be held next month.

State Councilor Beck is appealing to the subordinate councils of the District of Columbia to support him and the national council in a drive for new members that is being sponsored by the national council. This drive is to run to December 31 and the national council has offered several prizes to both the council and the State organization that turns in the greatest number of application of new members.

J. Morgan Read council, No. 1, held its weekly session at Star hall, Mt. Rainier, Md., Friday evening, with Vice Councilor E. Fabritz presiding. Charles Mangum, of Liberty Bell council, No. 55, was a visitor. C. F. Muller and W. F. Spurlin spoke on the entertainment to be held in Star hall Friday. Upon motion of W. P. Earnest, it was voted to present a flag to the Mt. Rainier public school.

Capital council, No. 25, was called to order by Councilor L. C. W. Pote Monday evening in the Northeast Masonic temple. Cleveland Kennicut, chairman of the committee preparing for the roll call on October 25, reported that all plans had been completed.

Reno council, No. 45, at its meeting on Monday evening, was presided over by Vice Councilor R. H. Walker. William P. Stout announced that the good of the order committee had arranged a short program for tomorrow evening, in addition to the initiation that was to be put on for several members of John L. Burnet council, No. 4.

Andrew Jackson council, No. 6, met Monday evening in Pythian temple with Councilor C. T. Smith presiding. One candidate was elected to membership. Councilor Smith appointed a committee consisting of five members to revise the by-laws of the council.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD

CALENDAR.

Wednesday—Oak and Hickory camps.
Thursday—Mount Vernon camp.
Friday—Elm and Old Glory camps.

Ladies of the Woodmen Circle will give a party Friday evening at the church hall, Eighth and C streets northeast. Woodmen and their wives are invited to enjoy the hospitality of the groves. Mrs. Robert English has arranged a musical program for the occasion.

Elm camp was host last week to a large gathering of sovereigns following an initiation ceremony staged by the Boosters' team. A banquet was set in the dining hall and a capacity crowd was seated. Past Consul Comdr. Pruden addressed the new members. Consul Comdr. Peck thanked the degree team and Company B for their service. Brief remarks were made by representatives of several camps. Sovereigns Wolfley, Ensor and Smith were in charge of the culinary department.

President Stott of the temple association told the board of directors at a special meeting during the week of the flourishing condition of affairs of the corporation. Plans for some improvements in the property were outlined.

The ways and means committee meets each Monday evening at the temple and preparations have been perfected for the grand Halloween ball at the new Willard hotel. A large crowd has been prepared for and valuable prizes procured for presentation to the persons wearing the most striking costumes. A full orchestra will play for the dancing.

Hickory camp holds its business meetings on the first Wednesday of each month and invites visitors from the other camps. Social sessions are held on the third Wednesday.

Old Glory camp will hold an important convention Friday evening. The entertainment committee will report new plans for social attractions.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA

Kenmore council, No. 23, will hold a prize Halloween mask ball on October 3 at the Gavel club, 719 Thirteenth street northwest.

Triumph council, No. 8, met Tuesday evening with Councilor Alice Brumbaugh presiding. A donation was made for the relief of members of the organization in distress in Florida. All members are requested to be present Tuesday evening, as there is a surprise in store for them, it is announced.

At Wednesday night's meeting of Martha Dandridge council, No. 1, the committee completed arrangements for the annual visitations of November 8 and the annual bazaar, to be held November 22.

The second State visitation of the series will be made by the State council, Mrs. Julia Delano, and her official staff of officers to Anacostia council, No. 14, Wednesday evening in the Masonic temple, Fourteenth and U streets southeast. All State officers are requested to assemble in the council anteroom at 8:45 o'clock.

Golden Rule council, No. 10, convened Friday evening with Councilor Lorena Arendes presiding. Two applications and one transfer card were received for membership. The councilor has appointed P. C. Mrs. Bertha Brown, Mrs. Eva McDaniel and Mrs. Okie R. Young to represent this council and to cooperate with the associate State councilor, Mrs. Pearl Wolfe, chairman on the State council good of the order committee. A card party is being arranged by the members of the good of the order committee for November 23 at Hecht tower with Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd as chairman. Officers' reports for the last quarter were accepted. At the close of a short business session Golden Rule council entertained Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd, S. V. C., and Deputy State Councilor Cora L. Thompson. A program of entertainment was announced by Past Councilor Ollie Montgomery, chairman, as follows: Piano solos, by Miss Mary Elizabeth Greene; presentation of a bridge lamp to State Vice Councilor Elizabeth Shepherd, by Past Councilor Effie Tancill; the "Singing Leathernecks," "Chick" Godfrey and "Phil" Osthaus, in songs and chatter; presentation of a handbag to the deputy, Mrs. Thompson, by Drill Master John M. Futrell. A gold pin was presented the State vice councilor, Mrs. Elizabeth Shepherd, as a personal gift from her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Amick; Mrs. Shepherd was also presented with two large clusters of dahlias and roses, the presentations being made through Past Councilor John M. Futrell and Mrs. Effie Tancill, members of the initiatory staff. Addresses were made by the State councilor, Mrs. Julia De Lano; Cavor O. Bohrer, of the State judiciary; State inside sentinel, Louise A. Grubbs; State outside sentinel, Margaret Seymour, and Associate Councilor Pearl Wolf.

Diegations from Barbara Frietchie, Eagle, Esther, Kenilworth, Unity, Loyalty, Goodwill, Triumph and Fidelity councils were present and participated in the jubilee celebration. Other specially invited guests present were State Conductor Carrie J. Meile, State Warden Julia Pennifield, Associate P. S. C. Alice I. Muller, Past State Councilor Ella Chappell, Sadie Levy, Floda M. Reagan, Freddie Beach and National Representative Margaret Hartman. Those of the State committee included Mrs. Roberta E. Nall, Edna H. Gaither and Debora Streitherger. Golden Rule council appropriated $10 for the Florida disaster. At the close of the program a repast was served in the banquet hall. Taylor, assisted by Mrs. Ada Brady, Mrs. Mary Freeland, Miss Mary Elizabeth Greene, Mrs. Minnietta Woodchek, Miss Frances Tancill, L. M. Towers and C. M. Harman.

Star-Spangled Banner council, No. 7, convened Thursday evening, with the councilor, Mrs. Bessie Rollins, presiding. The council was visited by State Councilor Julio Delano and J. Harry Howell, recording secretary of Fidelity council, No. 4, and Mrs. Carrie Meile, conductor of Unity council, No. 17, the latter presenting her credentials as deputy for his term. The councilor appointed as a committee from this council on the State good of order committee, Mrs. Georgietta Wells, Mrs. Bessie Rollins and Mrs. Margaret Halfpap. Mrs. Margaret Halfpap was appointed to represent this council in sending in news. George Abbott was elected inside sentinel, Mrs. Minnie B. Simpson outside sentinel, and Mrs. Maude Varnell, trustee to fill vacancies, the State councilor acting as judge, Mr. Howell as clerk, and Conductor Meile and Bertha Lucas as tellers in the election, after which the officers were installed by the deputy. Remarks were given by the visitors.

WOMAN'S BENEFIT ASSOCIATION

Brightwood review, No. 5, Mrs. Margaret Knighting, commander, is inviting all its members to a banquet to be held on October 25, in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Comforter, to celebrate the thirty-fourth birthday of the Woman's Benefit association. An interesting program is in preparation under the direction of Mrs. Lillie Lambeth. Mrs. M. S. McMahon, supervising deputy, will be the guest of honor.

Victory review, No. 12, Mrs. Ada Byrne, commander, will hold a rummage sale in November at Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue. All members and friends of the review are asked to save their rummage and notify Mrs. Ada Byrne when they wish it collected. It was voted to make the last meeting in each month a social affair with a prepared program and refreshments. Miss Beulah Phelps, Mrs. Minnie Dunn, Mrs. Bertha Speanburg, Mrs. Anna Lanford and Mrs. Fraley were appointed a committee to take charge of the first of these parties, which will be held on Monday, October 25.

The Officers club will be entertained by Liberty review tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. A program will be presented. Important business in connection with the visit to the city of Miss Bina M. West, supreme commander, on November 1, and the W. B. A. week at Philadelphia, will be considered. The meeting will be in Pythian temple at 8 o'clock.

Members and friends of Columbia review, No. 3, Mrs. Abbie Gates, commander, are invited to attend an apron social on Tuesday, October 26, at W. O. W. hall at 8 o'clock. A one-act play, directed by Mrs. Corinne Farrell, will be presented as one feature of the program, and refreshments will be served.

A meeting was held in the W. B. A. offices recently to perfect plans for the entertainment of the supreme commander, Miss Bina M. West, of Port Huron, Mich., who will stop in Washington Monday, November 1, en route to Philadelphia, to attend the W. B. A. celebration. It was decided to give a luncheon at 1 o'clock tomorrow, at which Miss West will be the guest of honor and the chief speaker. Members are privileged to bring their friends to the luncheon. In the evening a reception will be tendered Miss West, to which members and friends of the order are invited. The special feature of the reception will be a class presentation, with spectacular floor work by the Union Guard team, under Mrs. Hattie Palmer, captain. Tuesday will be given over to a conference of workers and members. Miss West will depart for Philadelphia on Tuesday afternoon. Washington members will accompany her, but the larger part of the delegation will follow on Wednesday.

Mrs. Lillian Hall, chairman of the feature committee for the Philadelphia celebration, presented her pageant, and her ideas were adopted with enthusiasm. All members who are going to Philadelphia are requested to get in touch with Mrs. Hall immediately. Lincoln 2884.

All members of the Woman's Benefit association are invited by national review to come to Odd Fellows hall on the second and fourth Thursdays in October to practice the new songs under the direction of Mrs. Hall. All members are also invited to attend any or all of the card parties that are held at the residence of Mrs. Lula Hammond every Thursday at 1:30 o'clock.

Washington review, No. 4, Mrs. A. M. Moyer, acting commander, will hold its regular meeting on Thursday evening. Members are urged to attend.

THE MACCABEES

National tent, No. 1, was host recently to the Maccabees of Washington. The degree was exemplified in a creditable manner and the guests included Superman Chaplain J. E. Turner, who delivered an address. A social hour and refreshments followed the business meeting.

Martha Washington hive, No. 14, is planning a large initiation for its meeting Friday evening. Several supreme officers will be present. The hive announces a Halloween dance for October 29, at which prizes for the best costumes will be given.

Japan Held Safe From Quake.

An earthquake such as that of 1923, in which more than 100,000 persons lost their lives, is not likely to come again to Japan for many years, said Dr. Komei Imamura, seismological expert and professor of the Tokyo Imperial university.

New 132,000-Volt Cable.

A new type of transmission cable to carry 132,000 volts is made of many copper wires wound around a hollow core filled with oil.

Boy Scout Notes

An opportunity for real service now is available to Washington Boy Scouts in the development of safety patrols for the schools. The details are not complete, but in line with the scout motto, "Be Prepared," all scouts should review the street safety code on pages 357 and 358 of the new handbook and then look up and put into practice the requirements for the safety first merit badge.

At a recent meeting of the executive board, Dr. Paul Bartsch was elected to be fourth vice president of the District of Columbia council, Boy Scouts of America. Dr. Bartsch has been connected with scouting in Washington since its start 16 years ago. His untiring efforts as chairman of the court of honor, his active service as chairman of the committee on camping, and his inspiring knowledge of bird life have won for him the love and esteem of all Washington scouts and officials.

At the banquet of the Third division scoutmasters' round table Monday in the University club, Mr. C. M. Marsh announced his resignation as deputy commissioner of the division, and presented Maj. Stanley Wolfe, formerly scoutmaster of Troop 57, as the new deputy commissioner. Mr. Marsh will continue to be deputy commissioner at large, which means that his interest in scouting will be maintained, and that the efficient service which he always has rendered, while curtailed, will not be lost to the organization.

Maj. Wolfe's record speaks for itself. Scouting in Washington welcomes him.

The best paragraph of scout news sent to headquarters by scribe or troop reporter on or before October 19 will win a signal corps compass.

The two contests will start November 1. Every troop will want its records up to date and maintained in good shape. The troop organization should be complete. The troop committee should be stirred into activity and methods of keeping attendance up to the maximum should be developed.

E. L. Mattice, deputy commissioner of the Fourth division, announces two events of great interest in the near future. The scouts are to participate in the street carnival to be held in Columbia Heights Friday night and will parade. On the afternoon of October 23, from 1 to 5 o'clock, the Fourth division will hold a fun jamboree in Central High school stadium. Beginning October 18, the Fourth division will hold classes in first aid, signaling and map making each Monday night from 8 to 10 o'clock in the Wilson Normal school.

The Third division is making plans for a divisional overnight hike October 23 and 24 to Troop 52's camp at Seneca creek.

Albert Michaud, of Troop 49, has been extended the thanks of the officials of Camp Good Will for acting as bugler.

Scouts of the city have been invited to attend the Kosciuszko recognition day exercises to be held in Memorial Continental hall at 8:30 o'clock Monday night, October 18.

At a special court of review held at the Jewish Community center, October 5, two boys were advanced to the rank of first class scouts and seven tenderfoot scouts became second class. Scouts Oscar Sherman and Sidney Hoffman, both of Troop 73, were passed into first class, while Morris Atkins, Jacob Sperling, Armand Gordon, Sidney Kolker, Julius Goldman, David Blaser and Haskell Milstone, all of Troop 3, were raised to second class.

The first District of Columbia court of honor was called last Tuesday by Dr. Paul Bartsch, chairman, in the Thomson school.

Scout Fred Eidsness, Troop 74, passed camping craftsmanship in leather, electricity and handicraft. Scout Laurence Julihn, Troop 74, passed first aid and pioneering.

The Fourth division court of honor and review will meet for the first time this season in the Wilson Normal school, Eleventh and L streets, Saturday night.

The Finest "Eight" Performance
Within Reach of Thousands

Priced from $1945 to $2595
All prices f. o. b. Detroit, plus revenue tax

For many years, those able to pay top prices for motoring luxury have bought eight-cylinder cars as a matter of course.

But it remained for Hupmobile, with its efficient development of the straight-eight, to bring the finest of eight-cylinder performance to a far wider market.

Almost from its appearance two years ago, the beautiful Hupmobile Eight became the largest selling straight-eight in the world.

It arrived at a time when motor car buyers were beginning to seek something more than the old standards of performance and value; something other than price as a mark of prestige.

And so completely did the Hupmobile Eight meet the conceptions of a new value, and a totally new kind of smoothness, that discriminating buyers swept it to an immediate and overwhelming success.

When you first drive the beautiful Hupmobile Eight, you will be amazed at its fluent power, its dashing getaway—its ease of handling and riding. You will want this car for what it alone can give you in brilliant performance, in luxurious motoring, and in economy of eight-cylinder operation and upkeep.

for this new, finer Chrysler "70" Brougham, an unusual, beautiful, distinctive and smart new body type, combining the advantages of the sedan and brougham models.

HUNDREDS of thousands the country over paid tribute to the new, finer Chrysler "70" during the past week.

They acclaimed it as intensifying and surpassing the Chrysler thrill of three record-breaking years with fresh standards of appearance and performance—at prices as significant as its brilliant new beauty.

For this new Chrysler "70" as far excels the charm and smartness of its older self as that older self relegated earlier conceptions of motor car beauty to oblivion.

Newer, more exquisitely graceful bodies—

Newer, more distinctive silhouette, set off with an exclusive style of military front with cadet sun visor—

Newer luxury of riding comfort—

Newer, greater riding and handling ease—

Newer richness of upholstery—

Newer, finer hardware and fittings—

Newer refinements in controls and lighting—

Newer, more attractive color blendings far in advance of color harmonies.

And with this newer appearance, joined to proved and unmatched superiority of Chrysler performance, dependability, economy and long life, it is inevitable that the new, finer Chrysler "70" will exert, in more marked degree, the influence which for the past three years has meant nothing but Chrysler.

Come in today. See this new Chrysler beauty. Experience this new Chrysler comfort, which not only creates a distinct departure in design that forecasts the new vogue in motor car engineering and practice, but whose prices also set a new measure of value for an entire industry to follow.

Miss Grace Gardinier, government fuel yards, bureau of mines, has been at her home in Minnesota on a vacation.

Miss Shelby Holbrook, formerly of the editorial section, bureau of mines, was the guest of Miss Florence Harris, chief mining engineer's office on Monday and Tuesday. Miss Holbrook was on her way back to New York from Pittsburgh, where she had been attending some of the sessions of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. Miss Holbrook is now employed on Mining and Metallurgy, the official publication of the institute.

Part of the bureau of mines camp is to be remodeled during the coming week to comply with insurance regulations.

Team Makes Records.

The bureau of mines bowling team in the Commerce league won two and lost one of its games last week, putting it in third place with nine games won and three lost. The bureau team has been making some league records for the season, however, with the two highest team sets—1,559 and 1,540, and the highest team game—552. William Clements, with 379, and Ruel Figett, with 348, have rolled high individual sets, and Raymond Roek's 133 and Clements' 132 and 129 stand as high individual games.

Much interest is being shown in the organization of a bureau of mines girls' basketball team. The gymnasium of the Friends school has been secured for practice, and a number of recruits appeared at

TREASURY

Autumn social activities among the Treasury clubs are beginning. The first event will be a dance and card party under auspices of Treasury local No. 262, of the National Federation of Federal Employes. It will be held Tuesday night at Meridian mansions, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Dance music will be furnished by Irving Boernstein's orchestra. The committee in charge of the card party and dance: Miss Vera Catherine Brungart, chairman; Miss Ethel M. Ammon, Miss Mabel B. Hiatt, Miss Mary M. Mattingly and W. F. Dempsey, W. B. Whipple, E. C. Hooper, W. J. Donahue, A. D. Cartwell and R. O. Hundley.

Plans for Hallow e'en parties are in the air. Dainty witches will represent the offices of the treasurer and the register on Halloween night, when Treasury girls meet at a party in the Lafayette hotel. The committee which will take charge of the event is being formed.

Mrs. Dorris Heidenreich, of the bureau of supply, and Miss Nelle Carlson, of the Treasury postoffice, visited the Sesquicentennial last Sunday. They were guests of the officials in charge of the bureau of engraving and printing exhibit.

Mellon's Aid Recovering.

Arthur E. Sixsmith, private secretary to Secretary Mellon, is rapidly recovering from an illness which required treatment at George Washington University hospital. He will resume his duties this week.

Frank A. Birgfeld, chief clerk and superintendent of the Treasury, is completing one of the most extensive and complicated series of transfers and space adjustments ever undertaken within the department. Offices of many of the highest officials in the Treasury were involved in the moves. Shifts that have been completed by Birgfeld have done much to relieve congested conditions.

Joseph E. Hall, of the loans and currency division, was called to Philadelphia Wednesday by illness of his mother.

Miss Mary V. Wilson, Miss Violet E. Vernon, Miss Ella M. Martin and Mrs. Martha Foley, of the income tax unit, formed a matinee party at the National theater Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Estelle Emerson, of the treasurer's office, will return tomorrow from a vacation of three weeks at Pittsfield, Mass., the home of her parents.

Richard Washington, assistant chief of the division of mail and files, has returned from his vacation abroad. He visited friends in England and France.

Miss Ethel Murray, of the income tax unit, has received a transfer and a promotion to duties in New York. The change became effective Friday.

No other manufacturer of fine cars has ever built anywhere near the number of cars that Cadillac has produced.

Ask yourself whether it is possible, in this day, for Cadillac to outsell all other cars at or above its price, by two to one, unless the Cadillac outstrips all others in fact, as it does in sales.

That being true, what justification is there for considering any other car as comparable to the great new Cadillac—which even now is still further increasing Cadillac prestige?

An hour at the wheel of the great new Cadillac will prove to you that no car in America is its equal.

Owners will tell you that on the basis of dependability and durability quite as much as on luxury and comfort, Cadillac is the soundest kind of an investment.

How Wilson Learned the Political Ropes

Since He Knew Nothing of Practical Politics, It Was Necessary to Teach Him, Writes James Kerney, His Friend and Advisor, in Telling How a Board of Strategy Was Built to Guide Him While Governor

WITH Wilson's election as governor there had also been swept into office a Democratic legislature. In many cases the successful legislative candidates had been chosen without the remotest idea of winning, and, as is usual in such circumstances, the average of capacity and ability was not high. James E. Martine, lovable character and his own torchlight procession, had been running for office of any and every kind for forty years without scoring a win.

The Republican progressives had forced through a primary law intended to give the voters an opportunity to express their preference for United States senator. Martine, against his own wish, had been finally induced to allow the use of his name on the ballot.

Vigorous efforts had been made to have other leading Democrats make the race. None would consent. On the other hand, the Republicans had very formidable party leaders enter the primary, and the winner was former Gov. Stokes.

Comedy and Pathos.

The small prospect of electing a Democratic legislature, coupled with the general lack of desire to give any possible offense to the powerful Smith, despite his declarations that he was not a candidate for the Senate, were influential factors with Democrats. Neither of these considerations, however, figured in Martine's desire not to go into the primary; he married late in life, and his reasons were personal. But when it became evident that no other Democrat would stand, William W. St. John, a newspaper man who had long been active in the agitation for progressive legislation, compelled Martine to stand.

There were both comedy and pathos in the transaction. St. John, who with Frank D. Schroth, now publisher of the Trenton State Gazette, had organized the Trenton News bureau, and was then writing a syndicate political letter for New Jersey newspapers, had a small office at the State House. He called Martine over to Trenton from Plainfield and, together with Martin P. Devlin, fighting Trenton liberal, told him that it was his duty to run and prevent the battle for progressive legislation from appearing ridiculous. They had the necessary petition ready for signature. Martine was determined not to consent and fought for several hours. He finally went on his knees and declared: "For God's sake, Mart and Saint"—the terms of affection he used for his two friends—"don't humiliate me any further. I am now married to a good woman, and it isn't fair to her for me to permit myself to be regarded as a political buffoon.

"I've run for everything from constable to Congress and have often got up at 2 o'clock in the morning to speak for the Democratic party, but I won't sign this petition and disgrace my wife." But at the very last minute it was placed on file with Martine's name attached, and he accepted the situation. At the primary Martine got 48,000 votes and was the party choice. Most people were a bit skeptical as to his capacity; none doubted his desire to give faithful and untrammeled public service.

Fight Over Smith.

He was intensely loyal in his friendships and had solid worth. His honesty and simplicity of character earned him respect. Wilson felt that he did not size up and was at first inclined to keep his hands off the situation. Almost as soon as it became known that the Democrats had won the legislature, the Smith forces began to come from under cover and insist that the primary was a joke, and that Smith was the man who had carried the brunt of battle and should have the reward. It required many weeks to win Wilson over and convince him that standing by Martine was a clear issue of good faith and observance of party pledges.

St. John fired the opening gun on Wilson. That was on election day, before the results of the voting were known. He spent the afternoon at Wilson's home in Princeton and went elaborately over the situation, both as regards progressive legislation and Martine. It was too soon to get much result. Wilson did not know for a certainty that the day's polling would put him in the Statehouse. St. John was an able radical, who had successfully launched a daily newspaper in Elizabeth, but was forced to give up the hard grind of publishing by a break in health. In March, 1910, Wilson had spoken at a Democratic banquet in Elizabeth, the only public gathering of New Jersey Democrats that he had ever addressed before his nomination for governor. While Wilson had not touched on any State issue, St. John was convinced that Wilson was a radical in the making, set about doing his part. Despite broken health, St. John was a philosopher, who refused to be disturbed by the Wilson methods at Princeton and who frequently quoted the words of Paley: "What is public history but a register of the successes and disappointments, the vices, the follies and the quarrels of those who engage in contention for power?" St. John saw in Wilson the most promising figure the genuine progressives had ever had in America. There was naturally much anxiety on the part of St. John, when the Smith fight was at its peak, lest it be discovered that the signature on the Martine filing-petition was not in the handwriting of Martine. But no investigation was made, and that danger, like so many in the Wilson political passage, was safely rounded.

At the Yale-Princeton football game on November 12, 1910, the Saturday after the election, I sat immediately in front of Wilson in the Princeton grand stand. He had been having a reunion with old classmates and was in high spirits. He told me he had never met Matthias C. Ely, editor of the biggest Democratic newspaper in the State, and suggested that I bring Ely to Princeton for a conference on Sunday, November 20. At the appointed time Ely and I were in the home of the governor-elect at Princeton. We waited half an hour for him to come in, with the family, from church. Wilson was very interested in Ely's knowledge of election laws and needed reforms, and we discussed the senatorship at length. Smith had not yet announced himself a candidate, and Wilson expressed the belief that he would not, in view of the preelection statements and the general indignation that had been stirred up even by mention of his name. Both Smith and Harvey were keeping very much aloof. Wilson made it plain that he was likewise not for Martine, whom he regarded as not qualified. It was clear that the expression at the preference primary had not made any particular impression on Wilson. He gave voice to the thought that the Democrats should pick a man of the exceptional type of John R. Hardin, a Princeton '80 man, who had first-class ability and would represent New Jersey with both intelligence and credit. Hardin, one of the great lawyers of the State, is now president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. Wilson had known Hardin since their student days.

Wilson's Lack of News.

The Newark Evening News, his stanchest newspaper supporter in the State, was making a most convincing fight against Smith. Edward W. Scudder, editor of the Newark News, had been a student under Wilson at Princeton, and, like his father, Wallace M. Scudder, publisher of the News, was a liberal Democrat, who saw in the rise of Wilson much promise for the advance of governmental reforms.

"I hope, Dr. Wilson, you are following the telling arguments that the Newark News is putting forth," I said, after we had failed to budge him for the direct primary idea. Both Ely and I were amused at his bland reply. He coolly told us that he did not read any New Jersey newspaper; the only newspaper he found time to read was the New York Evening Post. He did not even know that Tumulty was not a member of the legislature. When we quit the house, it was with some despair that Ely and I discussed the apparently hopeless situation of a governor who did not know the politicians in his own party and who did not read the State newspapers. It looked dark for Martine. Then came a remarkable development. St. John had been conducting an intelligent publicity campaign in support of the primary choice. Upon learning that it had been utterly wasted in so far as Wilson was concerned, he promptly made for New York and induced the New York Evening Post to enlist and help convert Wilson to stand by the primary expression for Martine.

"You old gloom, you are now talking to the New Jersey political writer for the New York Evening Post," St. John told me, with a chuckle, over the telephone the next evening. He at once began an educational campaign in the Evening Post aimed solely at Wilson.

A Publicity Trick.

With Wilsons' utter lack of political acquaintance and his indifference to the State press, there was naturally some concern as to his choice for his private secretary. A New York newspaper man, who had been helpful during the campaign, was regarded as the most likely candidate. With the fight that was ahead, however, it appeared urgent that some one more familiar with the ways of the politician should be chosen. Wilson was on very friendly terms with the retiring chief executive, Gov. John Franklin Fort, and they were going to Kentucky together on November 29 for the annual conference of governors. Adjutant-General Wilbur F. Sadler, jr., accompanied them; and after conferring with some of the others I suggested to Fort and Sadler that they could render a useful service by quietly putting Tumulty over as secretary to Wilson. They were both red-hot for the idea and agreed that they would lose no opportunity to suggest such a course. Fort almost spoiled the plan by telephoning Tumulty in advance to ask if he would accept. Tumulty was not pleased about it; he had a growing family, and he wanted to be prosecutor of the pleas of Hudson county. After some argument and delay, however, he was convinced that he should make the necessary sacrifice and finally consented to await the outcome of the trip. Wilson, who had heard Tumulty speak many times during the campaign, was delighted with the suggestion. He came home and named Tumulty.

Wilson's decision to make Tumulty secretary was a big boost for the Martine cause. Tumulty had already taken an active part in the preliminary discussions and had agreed to serve as the personal manager for Martine. St. John, Devlin, and I, after a number of rather vigorous chats with Martine, in an attempt to halt the indiscriminate issuance of spectacular announcements, had taken him to New York and at Hahn's Park Row restaurant dined and conferred with Tumulty and a few other Hudson county Democrats. It was no easy matter to keep Martine quiet, and the Smith forces, knowing all his human frailties, had encouraged pilgrimages of newspaper writers to the Martine home. Talking, on any subject and at any hour, was his weakness. Interviews published with him, even in friendly newspapers, were a bit disconcerting. When all other plans of suppressing Martine had failed, St. John hit upon the idea of taking him over to New York and having Tumulty and some other Hudson Democrats muzzle him. And so, at Hahn's restaurant, after each had given voice to the wisdom of concerted action by the progressives, if Wilson was to be won over and held in line, the suggestion was made that Martine should have a manager.

"Jim, you should make Joe Tumulty your manager, and let him do your talking for you," I declared.

"That's damn fine," replied Martine, and majestically sweeping around to Tumulty, he said, in a voice that could be heard across the East river, "Joe, will you be my manager?"

Tumulty agreed, and Martine interviews thenceforth were compiled by St. John, Devlin and myself. That was no particular reflection on Martine. Smith had a corps of clever writers who prepared lively statements to be put forth in his name. Devlin and St. John were peculiarly fitted for that type of controversy.

Hot shot was poured forth by the Martin and Smith strategists and the newspaper protagonists, until the State was fairly aflame. Fearful of possible ill effects on the Wilson political fortunes, powerful friends urged the governor-elect to keep his hands off. Wilson visited Tumulty in the latter's law office at Jersey City and frankly admitted that friends had advised him to let the matter drift, that Martine was incompetent, and that the State would resent Wilson's interference. Tumulty, full of vim, declared that the State was yearning for leadership, that the decent people were in favor of Martine, and that unless Wilson did lead some one else would assume the leadership, very much to the injury of Wilson prestige. That conference was frequently recalled in the after years, and played a big part in world affairs when Wilson found himself inclined to hesitate. It was a never failing illustration with Tumulty.

His Determination.

But Wilson did not yield at once to the pressure for Martine. There was a row on in New York, where the Tammany leaders were attempting to force the selection of William F. Sheehan for senator. The revolt was quite as energetic as in New Jersey. National Democratic leaders began to manifest a lively interest. Cleveland's old law partner, Francis Lynde Stetson, on December 4, 1910, took up with Wilson the critical condition confronting the party, and pointed out that whatever choices were made would be taken as decisive of the Democracy's disposition toward the public and public questions. Unless the the public was satisfied on this point the result would be immediately to repel the independents, who had helped produce the recent victories, but who were not yet identified with the Democratic party.

Wilson finally visited both Davis, who controlled the big Hudson county legislative delegation, and who was on his deathbed at his home in Jersey City, and Smith at his home in Newark, to urge that they desist from attempting to force the election of Smith. Davis said that he had already made a compact to deliver the votes of Hudson county to Smith, and Smith very blandly refused to get out. Smith took the position that his health was now better than it had been in the early summer, at which time he was flatly stating that he would not be a candidate. He likewise insisted that he wanted vindication, inasmuch as he had left the Senate under a cloud, due to the sugar trust investigations and the public branding that Cleveland had given himself, Brice and Gorman. All Wilson's persuasive eloquence had no effect. Wilson returned to Princeton, and on the evening of December 9, 1910, in accordance with notice he had served on Smith, he issued, a formal statement in which he said.

"I know that the people of New Jersey do not desire Mr. James Smith, jr., to be sent again to the Senate. If he should be, he will not go as their representative. The only means I have of knowing whom they desire to represent them is the vote at the recent primaries, where 48,000 Democratic voters, a majority of the whole number who voted at the primaries, declared their preference for Mr. Martine, of Union county. For me that vote is conclusive. I think it should be for every member of the legislature."

The battle that ensued was full of bitterness. As usual, where political opportunity offers, an attempt was made to inject religious prejudice. Many of the legislators who had been unexpectedly elected were members of the Roman Catholic church. So was Smith. It was not difficult to spread the idea that Wilson, son of a Presbyterian minister, was prejudiced. The situation was fraught with many dangers. Devlin, whose judgment came to be greatly respected by Wilson, suggested that at a big mass meeting to be held in St. Patrick's hall, Jersey City, January 5, 1911, Wilson should make a point of singling out several prominent Democrats, who were also Irish Catholics, for a word of praise. Devlin picked as the fairest targets Tumulty, John J. Tracy and Mark Sullivan, three able young men who had served in the legislature.

A Reckless Assertion.

In the St. Patrick's hall speech Wilson made the somewhat reckless assertion that Smith was planning to have himself elected by Republican votes if necessary, and that in futherance of the scheme Smith had been in conference in Philadelphia with the two foremost south Jersey Republican bosses. This statement was promptly challenged by all the persons named, and upon investigation it was found to be without basis. But Wilson never retracted. There was more of the same kind of extravagant assertions. On the eve of the election Smith's forces brought a trainload of camp-followers to Trenton; and, headed by a band, they paraded through the streets, passing in review before the majestic Smith himself, who stood on the steps of the Trenton house. This stage-play sent shivers down the backs of some of the Wilson forces, but when the ballot was taken the next day, January 24, Smith got but fourteen votes; most of the Irish Americans in the legislature did not vote for him.

Tumulty, Devlin, Record and St. John doubtless had more to do individually with getting Wilson to insist upon the election of Martine than had any others in the picture. At a later time, in the White House, Wilson declared that he had probably permitted Devlin more than any other person to influence him. Wilson mostly tried to convince himself that no one really influenced him very much. Devlin was born in Scotland, and this created something of a bond with Wilson, who was fond of his own Scotch blood, which, like Devlin's, was diluted with Irish. Wilson delighted to exchange yarns about Scotland with Devlin.

Record, who regarded Wilson as a hopeless reactionary, was very much amazed when Wilson answered his public letter during the campaign. Soon after the election Joseph A. Dear and his brother, Walter, publishers of the Jersey Journal, alumni of Princeton and friends of Wilson, had urged the new governor to take Record into camp. For years Record had been hammering at corporate domination in the State and through his intelligent agitation had forced many election reforms. As early as 1901 he had got a Republican governor to put forward a law bringing the primaries, which had previously been the football of the railroad, banking and other corporations, under the control of the election law.

Record had served on a commission to draft the bill, along with two other conspicuous Republicans, Edward C. Stokes, who became governor and State chairman, and Joseph Munn, an expert on election machinery. While Record could not get the commission or the governor to take a stand for wiping out the old convention system, he did manage to slip into the new law a provision permitting any candidate for delegate to a convention to have printed on the official ballot, opposite his name, the name of the candidate he would favor in the convention.

Record and his progressive Republican associates made use of the provision and forced the nomination of rich and able radicals like Edward B. Osborne and Everett Colby in Essex county. That law was really the beginning of the break up of the absolute domination of the Republican party by the corporation. Other modifications of the primary law followed, including one providing for the expression of a preference for United States senator. The Martine experiment was the first one tried under the law.

Cutting loose from the bosses who nominated him was the beginning of the real contest that landed Wilson in the White House. From that time forward he was the most successful amateur politician of his generation.

While the knockout blow that Wilson dealt Smith attracted nationwide attention because of its unexpected decisiveness. Wilson's preaching of a new philosophy served to make him a great national figure overnight. Between the time of his election in November and his inauguration in January, he found himself discarding most of the pretty political theories he had been teaching to his students. Within three months he had completely shifted from the conservative that Harvey and Smith had so gleefully nominated and was fitting into his program much of the radical political doctrine of the day. In less than a year he was publicly apologizing for having been wrong in his university attitude against the initiative, referendum and recall.

Dame Fashion's Latest Paris Modes

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Paris, Oct. 16.—The Queen of Roumania and her daughter, the Princess Ileana, who will be arriving in the United States as this is published, had a busy time in Paris selecting the robes for their American tour. They have been at Redfern's, Patou's, and other of the great couturiers', and have made selections that are destined to influence greatly the American winter mode.

The queen favors all purples, especially for evening and has ordered numerous orchid and deeper purple shades in velvet and many combinations of purple velvets and silver and gold lace.

The selections of Princess Ileana favor blues, especially blue velvets. Both the queen and her daughter chose extremely ornate afternoon dresses, with blues and purples dominating. All of the queen's dresses, as American women will be deeply interested in knowing, are rather longer than the latest mode. It will be interesting to have a comparison made in the length of gowns between those worn by the First Lady of the United States and the Queen of Roumania, when the latter is entertained at the White House. The famous designers of Paris are quite on the qui vive for the reactions and impressions that come from America as a result of the visit of one of the very best dressed women in Europe.

With the queen gowned after the Paris mode, one can now pay some heed to what returning Parisians, who have been vacationing since the autumn openings, are selecting for themselves. After the foreign buyers have come and gone it is their selections, after all, which largely determine what shall be most enduringly popular during the fall and winter seasons.

Lots of velvet is being sold. The dresses are tighter at the waist, especially at the back, the curve of the back being obtained by a certain cut. There is less pleating than last year. The bottoms of the skirts are very supple in spite of being slightly narrower than last season, but they allow an easy walk. Less trimming is used than last season. The embroideries are mostly reserved for evening, and in the very soft shades. In the ensemble the silhouette is very refined. The first purchases of returning Parisian women indicate that velvet will continue to be the chief material in evening gowns—especially white, gray and black velvets, followed by similarly colored satin and moire. The latter are equally popular for afternoon wear.

The only change in the lines discernible so far is a tendency, whenever possible, to raise the waistline. This is gradually being lifted, for it has been found to produce a more youthful appearance.

For hats, felts of all kinds, velours, taupe, mousseline, soleil, antelope, gloveskin, crocodile, spotted chine reversible, are the things that will be most worn this winter. The hats will be more trimmed than last season. The second winter models, like the first, favor all the fur shades which will remain very much in vogue.

MADAME JENNY

THE FAMOUS COUTURIER'S VARIED CAREER

Along the wide, tree-bordered Avenue des Champs-Elysees in Paris, not far from the Arc de Triomphe, stands the Maison Jenny—a great establishment with a marble front, well known to frequenters of the French capital. As you are shortly going to read this celebrated woman's interpretations of some of her models you should know something of her as she appears in her accustomed setting, looking down from the wide windows of her professional headquarters on the passing crowds of gorgeously arrayed women.

Mme. Jenny is in her middle years, but an ever fresh youthfulness animates everything she says or does. She has olive skin and her hair, turning from jet black, is a strangely beautiful gray—gray like the undersides of young poplar leaves, waiving in the wind. She believes that women who can employ rouge artistically should use it, and that it should always be used in a quantity proportionate to the artistic ability of the woman using it. Being an artist, Mme. Jenny does not set any limits for herself in this connection, and her lips are scarlet. Around her throat is a jade collar, centuries old, and a string of real pearls hangs to her waist. The green beads, the silvery hair and olive skin make a rare picture. Her gown, stockings and shoes are almost sure to be of the same color, a subtle odor that nobody ever smelt elsewhere hangs about her garments and seems to be a counterpart of her own personality, and on one of her fingers shine four big diamonds in one ring.

Mme. Jenny was educated to be a professor of literature, and learned by accident that she was a creator of fashions, while collaborating with her own dressmaker, whom she afterward took into partnership in her big business. Her admiration for Chinese things is everywhere apparent. On the mantel of her bureau-prive a bronze Buddha officiates conspicuously. Pieces of teakwood, highly polished, shine from their corners far apart in the spacious room, and ancient embroideries from Pekin and Nankin are on all the tables and pedestals. In the exhibition rooms of the great establishment, one comes frequently upon antique Chinese treasure chests and screens, and the Chinese note recurs again and again.

Mme. Jenny owns a fine old chateau in romantic Dordogne, where she spends part of her time. She works very hard though, and reads voraciously, and most of the time she is at work in Paris, or looking pensively down from her wide windows on the crowds of women who pass, contemplating the styles that are most compatible to the requirements of the age.

Women and High Skirts.

Women love to exaggerate the mode and carry it to extremes. If the skirts are high, they want to make them higher; if they are narrow, they want to compete with each other making them narrower and narrower. I was recently asked by an American woman if I thought the skirts would be higher next season. Well, if they are, it will be removing the skirts entirely. They are at present a little too high to suit my personal taste, and a little higher than is necessary for practicable purposes, and I look for a slight—a very slight—lengthening to be in evidence next season. I wish that I could make all women realize that exaggeration is vulgarity, and that vulgarity is the opposite direction from good taste. Colored shoes are grossly inelegant, and these cut shoes that are at present being worn by women who follow silly fads instead of good sense and practicability are horrible. I detest both, and denounce them as enemies of good taste in women's dress. The artificial jewelry that shines so brazenly from the bosoms of feminine multitudes today is equally offensive to me. A lady no longer looks like one when she cheapens herself by wearing these relics of barbarism. The big rose is likewise odious and silly., and the low belts, too.

If a thing is new, without being beautiful and good, it is of no consequence. And if it is beautiful and good, it need not be new in order to be accepted. Women who are advancing in age are especially subject to this craze for everything new. Their actions are frequently in ridiculous disproportion to their years. If it continues, some one will soon have to found a school for teaching women how to grow old.

Opposes the Corset's Return.

Why are there now so many ugly legs? I never see more than one out of five women with pretty legs, and a few years back, the legs of nearly every woman commanded admiration. Why? It is because the boot or high shoe has been discarded. It kept the ankle firm and in the evening, released, it was shapely and beautiful. But now legs are bulgy and ugly, and the constant use of the low shoe has brought upon us this reign of the ugly leg.

Women's shapes, too, are kept in correspondingly better shape, through the use now of bands, preventing the deformation of their hips. Those who do not wear them are oftentimes a laughable sight, and I know that if they could see themselves as my accustomed and analytical eye sees them, they would wish for the return of the corset. I am not in favor of the return of the corset, but I do want to see high shoes come back, and I advocate the use of the hip band.

Big Hat Gone to Stay.

I have recently been asked if the large hat would return. No, it can not return in our day. On the contrary, it will tend to become smaller and more cap-like. The mode always adjusts itself to the times. The large hat left because it was not suitable for getting into the automobile, &c. It thrived when horse-drawn vehicles were enjoying their heyday. The automobile took it away, just as the automobile—say what you like—took away long hair, which was such a nuisance. In 50 years it will be the aeroplane instead of the automobile, and the hats will then be more cap-like and the hair of women be even shorter!

Afternoon dress of black crepe de chine. Straight casaque with blouse effect in the back, and skirt of pleated frilling. Yoke in the back with bias work in pink.

Simplicity the Supreme Elegance.

For flesh-colored stockings I have the same dislike. They are vulgar, too. There is nothing elegant about a woman's trying to cover her leg in such manner as to make you think it is not covered at all. If this intention is present in her mind it is quite as if it were not covered anyway, so far as she is concerned. There are enough colors that are different enough from the actual color of the flesh to give all the advantages of it—such as beige and light tan—and still they sharply draw the line between the vulgar and the elegant. Again a dangerous extreme has been gone to. Light stockings were made fashionable, and they are indeed beautiful, but women had to carry the mode to an extreme and make them look like their own skin!

Simplicity, after all, is the supreme elegance. The desire to be conspicuous is not worthy of a lady. It is the result of an absence of taste.

Wise Words About Shoes.

The elegantly dressed woman wears a plain, natural-looking shoe, with low or medium heels. You may say that this does not apply to evening shoes. Women do not wear evening shoes, although they put them on and appear picturesque in them. They call a taxicab or a chauffeur of their own and go to the ballroom. But do they actually wear shoes when they dance? No, for the dancing is done on the toe, so the high heel really does not serve any practical purpose. And the elegantly dressed woman does not wear artificial jewelry. Cheapness is nowhere in evidence in her toilette. Even good jewelry she wears in moderation, changing the pieces from time to time, but never at any one time wearing an abundance of it. She wears plain hats, too.

Excessive Slimness Not to Be Desired.

The desire to carry the mode to extremes is doing great physical harm to women. Drawing the breast so tight in an effort to be slim to the point of looking unnatural is dangerous, foolish and vulgar, and if women, as a result of this foolhardiness, have cancers and bad health, they can blame only themselves. Excessive slimness is not to be desired, for it is certainly not admirable. A woman should remain womanly. When she loses that quality she loses everything. The straight line makes one sufficiently slender, and when gowns are well adjusted, shape reveals itself.

Dress to Enhance Charm.

We are trying to embellish ourselves and add to the charm we have, dear women, and not to destroy and hide that which we already have! We must dress in the manner that is most advantageous to our type, and conserve that manner. This habit of flying from one fad to another is not worthy of one who has character and personality. Women will go to the wildest ends in pursuit of things that are new, merely because they are new. There is no ethical justification whatever. "Why did you buy that?" you may ask. And the answer comes: "Because it's new." Well, that's a poor, silly reason.

MADAME JENNY ON MODE.

Paris, September 30.

Where is the dramatist who knows before the first presentation of his play whether it will be a success or not? And afterward, how often do the critics and author disagree? So in selecting some of my new autumn models to show to you many American women, I have not adhered closely to my favorites, because in the past I have often observed that my preference was not that of others. I have frequently tried to please a particular person or group of persons, and gone to pains to arrange my own choice on one side, and the models for which I had no special affection, on the other. Many times, indeed, though, they entirely overlooked my choice and were wildly enthusiastic over those to which I was somewhat indifferent!

In order to make this little collection as various as possible, I have chosen a few representative models for wear at different periods of the day: four afternoon dresses, two afternoon ensembles, an afternoon coat, a sport costume and two evening gowns.

Reign of the Straight Line.

There is never a great deal to say about the lines of dresses. My ideas about this are summed up in the statement that we are now living in the reign of the straight line.

Two things which I want especially to discuss in this article are the importance of detail and the danger of going to extremes. It is through a knowledge of the first, well applied, that a woman of moderate means is able to appear more elegant than the majority of her wealthy sisters, and it is through guarding herself against the second that women may attain to the greatest of all feminine charms—that of being themselves and realizing and expressing their own personalities through the medium of the clothes they wear. Too often, alas! women, as a class, imitate the petty trick of some great woman, and copy her mode, following like little lambs across the pasture, after their mother. Women in throngs lose originality, which is a tremendous charm, by copying each other and envying what others have. They sell their birthright for an extremely sorry mess of pottage.

Taste, Not Money, Makes Elegance.

Taste, not money, makes elegance. I have seen rich women bedeck themselves gaudily in the costliest material that money can make theirs, and become objects of derision and pity, and I have seen women of moderate means acquire a few garments and assemble them thoughtfully, so as to present the most elegant and admirable appearance possible.

I have in mind now a woman whose money sounds like a fable, but she is not capable of dressing herself elegantly, without the help of others. And I know another woman whose entire wardrobe is white, black and gray. She has very little money, but no woman could command greater respect for taste in dress. She has a black hat with a white band on it, and with one of her three dresses, which is black, and white stockings, white sac a main, white gloves, white beads, etc., she is attired in perfect taste. Next day she will wear the same dress, but with a touch of gray added to it somewhere, and wear gray stockings, carry a gray sac, and clasp something about her throat or about the ends of her sleeves, and put a gray band over the white one on the same hat she wore the day before, and again she is dressed impeccably, with enviable taste, and at surprisingly little cost. A few tiny things are changed, and she has an entirely new costume, and an elegant one. It is this attention to details, dear readers, that so many women need to take into account. This short step covers the space between mediocrity and true distinction in dress, and while you are envying the paradise feathers and jeweled heels of your rich sister who lives in the next street, you are ignoring a far greater possession which is now abiding within your very doors, waiting to be accepted. The most elegantly dressed woman is positively not the richest one. She is one who dresses, for the most part in gray and black and white. All that she wears goes together, creating harmony around her. An appropriate hat is all-important. A hat is really more important than a dress, for after all, if you don't like something about your dress, you can change it, but you can not remake your hat without disfiguring it, and so it follows that the most careful attention must be displayed when you are purchasing your hat.

Sport costume of jersey. The jaquette is beige, and the skirt is checked brown and red. The belt is of red leather.

Afternoon dress of black silk velvet, casaque trimmed with green velvet inlaid work.

Evening gown of silver lame and silver lace. Pink flowers are embroidered on the side.

Afternoon ensemble. Two-piece dress, casaque of fancy jersey in different tints, and black velvet skirt. The cape is of black velvet, trimmed with silk embroidery of different colors.

Afternoon ensemble. The upper part of this dress is of light green crepe de chine, with embroidery in a variety of colors, while the skirt is of green velvet. The petit bolero is also of green velvet.

PERSONAL FASHION SERVICE.

By special arrangement The American Bureau of the Paris Fashion Board will send to our readers any personal information desired about fashions. There is no charge for this unusual and valuable service but, in every case, a stamped and plainly addressed envelope must be sent with the inquiry and in this envelope the reply will be sent direct to the inquirer. Send your inquiry to The American Bureau of The Paris Fashion Board, 9 East 37th Street, New York City, and give the name of this newspaper.

A Weekly Fashion Feature

This page inaugurates a Weekly Fashion Service by The Washington Post written by a group of famous couturieres which includes all but two of the acknowledged leaders in Paris.

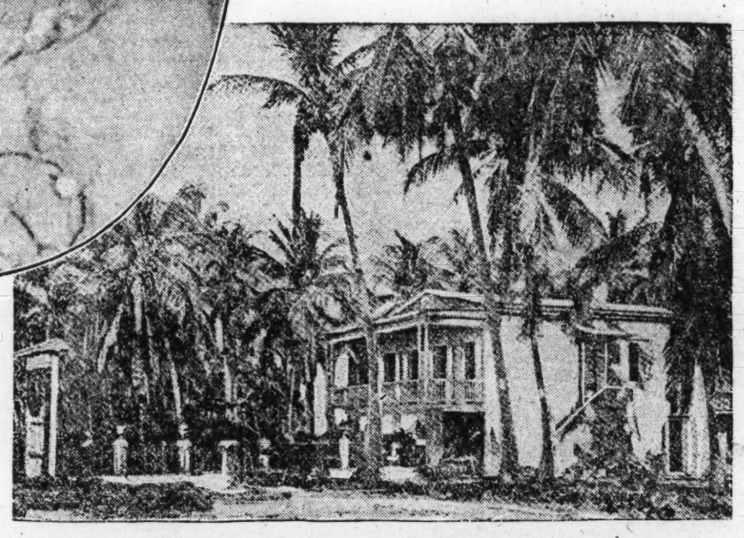

Besides dress the vital question of hats will be presented by the most famous creators of millinery modes.

'Dead' American Girl's Honeymoon of Horror

How Carol Pennington, the Daughter of a Kansas Farmer, Finally Escaped From the Inhuman Tortures of Her Young and Handsome Porto Rican Husband and Returned to Those Who Thought Her Dead

Carol Pennington as she looked when she met the romantic Eduardo Salazar at an American university and before her horrible honeymoon in a filthy tropical hut

"Eduardo caught me when I tried to escape and was fiendish in his cruelty. Stinging gnats left great welts on my body and slimy lizards dropping from the roof filled me with terror."

Eduardo Salazar as a senior at the American university where he romantically wooed and won the girl he later cruelly abused and reported dead and buried in a tropical cemetery.

A FEW years ago on the campus of the University of Missouri the students were interestedly watching the development of a rather unusual romance. Pretty golden-haired Carol Pennington, the rosy-cheeked daughter of a Kansas farmer, blind to all the attractions of the handsome, athletic, American students, was daily becoming more and more in love with Eduardo Salazar, a sun-tanned Porto Rican, a student of scientific farming and reputed to be a wealthy direct descendant of Capt. Gomez Salazar, companion of Ponce de Leon, intrepid Spanish explorer.

Carol was more or less a belle of the campus. If it hadn't been that her eyes were at all times riveted on the handsome Porto Rican, there would have been a score of other youths who would have given the sunny-haired, bright-eyed Kansas girl their college boy hearts.

But "there wasn't a chance," for every day Carol and her dark-hued sweetheart were seen threading their way to classes arm and arm under the university elms, and so far as they were concerned the campus was deserted.

In this manner four years of college life passed and on commencement day Carol not only received a diploma but a proposal of marriage.

Carol's parents, simple Western folks, were not so cosmopolitan as their daughter. They regarded the Porto Rican as something akin to an African and they were decidedly against having such a dark-shaded young man for a son-in-law.

In fact, they were so violently opposed to marrying their daughter to a "yellow" man that Carol saw it was a case of choosing between her parents and the man she loved. And like most love-struck girls Carol found the choice easy.

So the two who had become very close to each other in the four years of their student days in the little college, ran away to New York city en route to the large and wealthy estates of the Salazars, in Eduardo's native country.

After a hasty marriage in a tiny chapel in New York, the two boarded the steamer San Juan. The last glimpse of them saw the happy bride leaning far over the railing to say goodby and her fine looking husband with a protective arm thrown over her shoulders.

A little note penned in New York reached the Penningtons out in Kansas and after they had recovered from their first shock at their child's elopement, they anxiously awaited further news.

Six months passed and at last the postman did bring a strange looking rice paper envelope containing a letter from Porto Rico. Mrs. Pennington snatched it and frantically tore it open. Its briefness was a forewarning before her blurred eyes read its contents.

The blithe, pretty little Carol was dead!

Eduardo, in a short paragraph, broke the tragic news. He wrote that his wife had never become acclimated to the tropics and had succumbed to sprue, a tropical disease which takes a heavy toll in human life. Her body, he wrote, had been buried in the Protestant cemetery at San Juan.

The parents of the pretty co-ed were heart broken. Bitterly they regretted the cruel destiny which barred them from their baby in her last moments.

A year passed and the friend who aided Carol in her elopment one day received a note signed "Carol Pennington."

Photograph of a Porto Rican hut similar to the one to which Carol Pennington was taken instead of the luxurious estate her cold-blooded husband had promised her.

Then one day Carol Pennington walked in her friend's door, a pitiful little wraith of the young and beautiful Carol, with hair in whose drabness one could only faintly discern gleams of its former gold and in whose eyes the amber light was strangely clouded.

Like one recounting the strange experiences of a horrible dream, she began to tell a story vivid with details that had been impressed in her mind by the horror that attended them:

"It was a marvelous trip down, and Eduardo was, it seemed to me then, the most unusual of bridegrooms. It was all quite as though we were still lovers.

"One night Eduardo pointed out the Southern Cross—that shining figure of constellations only visible in tropical skies—and whispered how for generations the Salazars had claimed their loves, first when it was seen through the branches of the palm trees.

"I was somewhat surprised that there was no one to meet us when our boat landed at San Juan, for I had been somewhat curious to meet the proud Salazars.

"Eduardo came back shortly from his quest for a taxi and announced that he had received a message that his family had the week before all left unexpectedly for Madrid, Spain, where a sister lay ill.

"Once we passed a great white house with parapets overlooking the harbor and over which flew the glorious Stars and Stripes. The flag caused a sudden lump to come in my throat—this bit of my country set in such strange surroundings. I said something of the kind to Eduardo and was surprised at his quick answer:

"'You are a Puertoriqueno now!'

I started to argue with him and discovered for the first time the grudge he seemed to hold in his heart toward America.

"We had left the town behind and were speeding along at a frightening rate on smooth white roads. I turned questioningly to Eduardo.

"'My hacienda is far from here; we must travel fast,' he explained, speaking rapidly to the driver. Once we passed one of the low thatched native huts which had so delighted me upon the first hour of our journey.

"In another hour I knew the worst. When the car finally stopped it was before, not a fine 'hacienda casa' as I had imagined in my mind as the estate of the ancient Salazars, but before one of these wretched huts, placed on the side of a hill!

"Around the doorway scuttled lean red pigs; in front, rose countless rows of palm trees—the palms through which the Salazars watched the Southern Cross when they claimed their loves.

"A filthy old woman appeared from around the side of the hut and Eduardo went over to her and began talking to her, pointing at me.

"Eduardo had dismissed the auto and going over to the trunks which he had thrown off he kicked them with his foot.

"'You will not need these, dulce, for I have brought you out here to teach you to be a Puertoriqueno, and to show you how a Salazar can love. A realization of the days that were to follow rushed over me.

"Those days it would be impossible for me to describe. Eduardo seemed suddenly transformed to some sort of demon.

"There in that hut, reeking with the mingled odor of the tobacco leaves drying on the wall and the swine that ran freely through the doors. I lived through hell. My clothes were taken away and a horrible concoction, brewed by the old woman, who appeared at intervals during the day, was given me for food.

"In the day I suffered in the heat, the solitude and misery of my surroundings, and at night in the fierce and tireless embraces of my husband. Was it any wonder that I sometimes thought I was going mad?

"I made many attempts to escape. Once I fashioned a dress for myself out of banana leaves and used orange tree thorns for pins. I hid it in a little thicket of quava leaves behind the hut and one day when Eduardo had joined the men at work I hastened to don my rustic dress and started down the hillside in the direction I had seen the car take.

"Eduardo, however, soon discovered my absence and overtook me. My attempted escape had only made matters worse, for after that Eduardo was almost fiendish in his cruelty.

"He tied me in the dirty hut where in the heat of the day I lay with the little stinging gnats making welts on my body. Great slimy lizards, which had frightened me so when I first came by dropping from the roof on us at night, ran over me.

"Sometimes a sudden tropical storm came up and lashed the hut. When the great sheets of rain swept across the entrance of the hut I welcomed the cooling flood on my body and prayed that I might contract a cold that would put an end to my suffering. I do not know how I went on living."

Other more revolting details entered into Carol's narrative—her husband's anger because she bore him no child and the repulsive traditions practiced upon the little American wife by the old woman who mumbled mysteriously as she brewed some strange herb in her kettle.

A kind fate, however, spared the wretched girl the burden of motherhood under such conditions and assisted her in her escape from the hell she had endured for a year.

She tells this thrilling story of her escape:

"One day one of the peons dropped his overalls not far from the hut. They often did this, wearing only their shirts as a work garment. As soon as he turned his back I darted out, slipped into the filthy garment and without a backward glance sped down the hill.

"As I ran I prayed fiercely that God—the Great Spirit of the Indian girl whose soul the Peurtoriqueno's folk tales tell inhabits the royal palm—would shield me in my flight. I don't know how long it took me to reach the valley and to come upon the smooth paved road that had been my wonder and delight the first part of our journey a year ago.

"I hid behind a great bush heavy with blossoms. Its name and legend as told to me by Eduardo on our strange journey rushed to my mind.

"It was the 'Corazon de bombre,' which means the heart of man. Its blossoms open blood red in the morning, pale to pink at noon and in the evening drop off wan and white. The love of a day—thus it had been with Eduardo's tempestuous wooing.

"I was roused from my reverie by the sound of an automobile coming down the road. I stood out on the side and began waving my arms. The motor car stopped and two men leaned inquiringly out. As I spoke the man nearest me pointed to the driver and said, 'Americano.' No word in the Spanish language ever sounded so sweet."

It did not take Carol long to repeat enough of her story to enlist the sympathy of the American. He was that day on his way to San Juan to bid farewell to his sweetheart, the daughter of a United States army officer who had been stationed at Fort San Juan.

Carol was smuggled into the girl's stateroom on the steamer "San Lorenzo" in order to make her escape certain. She was fitted out with a wardrobe and when the ship was well out to sea the captain was confided in, and gave valuable assistance.

After she had rested a few days and shopped in New York, Carol returned to her people in Kansas, with whom she had, of course, communicated in the meanwhile. How her return was explained to her townspeople who had mourned her as dead for nearly a year is a story by itself, but it was some time before the details of the terrible tragedy leaked out.

The tragedy did not, however, end with her return home from her horrible honeymoon in the tropics, for the bony hand of death grasped her Porto Rican husband about a month after Carol's escape from a bondage worse than death.

His violent end was thus reported in a Porto Rican news dispatch published in American newspapers:

"Eduardo Salazar, son of the late Pedro Salazar and descendant of the distinguished Lieutenant Gomez Salazar, was found dead here today in the Salazar casa. A discharged pistol in his hand pointed to suicide. Young Salazar had recently returned from the States where he went to study scientific farming. He was sole heir to the large Salazar haciendas besides the famous town house in Ponce, which has been occupied by generations of Salazars. Salazar's name has been connected with a certain faction in Porto Rico who are striving for a Porto Rican republic."

BIRDS' HIGHWAYS

Birds going south for the winter have three main highways of travel across the United States, according to the new thirteenth edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica, just published this fall.

"The most obvious one," says the Britannica, "leads through the mainland of Mexico directly into Central America. The second uses northwestern Florida as a place to jump up in flight directly across the Gulf of Mexico for Yucatan. The third takes the travelers down through the peninsula of Florida, thence across the Caribbean sea to South America—with resting places in Cuba, Jamaica and other islands of the West Indies.

"Spring and autumn routes, as well as the territory in which the winter is spent, are now well known for most species, the principal lanes of flight following the valleys of the great rivers, such as the Mississippi and the Hudson, as well as the sea coasts.

"A careful survey of the phenomenon of bird migration seems to show that the primary cause of these movements is not the need of finding food so much as an optimun temperature for the offspring."

Various species use the same routes and some families divide up and us all three. Usually the road taken in the fall is used for the return in spring. However, some striking exceptions to this serve to increase wonder at the ability of birds to find their way. The case of the golden plover may serve as an example. Those that nest near the Arctic ocean gather in Labrador in July. They stay here and gather considerable reserve of fat and then cross to Nova Scotia. Thence they strike out to sea directly for the northern coast of South America, more than 2,000 miles away. If the weather is fair they winter in Argentina. For the return trip, some 8,000 miles in all, the birds follow an entirely different course going through Central America and up the Mississippi valley.

The most recent contribution to the study of migration is the development of bird banding. Light aluminum rings, bearing a serial number and a return address, are placed on the legs of young birds in the nest, or on those of adults. This work has been taken up by the bureau of biological survey in Washington.

Franklin Wore Original Bifocals

It is not generally known that Benjamin Franklin was the inventor of a musical instrument which he called an "Armonica," to be played with the fingers. This he described as "glasses blown as nearly as possible in the form of hemispheres," of varying sizes and each fitted with a hole or "socket" in the center. With cork bushings the spheres were mounted upon a spindle long enough to accommodate a "keyboard" of three octaves, the spindle being turned, very much like a sewing machine, by a treadle. The largest spheres were nine inches in diameter, the smallest three inches, and all of them were ground very thin at the outside edges. They were tuned by grinding them into agreement with the notes of a harpsichord, wries Archibald Douglas Turnbull in Popular Science Monthly for November.

Franklin gave a few pointers on how to play this instrument: "Wet the glasses with a sponge of clean water occasionally. Turn the spindle away from you. By drawing the fingers over the wet glasses the melody is produced"—a glorified application of running a finger around the top of a tumbler.

Franklin also is credited with having designed the earliest bifocal spectacles. A pair of such lenses was constructed under his personal direction in Paris. In describing it, he wrote that it had long been known that men often needed one lens for reading and another for distinguishing distant objects. His own experience was the usual one—having two pairs of spectacles, he always had the wrong one at hand. And at table he needed both pairs, one for seeing his food, the other for reading the expression on the face of his opposite French neighbor.

Having hit upon the idea of the split lens, the two parts differently ground and then glued together, he was delighted. He was now able to manage both food and friends merely by dropping his eyes or raising them. The device, he declared, as well as the rather gallic gesture of the eyes in "making it easier to understand and to be understood" in Paris, has "helped my French wonderfully."

'Dead' American Girl's Honeymoon of Horror

How Carol Pennington, the Daughter of a Kansas Farmer, Finally Escaped From the Inhuman Tortures of Her Young and Handsome Porto Rican Husband and Returned to Those Who Thought Her Dead

Carol Pennington as she looked when she met the romantic Eduardo Salazar at an American university and before her horrible honeymoon in a filthy tropical hut

"Eduardo caught me when I tried to escape and was fiendish in his cruelty. Stinging gnats left great welts on my body and slimy lizards dropping from the roof filled me with terror."

A FEW years ago on the campus of the University of Missouri the students were interestedly watching the development of a rather unusual romance. Pretty golden-haired Carol Pennington, the rosy-cheeked daughter of a Kansas farmer, blind to all the attractions of the handsome, athletic, American students, was daily becoming more and more in love with Eduardo Salazar, a sun-tanned Porto Rican, a student of scientific farming and reputed to be a wealthy direct descendant of Capt. Gomez Salazar, companion of Ponce de Leon, intrepid Spanish explorer.

Carol was more or less a belle of the campus. If it hadn't been that her eyes were at all times riveted on the handsome Porto Rican, there would have been a score of other youths who would have given the sunny-haired, bright-eyed Kansas girl their college boy hearts.

But "there wasn't a chance," for every day Carol and her dark-hued sweetheart were seen threading their way to classes arm and arm under the university elms, and so far as they were concerned the campus was deserted.

In this manner four years of college life passed and on commencement day Carol not only received a diploma but a proposal of marriage.

Carol's parents, simple Western folks, were not so cosmopolitan as their daughter. They regarded the Porto Rican as something akin to an African and they were decidedly against having such a dark-shaded young man for a son-in-law.

In fact, they were so violently opposed to marrying their daughter to a "yellow" man that Carol saw it was a case of choosing between her parents and the man she loved. And like most love-struck girls Carol found the choice easy.

So the two who had become very close to each other in the four years of their student days in the little college, ran away to New York city en route to the large and wealthy estates of the Salazars, in Eduardo's native country.

After a hasty marriage in a tiny chapel in New York, the two boarded the steamer San Juan. The last glimpse of them saw the happy bride leaning far over the railing to say goodby and her fine looking husband with a protective arm thrown over her shoulders.

A little note penned in New York reached the Penningtons out in Kansas and after they had recovered from their first shock at their child's elopement, they anxiously awaited further news.

Six months passed and at last the postman did bring a strange looking rice paper envelope containing a letter from Porto Rico. Mrs. Pennington snatched it and frantically tore it open. Its briefness was a forewarning before her blurred eyes read its contents.

The blithe, pretty little Carol was dead!

Eduardo, in a short paragraph, broke the tragic news. He wrote that his wife had never become acclimated to the tropics and had succumbed to sprue, a tropical disease which takes a heavy toll in human life. Her body, he wrote, had been buried in the Protestant cemetery at San Juan.

The parents of the pretty co-ed were heart broken. Bitterly they regretted the cruel destiny which barred them from their baby in her last moments.

A year passed and the friend who aided Carol in her elopment one day received a note signed "Carol Pennington."

Then one day Carol Pennington walked in her friend's door, a pitiful little wraith of the young and beautiful Carol, with hair in whose drabness one could only faintly discern gleams of its former gold and in whose eyes the amber light was strangely clouded.

Like one recounting the strange experiences of a horrible dream, she began to tell a story vivid with details that had been impressed in her mind by the horror that attended them:

"It was a marvelous trip down, and Eduardo was, it seemed to me then, the most unusual of bridegrooms. It was all quite as though we were still lovers.

"One night Eduardo pointed out the Southern Cross—that shining figure of constellations only visible in tropical skies—and whispered how for generations the Salazars had claimed their loves, first when it was seen through the branches of the palm trees.

"I was somewhat surprised that there was no one to meet us when our boat landed at San Juan, for I had been somewhat curious to meet the proud Salazars.

"Eduardo came back shortly from his quest for a taxi and announced that he had received a message that his family had the week before all left unexpectedly for Madrid, Spain, where a sister lay ill.

"Once we passed a great white house with parapets overlooking the harbor and over which flew the glorious Stars and Stripes. The flag caused a sudden lump to come in my throat—this bit of my country set in such strange surroundings. I said something of the kind to Eduardo and was surprised at his quick answer:

I started to argue with him and discovered for the first time the grudge he seemed to hold in his heart toward America.

"We had left the town behind and were speeding along at a frightening rate on smooth white roads. I turned questioningly to Eduardo.

"'My hacienda is far from here; we must travel fast,' he explained, speaking rapidly to the driver. Once we passed one of the low thatched native huts which had so delighted me upon the first hour of our journey.

"In another hour I knew the worst. When the car finally stopped it was before, not a fine 'hacienda casa,' as I had imagined in my mind as the estate of the ancient Salazars, but before one of these wretched huts, placed on the side of a hill!

"Around the doorway scuttled lean red pigs; in front, rose countless rows of palm trees—the palms through which the Salazars watched the Southern Cross when they claimed their loves.

"A filthy old woman appeared from around the side of the hut and Eduardo went over to her and began talking to her, pointing at me.

"Eduardo had dismissed the auto and going over to the trunks which he had thrown off he kicked them with his foot.

"'You will not need these, dulce, for I have brought you out here to teach you to be a Puertoriqueno, and to show you how a Salazar can love. A realization of the days that were to follow rushed over me.

"Those days it would be impossible for me to describe. Eduardo seemed suddenly transformed to some sort of demon.

"There in that hut, reeking with the mingled odor of the tobacco leaves drying on the wall and the swine that ran freely through the doors. I lived through hell. My clothes were taken away and a horrible concoction, brewed by the old woman, who appeared at intervals during the day, was given me for food.

"In the day I suffered in the heat, the solitude and misery of my surroundings, and at night in the fierce and tireless embraces of my husband. Was it any wonder that I sometimes thought I was going mad?

"I made many attempts to escape. Once I fashioned a dress for myself out of banana leaves and used orange tree thorns for pins. I hid it in a little thicket of quava leaves behind the hut and one day when Eduardo had joined the men at work I hastened to don my rustic dress and started down the hillside in the direction I had seen the car take.

"Eduardo, however, soon discovered my absence and overtook me. My attempted escape had only made matters worse, for after that Eduardo was almost fiendish in his cruelty.

"He tied me in the dirty hut where in the heat of the day I lay with the little stinging gnats making welts on my body. Great slimy lizards, which had frightened me so when I first came by dropping from the roof on us at night, ran over me.

"Sometimes a sudden tropical storm came up and lashed the hut. When the great sheets of rain swept across the entrance of the hut I welcomed the cooling flood on my body and prayed that I might contract a cold that would put an end to my suffering. I do not know how I went on living."

Other more revolting details entered into Carol's narrative—her husband's anger because she bore him no child and the repulsive traditions practiced upon the little American wife by the old woman who mumbled mysteriously as she brewed some strange herb in her kettle.

A kind fate, however, spared the wretched girl the burden of motherhood under such conditions and assisted her in her escape from the hell she had endured for a year.

She tells this thrilling story of her escape:

"One day one of the peons dropped his overalls not far from the hut. They often did this, wearing only their shirts as a work garment. As soon as he turned his back I darted out, slipped into the filthy garment and without a backward glance sped down the hill.

"As I ran I prayed fiercely that God—the Great Spirit of the Indian girl whose soul the Peurtoriqueno's folk tales tell inhabits the royal palm—would shield me in my flight. I don't know how long it took me to reach the valley and to come upon the smooth paved road that had been my wonder and delight the first part of our journey a year ago.

"I hid behind a great bush heavy with blossoms. Its name and legend as told to me by Eduardo on our strange journey rushed to my mind.

"It was the 'Corazon de bombre,' which means the heart of man. Its blossoms open blood red in the morning, pale to pink at noon and in the evening drop off wan and white. The love of a day—thus it had been with Eduardo's tempestuous wooing.

"I was roused from my reverie by the sound of an automobile coming down the road. I stood out on the side and began waving my arms. The motor car stopped and two men leaned inquiringly out. As I spoke the man nearest me pointed to the driver and said, 'Americano.' No word in the Spanish language ever sounded so sweet."

It did not take Carol long to repeat enough of her story to enlist the sympathy of the American. He was that day on his way to San Juan to bid farewell to his sweetheart, the daughter of a United States army officer who had been stationed at Fort San Juan.

Carol was smuggled into the girl's stateroom on the steamer "San Lorenzo" in order to make her escape certain. She was fitted out with a wardrobe and when the ship was well out to sea the captain was confided in, and gave valuable assistance.

After she had rested a few days and shopped in New York, Carol returned to her people in Kansas, with whom she had, of course, communicated in the meanwhile. How her return was explained to her townspeople who had mourned her as dead for nearly a year is a story by itself, but it was some time before the details of the terrible tragedy leaked out.

How Much Must a Trained Police Dog Know?

Miss Elsa Doussin, of Long Island, Internationally Famous Trainer of the World's Most Intelligent Breed of Canines, Tells How Thoroughbreds Are Taught Obedience, Fearlessness, Good Habits, Refusal of Food From Strangers and Many Other Things

Miss Elsa Doussin, school teacher to highly intelligent police dogs, instructing several of her bright pupils in some of the many things they must learn.

AWAY back in the dim days of the prehistoric past a cold and hungry wild dog crept into the crude shelter of a cave man, bared his fangs but slunk close to the fire and cast an untamed eye about for a scrap of hard wrought food.

The man and the dog were enemies and killers; they had no trust in each other or the many brutes that roamed the primeval forests. Their chance meeting about the same blazing pile of sticks was not a friendly affair.

But after a long process of wary approaches and withdrawals the man laid a hairy hand on the head of the dog and when the inevitable growls were over and the canine learned that the man was inclined to be peaceable, man and beast curled up together beside the fire. And the universal bond of friendship of man and dog was made.

Men and dogs have been pals through long centuries, largely because the dog is a beast of more than ordinary intelligence. He is the only animal that has the instinct to protect the property of his master and the absolute love and loyalty that often costs him his life in defense of human friends.

Perhaps the most notable example of intelligence in canines is found in the police dog, some of which are amazingly intelligent. They have been schooled in many things and one frequently wonders just how much a trained police dog has to know to rank as a throughbred.

Strangely enough a young woman—Miss Elsa Doussin, of Springfield Gardens, L. I.—can answer this question better than almost any one else in the world, for training police dogs is her life work and she has an uncanny understanding of her charges.

Her fame is international. She is never afraid, impatient or bored at the hard task of developing the natural intelligence of the many dogs in the Long Island kennels of Capt. Ernest Engerer, who regards her as unsurpassed in her profession.

To the question: "How much must a trained police dog know?" Miss Doussin replied without hesitation:

"He must know eighteen things besides the usual things that a police dog in a private family may be taught. But we set aside six things absolutely essential for every police dog to know—even though his master intends him to lead the most retiring life.

"These six are obedience, of course, first of all; then to 'heel,' with or without a leash; to sit down and 'lay down;' to watch objects, to refuse food from strangers, to keep proper habits in the house, and, last, fearlessness in gun fire.

"The other twelve are: the ability to carry objects, to retrieve, to jump high distances, to jump with objects in the mouth, to protect his guardian, to watch, to attack a prisoner, to watch a prisoner, to hold a prisoner who has attempted flight, to be fearless in the face of a club or other bludgeon and to find lost objects.

"First of all, we don't try to teach every dog every trick. We study our dogs. Capt. Engerer has police dogs here that are geniuses—Houdinis, Lloyd Georges; grim-faced woman suffragists.

"He also has the pleasant rank and file of just ordinary good police dogs, like good, middle-class ladies of a sewing circle or good, middle-class men of the weekly luncheon club. And we have, in addition, the just plain misfits among these dogs of an extraordinary high breed of intelligence; the fools, even the idiots, and what we loosely call among humans, the morons.

"We select those which seem to be worthy of the 'rapid advance' classes and we set them aside for the learning of many tricks. But at first, we teach all the dogs obedience, since a dog that does not obey is not worth his keep. The police dog must be eight months old before we start.

"The first morning, we gently lead him out of his kennel by the steel chain which he wears at our academy. We walk ahead with him, carefully seeing that he always keeps to the rear left. This is 'heeling'—that is, keeping just behind the master. Then we stop; he should stop too. If he does not, we pull on the chain and halt him.

"Some dogs will learn to stop, to come, to run, to halt, all in a two-hour lesson the first morning. This simple drill in obedience practically all dogs will learn by the end of a week. If a dog doesn't learn this, he is a hopeless imbecile, and we are sure he will not learn any other trick.

"The very hardest of these first essential six things to teach a police dog is to refuse food from a stranger. Yet I include this in what all dogs should know—the grammar school curriculum of any dog, because most dogs will raise up some enemies to himself in a community. And one among them may think of poisoned meat.

"To teach the dog this food trick, first of all see that he is well fed and regularly fed at whatever time—once a day—which you have set for his daily meal. Then take him, if possible, when he is not hungry, in fact, when he is rather replete. Let some person strange to him give him food. He will start to eat it; let the stranger, with a cane, push the food from his grasp. Then the teacher must come forward, shake her finger, talk in tones which the dog associates with reproval.

"I've had dogs refuse food from strangers, beautifully, many times in my presence or when I was near. Then I've hidden and seen the same dog accept the same piece of meat. It takes great patience and much moral suasion to bring this trick finally home, but keeping to it, and finally reproving the dog from your hiding place, will almost always make him drop the meat and master the trick."

So Miss Doussin could go on, explaining Capt. Engerer's methods and her own methods for teaching the police dog what he should know. But there are physical requirements and care, without which even the dog who is a genius will never pass his tests or enter the high school. Miss Doussin thus explains these:

"The worst menace to the police dog—of to any dog—is distemper. Keep the dog well aired, properly fed, well exercised and happy and you've gone 90 per cent of the way toward keeping him in proper health to learn his tricks.

"A full-grown police dog should have about three quarts of food at night, beef stew, with bones and meat and good vegetables; lamb or mutton stew, oxtail soup and beef hearts—never any other of the beef entrails.

"Vegetables are of prime importance to keep the dog in tone. Give him exactly what you would give a baby or growing child—to supply the much discussed vitamins.

"As for other care—see that your police dog daily has a good half hour's run at least. Don't bathe him, unless you feel you must. A properly fed, properly exercised dog keeps himself clean—if his owner will simply brush him down well every day.

"Don't chain the dog unless you must; rather teach him by praise to stay at home; scold him—never whip him—if he has a habit of straying off."

So Miss Doussin explains a few of the points in the training of the gently nurtured police dog.

Alfa, a German police dog, wearing the gold medal with which he was decorated after rescuing a thirteen-year-old girl from the icy waters of a pond

Tracking and holding criminals is an art that the most intelligent and fearless police dogs learn quickly. A man has little chance of escape when a highly trained police dog gets on his trail.

Captain Engerer's son marveling at the high-jumping ability that police dogs develop in the course of their training by his father and Miss Doussin.

Now there has grown up a belief, since police dogs were introduced into our country following the world war, that he is half wolf, and bred in the last generation or two from this wild creature of the woods who is forever the enemy of man. Capt. Engerer has studied the history of dogs, and he explains the real story:

"The police dog came from the wolf—certainly," he says. "Just about the time when the Neanderthal man was dragging his new captured mate into his cave by her hair, the wolf—ancestor of the modern police dog—was being bred for shepherd purposes. But police dogs have not been wolves for centuries, any more than men have eaten raw beef since the Stone Age.

"You ask how I explain these stories, made so much of, about police dogs suddenly attacking their masters or strangers, leaping at the throat, threatening murder.

"I explain these very easily. Horses now and then run amuck—and upset the vegetables all over the passers-by. Men run amuck and shoot. So do dogs.

"When a police dog—I like the term 'shepherd dog' best, and that is what they are called in the old country—is snappy and surly, he tells one story plainly. His master has been cruel to him in puppyhood, or else the dog has been educated by a stupid, cruel trainer."

So much on the prevalent belief that there is a strain in the big police dog not to be trusted. Capt. Engerer ends the story with a few anecdotes about three dogs he trained or sold. The first was a dog that attended the captain's academy.

The captain had taught the dog until his sense of smell was extraordinarily developed even for a dog. By a curious round of travel the dog finally reached Germany, home of his ancestors, where he became a police dog stationed in a police house.

One night a coat was brought in, which could have belonged to any one of eight men suspected of a murder. The dog was allowed to smell the coat, then to pick its owner in the line-up. He picked out the murderer, who confessed with outcries when the dog leaped at him.

Capt. Engerer tells of two most faithful police dogs. One was present in the house when his master was suddenly taken to the hospital. The dog was boarded away, but came home after his master's funeral. The dog traced the last journey of the man he loved to the cemetery and lay across the grave, refusing food.

The other dog, who had been away from home during his master's illness, broke into the room where the man lay dead. The dog prostrated himself by the coffin and died suddenly of a broken heart.

Men Lose Weight in the Moonlight

When the moon passes vertically overhead did you ever notice that you lost weight? Well, you do, says the Abbe Moreaux, noted French astronomer. A man weighing 168 pounds weighs 1-3200th of an ounce less under the moon.

It is the same influence, says the November Popular Science Monthly, that causes the tides, perhaps the best known example of the moon's meddling in our affairs. Here's what happens to make the tides, according to the abbe:

If the water loses weight when the moon is overhead, the column of water directly under the moon, must be higher than in other parts in order that the pressure on the sea floor may remain the same and equilibrium be maintained. This bulging outward of the ocean's surface is the tide.

Now, here is an odd thing. When the moon passes straight over New York, for instance, not only are the tides the same in exactly opposite parts of the earth, but the other magnetic effects likewise. At the same time that we lose that 1-3200th of an ounce, so do the Chinese on the other side of the globe.

The earth may be 81 times the size of the moon, but that does not mean we can look upon it with contempt, according to the abbe. The moon pulls us hither and yon, working sometimes with, sometimes against, the sun. The effects depend upon the position it occupies in the heavens. A thin, sickle-shaped new moon hasn't much attraction except for popular song writers, and simply works with the sun. When it gets full, it gets independent and pulls in the opposite direction.

The more he has studied the moon, the more things on this earth the abbe has found it mixed up with. For instance, gardeners who sow certain plants "in the dark of the moon" or when it is full, according to the effects they wish to obtain, may not be merely perpetrating some old hocus-pocus after all, he declares. He thinks the moon's action is really effective in increasing the size of plant cells. Cryptogamous plants, for example, those that have no flowers and propagate by spores, seem to grow best during the full moon.

THAT REMINDS US

The Dempsey-Tunney fight and the enormous crowd it attracted to Philadelphia reminds Don C. Seitz, American historian, of the Roman coliseum "where the populace gathered to slake their thirst for gore."

Mr. Seitz writes in the Outlook of October 6 as follows:

"The rupturing of the peaceful atmosphere of the Quaker City by the howls of prize-fight fans who assembled to observe the contest between Messrs. Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney has been said to mark an epoch in what was once called the 'manly art of self-defense.' It is, instead, a mere throwback to the Roman coliseum, where the populace gathered to slake their thirst for gore. The cries from the usual ringside as repeated over the radio are fit to chill the blood. There is something thrilling in the roar of the lions, even the long note of the wolf and the barking of the hyena are not so bad. But this concentration of human voices, expressing as it does the lowest and most brutal of human emotions, and exultant echo of primal ferocity and an utter lack of mercy, will long ring in the ears of those who have listened in. Probably those who join in the savage chorus are unconscious of the horrifying sound produced in their ecstasy. That there was at Philadelphia a smaller manifestation of this sort than common was probably because the rain chilled the vocalism.

"What is there in human psychology that rejoices in seeing two men pummel each other until their faces drip with blood and one or the other fails to come to the scratch? Fighting is a primary human instinct. Lives there a boy who has escaped a conflict? I doubt it if he has reached the sage age of ten.

"Is the practice manly? I doubt it. There can be no manliness in brutality, yet those of English blood preferred it to the crossing of blades, a Latin amusement, more refined, but much more deadly. So we shall probably keep on building bigger stadiums and charging higher admission to bigger crowds, despite the prayers of churches and the reprehensions of the good."

INVISIBLE ICEBERGS.

So many people can not understand why the lookouts of vessels fail to see the great white icebergs looming against the darkness of the night. It would seem that the monstrous mass of ice should be clearly visible at a distance of many miles.

Yet a sailor would tell you something that is hard to believe—that we can not see white against black at all. For example, stand about a block from a white building on a moonlight night, and it will be impossible to distinguish it from the dark sky.

Nor is it possible to see white against white. On a clear starry night the berg is so nearly the color of the heavens that the difference between the two can not be noted. The survivors of wrecked boats testify that they could clearly view the black sinking ships from their lifeboats at a distance of many miles, but they had not been able to see the iceberg at a distance of 50 feet.

An iceberg is only visible at night when the side viewed is in shadow and thus shows black against the light sky.

A machine has now been invented which registers when the ship comes into the neighborhood of an iceberg, so that there is no longer the great danger of running into one.

SEVENTEEN CITIES SHARE LOW DEATH RATE

Seventeen cities in the United States virtually share honors for being the safest places for a baby to live. The infant mortality rate for each was less than 40 per 1,000 births, a recent health survey shows.

Two of the towns, Stonington, Conn., and Winona, Minn., had but 32 deaths per 1,000 babies born. Authorities conclude, as a result of the report, that small towns can be made safer than larger ones.

Small towns generally would be healthier than large cities were it not for the fact that most small places lack the public health departments needed to make and enforce sanitary laws and insure pure milk supply, experts say.

Positions of honor as to low mortality among the various groups of cities in the United States, as shown in the survey, were: Cities of 250,000 and over, Seattle, Wash.; Portland, Oreg., and San Francisco; 100,000 to 250,000, Salt Lake City, Oakland, Calif., and Cambridge; 50,000 to 100,000, Union City, N. J.; Brockton, Mass., and Tacoma, Wash.; 25,000 to 50,000, Oak Park, Ill.; Malden, Mass., and Everett, Wash.; 10,000 to 25,000, Stonington, Winona and Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

Are Millions of Humans Doomed to Starve?

Many Economists Predict That World-Wide Famine Is Inevitable With the Rapidly Increasing Growth in Population

A typical street scene in New York's East Side, one of the most densely populated areas in America, which certain students of humanity's future declare will some day be ridden by death-dealing famine

DOES a vast and terrifying calamity threaten humanity?

Scholarly economists see today a "cloud no bigger than a man's hand" that seems destined inevitably to grow and grow until it brings a deluge of death down on the human race.

The menace it carries is that of wholesale famine, with literal starvation for great multitudes of mankind. This must surely come, they say, if the world's population goes on increasing at the present rate; for before long—that is to say, not later than a couple of centuries hence—there will not be enough food to go around.

Estimates of future increase of the world's population vary. According to some authorities, it may be expected to double in the next sixty-five years. That is probably too short a reckoning. But it will undoubtedly double within 100 years, giving the globe 3,400,000,000 inhabitants by the year 2026.

The phrase, "This is a small world," is trite, but we are beginning to realize its grim significance. The earth's surface area is fixed, and that portion of it which is capable of producing food is steadily diminishing.

The tillable lands of the globe can produce food for just so many people and no more. When the limit is reached and passed, what then?

Already the limit has been reached in China and in India, where the peoples are so crowded that the falling of a single season's crop production lightly below normal average means widespread famine. When there is a material crop shortage thousands perish of starvation.

Europe today has more inhabitants than it can well support, with consequent economic struggle that has been and will continue to be the cause of wars. An outlet for its surplus populations is being eagerly sought in Africa, but the Dark Continent is mostly desert North and South of its equatorial zone, which is uninhabitable by white races. In the New World there is still plenty of room, but this continent is rapidly filling up.

An estimate deemed liberal puts at 900,000,000 the maximum number of people which the United States can maintain. This country can feed no more, and it will not be so very long before that limit is reached. It is not our land area that sets the limit, but water supply. We are short of water.

That seems a surprising statement, but the truth of it is easily shown. The average rainfall for the United States is thirty inches a year. To maintain full productivity, sixty inches are required. Half of the country is underwatered, much of it so far as to be practically uninhabitable.

The United States, with its present area and a doubled rainfall properly distributed, could produce enough crops to feed 1,800,000,000 people—twice the number it is capable of supporting.

One-sixth of the United States is desert. It is desert merely for lack of water. Where that can be supplied, the driest waste is quickly transformed into a fruitful garden. But, according to government estimate, not more than 5 per cent of the whole can possibly be watered by reclamation engineering.

Water supply, and not extent of territory, determines the number of human beings a given area can maintain. Between the Rocky mountains and the Sierra Nevadas lies a vast basin of unproductive, hopeless desert which, if it were adequately watered, could produce enough food to support a population greater than that of the whole United States today.

In the not very distant past all of that region was moist and rich with a luxuriant vegetation. It has become desert through a gradual process of drying up. Never again will it be anything but desert.

There was a time when the ocean covered the entire globe. Eventually land began to emerge in spots, and after a while the continents appeared. Naturalists say that the earliest ancestors of man were presumably marine creatures which, crawling out on the shores, gradually became land animals. They may conceivably have resembled gigantic lizards.

In a sense, man is today an aquatic animal. How much water do you suppose that you can consume in a year? Or perhaps it would be better to say, how much do you require in a twelvemonth for your maintenance? The answer is a million and a half gallons.

A modern mermaid in a one-piece suit would consider that pretty sizable allowance for swimming purposes in a bathing pool.

What she drinks is a relatively small quantity, amounting to hardly more than 250 gallons a year. It is her food that is expensive in terms of water.

Suppose that she eats 400 pounds of food in that length of time. To grow the grain for making a pound loaf of bread no less than 500 gallons are required. To produce the corn, alfalfa, or other feed for making a pound of meat, 4,000 to 8,000 gallons must be supplied.

Unfortunately, while the world's population rapidly increases, the tillable areas of the globe are decreasing. On all the continents there are great deserts and those waterless and unproductive areas are steadily and remorselessly spreading.

That is the principal reason for the spread of the deserts, which has been very considerable within historic times, and which as time goes on will continue.

In the Libyan desert of Africa, now wholly destitute of water, there were many prosperous ancient cities, whose ruins remain today to tell the story of their abandonment in the face of drought. The march of the desert overwhelmed them and drove away their inhabitants.

The Sahara, greatest of all deserts, with the Libyan and Nubian deserts to the east, extends clear across northern Africa from the Atlantic ocean to the Red sea, and north and south over more than 15 degrees of latitude. Unquestionably there was a time when all of it was a tropical garden, largely covered with forests.

In the western Saraha there is a vast depression or "sink," 200 feet below the level of the ocean and covering about 70,000 square miles. The Arabs call it the Great Hollow.

Only ten centuries ago it was occupied by an inland sea, an arm of the Atlantic. Today, 30 miles north of Cape Juby, may be seen the old entrance channel through which the waters of the Atlantic formerly flowed, a gap 2½ miles wide, flanked by lofty precipices. Accumulations of sand blocked it, and the sea dried up.

A canal 6 miles long would again admit the ocean, fill up the immense basin and recreate the vanished sea. It is an engineering scheme now seriously thought of.

The dense populations of southern Asia occupy a mere fringe of cultivable territory along the edge of that continent. The interior is mostly desert, and the same is true of Australia.

The general drying up tendency is made manifest by the marked shrinking, even within historic times, of the Caspian sea, and by the steady decrease of the amount of water carried by the rivers of middle Europe. It is so with rivers all over the world.

Opposing the idea that overpopulation of the earth threatens mankind with wholesale starvation, some authorities express a confident belief that new discoveries will furnish a solution for the problem.

They say that plant growth represents a slow and wasteful way of producing food. Of the energy delivered by the rays of the sun upon a cultivated acre of land, only 2 per cent is utilized by the plants and several months are required to produce the crop.

Plants are built mainly of air and water. The most important contribution of the soil is in the shape of mineral salts. We shall learn after a while, the scientists believe, so to utilize the nitrogen of the air and the energy of the sun as to produce unlimited quantities of "synthetic" foods, palatable and nutritious. It is even possible that eventually agriculture for food supply will be abandoned. Factories will take the place of farms.

Other authorities declare this to be the stuff of which dreams are made. They say that man never will be able to imitate successfully the elaborate chemical processes by which nature produces food materials in the shape of plants; and, even if this could be accomplished, synthetic foods would cost too much to manufacture. Nature can always underbid the chemist.

On the side of the optimists is Dr. H. E. Barnard, president of the American Institute of Baking, who says: "Processes have already been developed for the production of human food through the growth of the yeast plant. A factory of the size of a city block, employing 20 or 30 men, could in 24 hours produce in the form of yeast as much food as 1,000 farm workers could raise on 70,000 acres of land in an entire year."

Where agriculture is concerned, the problem is always one of water supply. Poor or wornout land may be rendered productive by the use of suitable fertilizers. Improved plant varieties may increase crops or extend the areas over which they can be successfully grown.

The ocean, it is claimed, is a "storehouse of food as yet untouched." That is a statement too vague to be convincing.

The sea, at and near its surface, is rich in microscopic plant life, which is the fundamental source of food for all marine animals. But we can not very well grow crops in the ocean, unless possibly seaweeds on a limited scale along shore, and the only worthwhile food it offers us is in the shape of fishes, mollusks and shellfish.

For a number of years past the United States fisheries bureau has been planting the sea off the New England coast with eggs and newly hatched "fry" of the cod, haddock, pollock and winter flounder. Especially with the last named of these there has been some success, and doubtless operations of the kind will be conducted on a greater scale in the future.

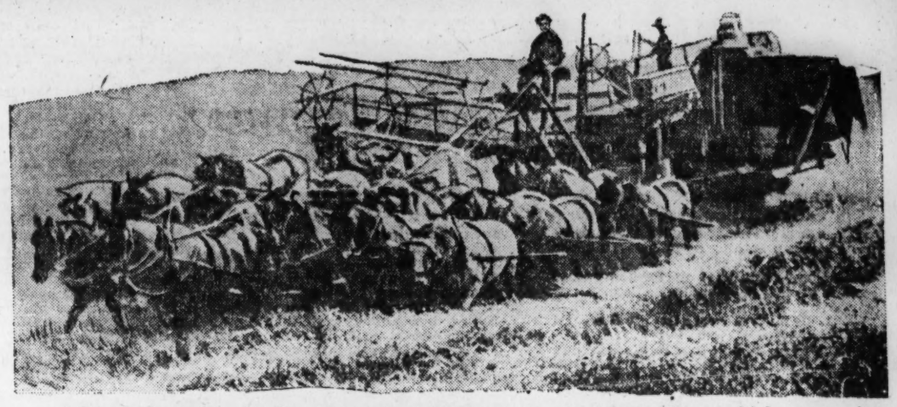

In nature, animal species usually multiply up to the limit of food supply, which acts as a check. At some time in the not distant future such a check must operate to stop the increase of human beings.

But, as the limit is more nearly approached, with a consequent intensification of the struggle for existence, there are likely to be wars on a vast and frightfully destructive scale.

They may be wars in which the main object sought is the complete annihilation of enemy populations in order that there may be food enough for the victors.

Territories thus made vacant by conquest will be available for tillage by the conquerors, and in the struggle for food supply only the strongest nations will be able to survive.

A harvesting scene in the great wheat fields of the American West, which economists declare will in the not very distant future be inadequate to prevent wholesale death by starvation.

Below—A huge bamboo water wheel used by the Chinese to irrigate land that would otherwise produce no food for a country many times swept by famine.

China is already so thickly populated that thousands of the country's inhabitants live in boats packed together along the river banks. This scene in the harbor of Canton graphically shows why, in years of less than normal harvest, thousands of Chinese die of starvation.

India is already an overpopulated country that has many times felt the horrible grip of famine. The country's need of more room for its people and for crop raising is clearly depicted in this gathering about a Mohammedan mosque in Delhi.

GOVERNMENT ENDS EPIDEMICS

The swift rise and fall of a serious disease has been graphically demonstrated recently with the mysterious "Haff sickness" which for a while threatened to ruin part of Germany's fishing industry. How modern medical science can hunt down obscure causes and apply the remedy is excellently shown in this episode. Through a government edict, an epidemic was suddenly ended.

A little over two years ago fishermen in the stretch of shallow water along the southern end of the Baltic between Koenigsberg and Danzig, known locally as "the Haff," began to develop a very painful and in some cases fatal disease. Its symptoms were extreme pain and a kind of paralysis of some of the leg muscles, together with certain physiological disturbances. It always attacked its victims while they were out in their boats, and generally in the early morning, while the mists still hung over the water. A few days on shore usually resulted in complete victory, but a return to fishing might bring on repetitions of the malady. In a short time the Haff fisheries were badly demoralized.

The theory that it might be an epidemic of a germ disease quickly went by the board. The "Haff sickness" had none of the earmarks of an ordinary epidemic. Likewise the theory that it might be caused by the eating of spoiled fish or eels had to be abandoned, because many of the victims did not eat fish, and fish-eaters on shore never suffered from the disease.

The investigators finally came to the conclusion that there must be something in the water that rose into the morning mists and caused the disease by poisoning the air. Research along this line soon showed that they were right.

The disease was really a kind of arsenic poisoning, caused by the discharge into the water of great quantities of factory wastes from cities on shore. These wastes contained arsenic compounds, which were altered into gaseous forms by small organisms living in the water, and thus released into the air to plague the luckless fishermen. The arsenic was present in the factory materials only as an impurity, so that it was no hardship to the industries when the government ordered them to change to the use of other materials with a lower percentage of arsenic. Within a few months the "Haff sickness" had virtually vanished.

AN ODD MEMORY TEST.

With plenty of patience, paper and a pencil it is possible for you to remember what happened when you were six months old, declares Dr. E. Pickworth Farrow, English psychologist, in Popular Science Monthly.

For periods of one or two hours at a time, he says, write down any and every thought which occurs to you. Repeat the process several times. Then, as memories of recent happenings gradually are "worked off" on paper, you will go back to recollections of your early life.

CONSERVING FORESTS

The popular notion that the great forests of the West coast were on the way of the other forests of America—headed for depletion, and only a matter of years when they would have disappeared, is exploded in an article by Henry Schott, director West Coast Lumber Trade Extension Bureau, in the current number of Nation's Business Magazine.

Mr. Schott explains that the lumbermen of the West coast are actually operating and planning their business and their installations on the basis of an industry not for the next 20, 40 or 60 years, but for all time—to maintain a permanent supply of lumber for the United States.

The policy under which the West coast lumbermen are operating is to harvest the ripe forests and have the lumber go into useful purposes when it is at its best, and to grow a new crop just as the grain farmer of Kansas or Iowa operates in his grain fields.

The question arises why such facts were not brought to the attention of the conservation enthusiasts. That's for the lumberman to answer. Finally, the responsibility for his neglect must come back to him. Most of the lumbermen, particularly the older generation, centered their work and their thoughts in the forests and the mills. They left the selling, the contact with the consuming public, to others. Theirs was the production end; there lay the main interest in the industry as far as they were concerned.

Only recently have they come to the realization that it is a matter of duty to defend their industry and to challenge and refute statements so often based upon unconscious misinformation or ignorance.

As they have cooperated in conserving and protecting the forests against fire, they are now uniting to protect their industry against groundless aspersions. And with that policy the old attitude of letting the consumer find his way to the supply is also abandoned.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

Helen Is Involved in a Daring Conspiracy at an Exclusive Midnight Club.

"THESE supper clubs are so overrated," Helen appraised the freakish murals—green-skinned, purple-haired bathing nymphs. "How can they charge such prices?"

"Huh, these dives fixed up for the butter-and-egg alumni. More you soak 'em, better they like it."

"But it IS a good orchestra. Dear, I'd love to dance——"

"Not on that two-by-four," Warren dug into his lobster salad.

"That girl back of you—don't turn now—in the gray chiffon. Something's happened! I think someone's come in she wants to avoid——"

"Need a microscope to find the lobster in this mess," intent on his salad. "Nothing but celery and goo!"

"Dear, she looks frightened. Something's wrong! No, no more for me. That mayonnaise—I don't like the oil. The man she's with—he's trying to reassure her."

"Where's that waiter?" Warren's interest confined strictly to food. "Rotten service. Want some butter."

"She's getting up! Take mine. Oh, she looks so frightened——"

The lights out now for the next "turn." A Spanish dancer, gyrating in the spotlight. How she grimaced! Her loose, too-red lips. A soiled bouffant gown beneath the lace shawl. Raucous castanets.

"Talk to me!" A breathless whisper. "Pretend you know me. Please!"

The gray chiffon girl! Under cover of the darkness she had slipped to their table.

"He's at the door—waiting for a table. He hasn't seen me yet——"

"You've left your wrap!" Helen quick to grasp the situation.

"Oh, thank you!" as Warren hastily retrieved it. "It's my husband—he mustn't know—— Pretend I'm with you——"

"Then start eating!" Brushing the rolls from the bread plate, Warren spooned out some salad.

Helen snatched a knife, fork, and napkin from the table back of them.

Just in time! The lights flashed on.

"Quick—let's talk! He's seen me——" forking at the salad. "Boarding school—we were room-mates. Remember Professor Blake—his endless lectures?"

"Oh, yes—the class we always tried to cut," Helen swift to respond.

"And Miss Cameron in physics—Why, Hugh! Why, how lovely!"

At their table now. Tall, stern, graying hair.

"I want you to meet Mr. and Mrs.—Robinson," she stammered. "From—Kansas City. My husband, Mr. Woodruff. Mrs. Robinson's an old boarding school friend. They got in this morning—and called me up."

"Thank you," he took the chair Warren drew over from the next table.

"But Hugh, I—I thought you'd gone to Albany. Your secretary phoned——"

"No, I didn't get off. Stopped in here to see Kelly—but he's gone." Then, turning to Warren, "Mr. Robinson, you find New York a little more lively than Kansas City?"

"Somewhat," dryly.

"Expect to be here long?"

Warren evaded the question with an abrupt,

"What'll you have? Can't recommend this lobster—better try something else."

"Just a club sandwich for me. How long did you say you were staying?"

"I didn't say," curtly.

"Why—we're not quite sure," fluttered Helen, to cover Warren's rudeness. "We may go back at once—or we may stay longer. Mr. —" A panicky second—the name? "Mr. Robinson," triumphantly, "is here on business. Real estate," making conversation. "We'll stay until he closes his contracts—I mean leases——"

"Ah, real estate? Just what line of real estate?"

Warren grimly silent, ignoring Helen's frantic nudges.

"Well, not exactly real estate," forced to flounder on. Then, inspirationally, "Mr. Robinson's a real estate attorney. He's here for some clients——"

The lights out! A welcome respite. Helen leaned back, her face aflame.

Why hadn't Warren helped? How could he let her get so tangled? The girl was charming—and her appeal to them—— They must help her.

No conversation necessary now. But the air charged with mental turmoil as they watched the four polo girls—inane caperings on hobby-horses.

Then a shedding of costumes. A quick change to a frenzied Charleston.

"Which Kansas City do you live in, Mrs. Robinson?" Mr. Woodruff turned to Helen when the lights flashed back.

Which? Was there more than one? Helen's geography elementary. And Warren stolidly ignoring her S. O. S.

"Why, Hugh, what a question! There's only one Kansas City to Missourians."

"Some time since I've been out there, but I used to know your town very well. What part do you live in?"

Warren still disregarding her frantic under-the-table nudges, Helen was forced to a stammering.

"Ah! Some of the suburbs are very attractive. What part?" with maddening persistence.

"Why, it's—we're in a new suburb—Lakeview."

"Lakeview? Didn't know there was a lake near Kansas City."

"No, no, there isn't, of course, but there's quite a large pond——"

"Hugh, where is that Italian place we went to the other night? Mrs. Woodruff, flushed and nervous, again to the rescue. "Mrs. Robinson was asking about some good restaurants."

"Down on Barrow street. I'll have to look up the number."

"They have the most wonderful onion soup and chicken cacciatora—hunter style. And the most delicious zabioni—much better than we got in Italy. And I love their——"

"You don't have many Italian restaurants in Kansas City?" Mr. Woodruff, cutting short his wife's enthusiasm, turned to Warren.

"I haven't been to any. That's not a very robust sandwich. You'd better have something else."

"Nothing more, thank you. How about your Kansas City clubs? You a member of——"

With gleeful whoops, six scantily clad flappers raced into the spotlight.

A welcomed check to Mr. Woodruff's insatiable greed for Kansas City data.

Distributing toy balloons, they frollicked among the tables. Agile hips. Frizzy bobs. Frescoed faces.

"Now I don't want to hurry you off," nervoused Mrs. Woodruff the moment the lights went on. "But since Hugh's here, we'll run along home now."

"What's the rush?" protested her husband. "Not very courteous to leave your friends like this."

"Oh, it's quite all right," eagered Helen. "We're going, too." Then, fearing the awkwardness of departing together, "That is—in a little while."

"I'll see you before you go back, of course. We'll go to a matinee some afternoon. I'll call you up. It's been awfully nice to be with you," she gripped Helen's hand with a telepathic, "You've been a dear."

"We'll have to get together again," Mr. Woodruff helping his wife into her silver wrap. "Want to hear more about Kansas City."

"Oh, what a situation!" she quivered, sinking back.

"Situation plus!" grunted Warren, grimly. "But we helped her carry it off! At least I did—you were horrid. You wouldn't play up a bit. Sat there as glum—— You looked positively savage every time he asked about Kansas City."

"Kansas City!" he snorted.

"The first place she thought of. But I wanted to scream when he kept quizzing us. That Lakeview was an awful break—you wouldn't help me. Yet I think I did pretty well. Anyway, he'll never know."

"He won't eh?" savagely.

"Why? What makes you look like that? You think he suspected something——"

"Suspected!" explosively. "Woodruff knows darn well I've never been west of Chicago."

"He knows? Warren, you don't mean you know him?"

"Only for the last ten years! Belongs to every club I do."

Helen gulped. A dazed moment. Trying to grasp it.

"Oh, how ghastly! She introduced us as Robinson—and you let us run on——"

"What the devil could I do? She blurted it out before I had a look at him. After that, all I could do was keep my trap shut."

"So—so he knew all along——" still dazed. "He knew our name wasn't Robinson—and we weren't from Kansas City——"

"Percolatin' through, eh?" sarcastically.

"Then that's why he kept quizzing us about Kansas City?"

"That's why," grimly. "And the way you fell for it!"

"I was only trying to help her. Oh, he was horrid to trap us!"

"Trapped yourself. Kept spoutin' more lies—gettin' in deeper and deeper."

"But the way he led us on—he couldn't have been very angry."

"Don't know 'bout that. Where's that waiter? Pretty rotten situation for him. Darn awkward next time we meet. But he can't be sore at me—I was out of it."

"Dear, the man she was with—he didn't look half as interesting as Mr. Woodruff. And the way he disappeared——"

"He faded out of the picture—quick. Lightweight, all right. Kind women always fall for. Woodruff worth a dozen of that brand. Where's that bloomin' waiter?"

"But she seemed awfully nice. I'm sure it was only a foolish lark!"

"Maybe so. But her dumb dodge gummed the works. And you two lyin' overtime to put it across. If either of you'd had any sense, you'd have seen it wasn't goin' over."

"You want something, sir?" The head waiter paused at their table.

"The check. Send our waiter here—been tryin to get him for an hour. Kansas City—Lakeview!" with a snort. "Next time you frame up that kind of a stunt—don't put on so many frills. Cook up one or two good yarns—and let it go at that. Needn't spread 'em on with a trowel!"

DAREDEVIL FLIERS RISK LIVES IN STUNTS

"An aviation camera man asked me to fly him over Hollywood to take newspaper pictures of some stunt flying. I knew it was going to be a dangerous day's work, but I accepted the job," says a motion picture air pilot who describes in October McClure's the daredevil flying done in the name of motion picture art at the Hollywood aviation field.

"After taking off I crowded my motor and climbed for 5,000 feet—Hollywood was under me. The other two planes which were to engage in the stunt were already 1,000 feet above.

"All stunt stuff is performed over the Pacific, flying into the steady blow of the almost constant west wind. We approached the others, then on a company front of three the planes milled together, crowded in closely and moved at the same speed and as one. The motors throbbed beat for beat. This air-work is pretty, but—work.

"When the camera man takes aerial pictures, he does so from the wing. This stunt was to be a 'ladder change.' A wealthy young society girl was trying to break into the movies through daredevil aviation.

"Soon my camera man worked his dangerous way from strut to strut to the end of my wing and into 'shooting position.'

"The more distant plane crowded ahead and Hope Loring, the girl, left the cockpit and moved toward her perilous position at the extreme end of the upper right wing. In order that a daredevil may reach his or her position on the upper wing, it is necessary to climb the outer front strut from the lower to the upper wing. This climb takes all one has of nerve. Once on top, the daredevil entwines his legs around the strut and can thus take a standing position with hands free.

"The other plane came up from behind with fifteen feet of rope ladder dangling. The plane swooped upward, putting the ladder right in the girl's arms. She reached out and took it in both hands, but at the same second she noticed that the propeller was howling not more than four feet above her head. Terror-stricken by the proximity of the swirling blades, she became panicky. She reached for her hold on the struts and clinging to everything at hand, lay flat on the wing.

"As she went down she had failed to turn loose the ladder. Instead she had drawn the slack rope through the bars of the struts. We three pilots and one good photographer knew we had something big on hand, two planes tied together in flight. That's not so good. Fact is, it would be hard to think of anything worse."

The McClure's story, written by A. A. Caffrey, former A. E. F. aviator, describes how the photographer saved the girl's life and prevented the almost certain crashing of both of the stunt planes. He dropped in mid-air to the girl's plane, climbed out on the wing as the two ships flew perliously locked together, pulled her toward the center of the plane to restore balance, returned to the end of the wing, disentangled the rope ladder and swung off with it into space. Then dropping again to the first plane, he assisted in making a safe landing.

Such stunts, Caffrey describes as everyday occurrences in motion picture aviation where lives and planes are risked without a tremor for the sake of a thrilling "shot."

Tales of Real Dogs

By Albert Payson Terhune

Boatswain, Byron's Great Newfoundland Dog.

A century or more ago all Europe was the excited and sometimes scandalized admirer of a lame man who wore long hair and low collars and who combined a genius for wonderful poetry with the soul of a cheap charlatan and an amazing capacity as a liar.

The club-footed young man was the poet Byron, who worked harder as a writer than did any other author of his day and who pretended to hate all mankind and to be weighed down by a secret sorrow.

Women went wild over him and lovelorn swains recited his poetry by the page. He spent much of his time shut up at his family estate writing in order to get away from the thousands of admirers who forever were pestering him.

In these months of literary seclusion young Byron had one faithful chum whom he loved and of whose companionship he never grew tired. This was his huge black Newfoundland dog, Boatswain, born in 1803.

Boatswain was given to Byron when the dog was merely a clumsy black puppy, all legs, and too young to walk with any ease or grace. From the first, Boatswain and the poet were devoted friends.

For five years this friendship continued. Whenever he grew weary or disgusted with the public's adoration Byron would go out to his estate at Newstead Abbey with his big dog and live there in seclusion while he caught up with the work which his admirers had interrupted.

The two would swim together for hours in the sea. They would scale the highest crags together, the giant Newfoundland accommodating his pace to Byron's lameness. The dog would lie at Byron's feet unmoving as the poet wrote.

Then one day the great dog fell ill. Byron did not know what ailed his chum. No veterinary could be found for a day or more; so the poet had to nurse Boatswain himself unaided. Though Byron was selfish and declared he cared for nobody but himself, he worked day and night over his dog friend in a frantic effort to save Boatswain's life.

At last the veterinary arrived—too late, as often happens. (A good veterinary is apt to be in such great demand that you never can get him when you want him. And a veterinary who is not in demand and always is at home when he is called for, is likely to be incompetent.)

This veterinary of Byron's examined the Newfoundland, carefully, noting the slavering jaws and the swaying black head. Then he gave verdict. He declared the dog was mad.

It was the custom in those days—and far too often it is still the custom—to say every dog is rabid if no better diagnosis can be thought of. When a canine malady does not at once seem to be one of the common diseases, frequently the verdict of "rabies" is given.

This in spite of the fact that there is not one case of genuine rabies to 50 cases of supposed rabies. And many a harmless dog is put to death when sensible treatment might well have cured him.

The veterinary was horrified when he saw Byron wipe the foam from Boatswain's frothing lips with his own bare hands. He shouted that the poet was risking death by rabies by taking such a risk.

The two would scale the highest crags together.

Byron paid no attention to the scared warning, but went on wiping away the bloody froth and soothing his chum.

I like to remember this unselfishness of Byron's, for at least one creature in the world—dangerously idiotic as was the action. He sat beside Boatswain, smoothing him and talking tenderly to him until, in a final convulsion, the huge dog died.

"Boatswain is dead!" wrote Byron to a friend, next day, tears smearing the letter. "He expired in a state of madness, on the 18th; after suffering much, yet retaining all the gentleness of his nature to the last; never attempting to do the least injury to anyone near him."

Then Byron caused a monument to be erected over his dead dog, and he sat himself down to write an epitaph which still adorns the tomb.

The epitaph is world-famous, but on the chance that you may have forgotten it, I am going to quote it in full. It is worth rereading. Here it is:

"Near this spot are deposited the remains of one who possessed beauty without vanity; strength without insolence; courage without ferocity; and all the virtues of man without his vices.

"This praise, which would be unmeaning flattery if inscribed over human ashes, is but a just tribute to the memory of Boatswain, a dog who was born at Newfoundland, May, 1803, and died at Newstead Abbey, November 18, 1808."

This epitaph was followed by a poem, as beautiful as it was bitter. It ended with the words:

"To mark a friend's remains these stones arise.
I never knew but one—and here he lies!"

Thomas Moore, the Irish poet, said the epitaph and the poem were unequaled in pathos except by the words carven thousands of years ago on a stone that marked the burial spot of a Greek nobleman's favorite dog. This Greek epitaph was:

"Scoff not, ye who pass by, that such a monument should be erected over the bones of a mere dog. Such as I am, human tears were shed for me."

When Blue Is Not Blue.

The whims of Old Mother Nature are not easily to be accounted for. I might even go further and say they are not to be accounted for at all. Why, in a nest of eggs, all apparently alike, should one contain within it the elements to produce a bird wholly different in appearance from its brothers and sisters? At the bird hospital in Springfield, Mass., there is a pure white bluebird. Its brothers and sisters were normal. I first saw this bird when it was half grown, and was asked to identify it. Of course, I knew that I was looking at an albino; but until the bird whistled I was completely at a loss as to its identity. But there was no mistaking the plaintive whistle of the bluebird.

This bird is one of the best examples of albinism I have ever seen. It is as white as the driven snow. There is not a tinge of color on it. The eyes are pink, at times almost ruby red.

This bird was brought to the hospital when it had reached the stage of leaving the nest. It is still there and will be kept there. There is nothing the matter with it but its color, or lack of color. To set that bird free would be to invite immediate disaster. In its snow-white plumage it is too conspicuous. If it did not fall a victim to a predatory human with a gun, it would be almost certain to fall a victim to a hawk or owl.

David and Jonathan.

Shortly after the arrival at the hospital of this young white bluebird a young kingbird of about the same age was brought in. It was put in the cage with the white bluebird. An immediate friendship was the result. They sat on the perch, shoulder to shoulder, as close as they could get. One day a photographer wished to get photographs, so the birds were taken outside. The kingbird found his wings and flew to the top of a tree. Almost at once it was discovered by a mature kingbird, and the latter began to bring food to it. No one had the least idea that the young kingbird would be recaptured. The white bluebird was returned to its little cage, that it might not also escape. Presently it whistled. From the treetop down came the young kingbird, answering with the kingbird call. Straight to the cage he went, and in, and once more they sat shoulder to shoulder, snuggling each against the other. Now, when they are given the freedom of the house neither will go far from the other. The kingbird is jealous of the bluebird lest some harm may come to it. It is a clear case of David and Jonathan over again. Were this affection between two birds of the same species it would not be so remarkable. It is a beautiful thing to see, and one most interesting.

Black Chipmunks.

The direct opposite of albinism, which is a lack of coloring pigment, is melanism, which is an excess of dark coloring pigment. This sometimes results in pure black fur or feathers, which normally should be other colors. A most interesting case of this has been brought to my attention by Mrs. Lucy P. Graves. "About twenty years ago one of the neighbors' boys set a box trap and caught a coal-black chipmunk," says she. "With visions of great riches, he wrote to Barnum & Bailey and to Austin & Stone, who ran a museum in Boston. Sad to say, however, while the farm lad waited for the big offers that never arrived the little black chipmunk drooped and died.

"We didn't expect ever to see one of these rare little creatures again; so imagine our delight when on the same stone wall the next year we discovered another coal-black chipmunk. Since that time we have seen these queer little black fellows each summer. During the passing of the years the chipmunks have moved nearer our dwelling.

"This summer we have seen one many times. Often we found him in the top of a blueberry bush, filling the pockets in his cheeks. One was captured in his hands by a boy, but it was found that the little fellow was blind in one eye. He was carried back to the pasture at once and given his freedom."

This is a peculiarly interesting record because of the long span of years in which these black chipmunks have persisted. Evidently there is a strain permanently fixed. Black squirrels are in certain sections very numerous. These are but the black phase of the gray squirrel. The black chipmunk is far more rare.

A Clever Spider.

On my desk are several stalks of a coarse, broad-leaved grass from a marshy place. And each stalk contains a most unusual cradle. By folding the broad grass leaf has been made into a three-sided chamber an inch to an inch and a half long. It is lined with silk, so closely found together at the folds that until it is opened you can not guess what it contains. It is the nest of a spider—not a very big spider—known as Clubiona riparia. Within this little green chamber the mother spider establishes herself with her egg sac. Ultimately the eggs hatch and the odd little silk-lined chamber becomes a nursery. But the mother dies there. Similar nests are made by folding the leaves of the cat-tail flag.

Apparently the folding of the leaves in no-wise interferes with its growth. It is a marvelous little home. I never have seen the spider actually folding the leaf, but I should like to. To see one of these nests completed is to marvel anew at the skill and ingenuity of some of our lesser neighbors.

Almost Bedtime.

Johnny Chuck is getting fat. Perhaps I should say he is getting fatter, for he has been fat for some time. The squirrels storing away seeds and nuts long have been held up as apostles of thrift. They have nothing on Johnny Chuck. He is just as thrifty. His thrift differs in kind only. He stores his winter supply under his skin in the form of fat. I am not sure that he is not a bit wiser than his thrifty near neighbors. There is no chance that his storehouse will be robbed.

It is almost bedtime, and Johnny Chuck is nearly ready to retire. The first heavy frost will send him below the frost line, there to remain in complete oblivion while winter does its worst. I should like to have those among my readers who know of occupied woodchuck holes investigate them after the chucks have retired for the winter and let me know if they find the holes plugged with earth from within. You may have to run a stick into the hole to find this out, as in instances of which I know the plugging of the hole has been a foot or two from the entrance.

A Naturalist's Question Box.

"What are the big worms on my tomato vines? They average about four inches long. Some are light green and some are dark green. They have a sort of horn at one end, just like the thorn of a thorn bush. On the backs of two I found a lot of white things, like tiny cocoons standing on end. What are they?" asks W. G. Stockwell.

Those worms are so-called tomato worms, the larvae of a fairly common sphinx moth. A closely related caterpillar is the tobacco worm. The cocoon-like things on the backs of two of these caterpillars were cocoons. A parasitic fly had laid her eggs under the skins of these two caterpillars. The eggs had hatched and the larvae had thrived on the fatty tissues of the caterpillars. In due time they had issued through the skin, spun their cocoons, and when you found them were awaiting the final transformation. They had not killed the caterpillars, but they had taken of their vitality so that ultimately the caterpillars would die.

Good Morning, Voters!

By WILL ROGERS

WELL, I had no more than landed back in old Cuckooland and gone down and reported to the Big Boss in the Colonial Bungalow in the Dippy District than he rushed me off up into New York State to see what the chances were of being invited to Jim Wadsworth's after March first in Washington. Then he said he wished if I had the time to go on up into Canada and see what kind of a deal I could make in the way of annexation; that Canada was just about on the verge of seeing the advantages of having a working connection with some live growing concern. But I will tell you about the situation in New York State first. Jim Wadsworth has been Senator for a long time and has worked his way up till the Page Boys in the Senate know him by sight, and he is even on two or three little Committees, (Not investigating Committees), but real honest to goodness never-hold-a-meeting Committees. Jim is a good man and he is our kind of folks. He owns a big ranch in the Panhandle of Texas, and a farm in the Genesee Valley in New York State. He really makes it pay. No Gentleman business. So any man that can make a Farm pay in these times deserves not only to be a Senator but to be "Sainted."

* * * *

WELL, Jim has matched hisself a tough race. Judge Wagner of New York City, about the best man that the Democrats could beat the portals of the Apartment Houses on the East side and scare out, is running against Jim for the Senate. He is a Tammany Man, which is as big an advantage in New York City as it is a handicap out of New York. Well, ordinarily Jim would clean up on him. But Jim said he was "Wet." Now the old upstate dry Republicans think Jim's whole career is damned, so they put them up another Republican to run Independent. Well, he is drier than a fancy bathing suit at the beach.

Jim's one consolation is that this Guy is so dry that he will just about blow away before the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. This fellow is named Crisman. He is what you call a "Dog in the Manger Candidate." He knows he will never get any nearer Washington than the Susque Centennial in Philadelphia. But he is sure going to stick an oar into somebody else's propeller. So that is going to split the Republican upstate vote, so New York looks like they are in for a political Worlds Series.

* * * *

NOW you know how much chance a Tammany man would have in that Senate, with 95 Guys working against him. Say, he might be a Judge in New York, but in Washington he would just be a Justice of the Peace. That brings us down to the Governor's race. Al Smith, of course, is running again. He didn't want to run again. He has been in there so long that he felt it begin to look like it was the only job he could hold. It looked like he wasn't advancing. In fact if a man holds one job too long he don't advance; he goes back. But they finally persuaded Al to take it, as it was the best they had to offer him this year. They told him if he would struggle along on it for a while longer that along about '28 they would see if something better didn't show up, for after all being Governor of even New York is better than nothing at all. So the Republicans pulled Ogden Mills out of Congress and sent him in to bat against Smith. Course they don't figure he will get a hit, but they figure he might get a sacrifice and advance himself far enough to be put up by his Party for the Senate in '28. This fellow Mills is the man I made the Political Speech for that time in New York when I didn't even know what Party he was running on. He is a mighty nice fellow in spite of his money, and made a good showing in Congress (if such a thing is possible). This fellow Mills is a good

We might use it for a skating rink.

Campaigner, and will make a better showing than lots of people think. Course Smith has got to win by a bigger Majority than he did over Roosevelt two years ago or they will figure that he has lost prestige. So New York election this fall is really an elimination contest for the big sweepstakes. I can't tell from the platforms any difference in any of the four of them. They all say that Prohibition is the issue, and they are all on the same side of it, so it's certainly not an issue with them.

Wagner is for Light Wines.
Wadsworth is for Beer.
Mills is for Light Wines AND Beer.
And Smith is for Egg-Nog.

With all this excitement and interest it looks like a great year for the voters. I think voters will make more this fall than they have ever made on an off presidential year. I haven't heard quotations, but the fellow that sells his vote cheap this fall in any State, is crazy, and as for 1928 I am buying up options on votes for that now.

* * * *

WELL I got everything straightened out in that State, including their two principal towns of Binghamton and Buffalo and then I come on up here to Canada to see for the Boss if this country was worth taking over. England has kinder lost her hold on them and they are getting out doing a little thinking on their own. They had an election lately and the Conservatives, or the Crown Party was swamped under by the Liberals, so as I was in England at the time I read a lot of very pessimistic tales of what was happening in Canada. They claimed that on account of them living so near to us that they were soaking up a lot of our meanness. They was afraid that on account of so much American Capital being invested in here that Canada was gradually getting weaned away from them. You see the last Governor General made a decision up here just before election that changed the whole complexion of things, and that got them pretty badly riled up. They believed that a Governor General's place was in a dress suit in a Drawing Room, and not issuing any orders to anybody but the Social Secretary. It was all right for him to tell the Butler what to do, but when it come to telling Parliament what to do he was all out of order. They feel that a Governor General sent over by England occupies about the same position up here that King George does in England. That is he is all right to lead the parades, live in the Castle, name mentioned first in Prayer and Song. But any time he steps out of his Character and starts doing any heavy thinking for himself he is diplomatically requested to get right back to his Throne and be normal again. So now they are having a conference in London to decide whether he has any authority outside of who shall attend the receptions. In other words his qualifications as a Governor General should come from a study of Emily Post and not from Disraeli, or Blackstone. The only problems he is allowed to discuss is the problems of the Links, and not the problems of Government. Now from what I can see there don't seem to be any demand up here to join in and be murdered and be run over with us. They strike me as being an entirely too sane a Nation to fit in with our scheme of things down home. Why you can still buy a drink without having to take a whole case, and can believe in Evolution. You can do both of these things and not be considered an Atheist up here.

* * * *

THEY have the queerest ideas of what is right and wrong that way. Now I have no idea but what we could take them over and make a paying proposition out of them, for the country now is supplying about everything we use in the way of raw materials. But I hate to interrupt a friendship that has been going on now pretty steady since the Battle of Lake Erie. You see they don't owe us and they still think we are pretty good neighbors, so if we can just keep from annexing them and keep from loaning them anything in the way of a Government debt, why we ought to be friends for years to come. Canada is principally an Agricultural country and we raise more now than the farmers down home can sell for enough to put in the next year's crop. About the only thing I can think of we could use it for would be a skating rink in the winter and we got such a poor class of Skaters that we couldn't hardly afford to maintain it just for that. Unless we could trade in Wisconsin on it some way I can't see any reason for annexing it. So I have advised against it. There is only one advantage that it would be to us and that is it would give us a more direct line to the north Pole and that should be considered, for I think the North Pole is the next coming country. California and Florida have come into their own, but the next big boom is the Pole. I think my decision will suit President Coolidge for he has just about all he can handle down there now without annexing 8 million more farmers. What we need is some good country to annex us.

BEAUTY AND YOU "OCCASIONAL" MAKE-UP By Viola Paris

For fear "occasional" make-up might be misleading, let me say before I even start that this is not going to be a sermon about making up only occasionally or a discourse on using fewer cosmetics. Rather, it is going to be just the opposite. As a matter of fact the few people who still rail against cosmetics as an evil are only the ones who know nothing at all about them! They would be astounded to learn that a certain amount of make-up is actually beneficial to the skin. Science has progressed so far in this matter of cosmetics that we can ask little more of purity and efficacy in our recognized beauty preparations today, but we can certainly ask a great deal more in the art of their application. And that is something that we don't have to go far to ask, for it depends entirely upon ourselves.

If you were to ask the average woman how she differentiated her outdoor daytime make-up from that for evening, she would probably tell you that she put more rouge on at night, and she would consider that enough. But it is not anywhere near enough! The woman who wants to give the final perfect finish to her appearance uses make-ups that are as different from each other as her dresses. She does not take the light, clear make-up that she uses for morning into the soft, shaded lights of evening or use her subtle, higher-toned scheme for evening in the bright light of day. She plans her make-up to fit the occasion, just as she does her clothes, and she sets a splendid precedent for us all, for her effect is wonderfully successful. She has a natural, glowing beauty about her face at all times that a single make-up never achieves.

The first occasional make-up that concerns us—or should concern us—is the one for morning. As we go out shopping or down to the office on these brisk October days, what make-up should adorn our faces? In the first place, it should be as simple and natural as possible, for we are about to face the relentless light of day. One of the best ways of assuring ourselves that a make-up will not be too obviously artificial when it emerges on the street is to have a clear, unflattering mirror placed where daylight falls uncompromisingly upon it, or, if the dressing table can not be maneuvered into such a position, the hand mirror should be taken to the window and every step of the make-up should be observed therein.

The first step for this morning make-up (after the skin has been cleansed and freshened with a dash of cold water or an astringent) is the rouge, and it is a step to take with care, for only a very little should be used—less than, in fact, than at any other time during the day or night. The rouge may be liquid or paste or powder, but, whatever it is, it must be applied lightly. The orange shades of rouge are very effective for the morning and surprisingly natural, even for the dark blonde skin. The very fair skin calls, as always, for rose tints, but, for every other type, a darker-toned coloring is best for daylight. After the rouge comes the powder—naturelle or peach for the very fair, rachel for the medium or light brunets, and ochre for the dark skin—and this, too, should be applied lightly, not only to prevent it from standing out on the skin, but, also, because too heavy a layer of powder will clog the pores. Next, the lipstick—and, for daytime, the lipstick should be less bright than it is for evening and in artificial light. A cream rouge is a good substitute for lipstick in the daylight, because it is light in consistency and looks most natural of all. Mascara should never lend its dark presence to the face in the daytime, but a light paste may be applied on lashes and brows, to leave them smooth and to remove any trace of powder.

In the afternoon, make-ups are a bit more vivid. At the tea hour our faces can afford to be brighter, for there is no brilliance of daylight to brand them as artificial. Just as we put on lighter, more flattering frocks, we can choose a lighter powder and a brighter rouge and lipstick. But, above all, everything should blend. If an orange tone is chosen, it must be carried out in powder, rouge and lipstick. If you have a rose-tinted cheek, don't have a peony-red mouth.

©VOGUE

Make-up is of infinite variety and should never fail to suit the time, the place and the girl.

At night a beautiful skin can be created, even where none has been before. For slight imperfections and coarsenesses of the skin fade beneath artificial light, and more rouge is permissible to create a glow of health and a loveliness. Not that rouge should be applied in lavish amounts then, or any other time, but more than the daytime amount can be used, and in a lighter, brighter tone, with lipstick to correspond. Powder for evening takes on a new and flattering tone. The blonde with a fair and flawless skin need only use flesh powder and give thanks to Providence for her loveliness. But darker skins, less fair and less flawless, may take recourse to powders of a yellow cast in the evening and find in them an almost magical glow. Liquid powder, too, comes into its own at night. During the daytime it may be too easily observed on some skins, but beneath artificial light it lends a smooth, even finish that is at once flattering and natural.

The light that lies in women's eyes may be enlarged upon with safety and with charm after the shadows fall. Candle light will be gentle with make-up that would be too obvious in daylight. The eyelashes may be brushed with mascara—heading of the eyelashes should be reserved for behind the footlights only, and a faint line may be drawn along the bottom of the lid and faded out toward the temple. But, as at every point in make-up, this should all be done with discrimination. A touch of artificiality is permissible and effective at night, it is true, but it must have that quality of gilding the lily, as though natural beauties had been purposely high lighted by artifice.

VENETIAN GONDOLAS.

Venice, in Italy, is a city built upon little islands that are separated by canals. Along these canals the houses are built, just as we build houses along streets. As there are no streets, of course, there are no street cars or automobiles in the larger portion of the city, so the people use boats just as we do trolleys. These boats are called gondolas, and the men who guide the boats are called gondoliers. In the summer these gondoliers wear white suits, with bright-colored sashes and sometimes handkerchiefs around their necks. The gondolas themselves are long, narrow boats, black in color. Each end is pointed and rises from the water 4 or 5 feet. The gondolier rows it standing up, by pushing an oar instead of pulling it, as we row a boat in this country.

A DIFFERENT REASON.

Jack—Did you ever take your automobile apart to see how it worked?

Arthur—Well, not exactly. I have taken it apart to see why it didn't work.—Good Hardware.

RESIGNED.

Little Cora Ann had been told that she must always wait patiently until she was served at meals and not to cry across the table or grab for her food. One day, while dining at a neighbor's with her mother, the little girl was accidentally overlooked. She was very patient for a time, but at last she could bear the strain no longer, seeing everybody feeding but herself. So, leaning quietly across to her mother she said in a loud whisper: "Mother, do little girls who starve to death go to heaven?"

BEHEADED BUTTERFLIES LIVE ON.

That butterflies not only continue to live with their heads cut off, but actually survive those not subjected to decapitation, was the announcement which recently caused a stir of excitement among members of the French Academy of Science. This experiment, says Popular Science Monthly, was carried on by Abbe Cambout, a Madagascar missionary and biologist. A new method of bloodless decapitation which the missionary-biologist has developed contributed largely to the success of the experiment.

TEACHING WILSON THE POLITICAL ROPES

The political doctrines he had been uncomprisingly condemning in his writings and in the classroom were put aside. As in the Martine case, the four Jersey men who had figured most conspicuously in reversing his policy with reference to direct legislation and other advanced ideas were Tumulty, Record, Devlin and St. John.

Knew Human Nature.

They had come up out of the rough and knew human nature. Wilson had never attended a public school, he had lived the cloistered life of prosperous colleges and universities and was in theory a great liberal—he preferred that term to progressive. "The men on the make are the men to whom to go for your judgment of what life is and what its problems are," had become part of the new Wilson philosophy.

Like Wilson, so also Tumulty. Record, Devlin, and St. John were natural political rebels. But unlike him they had for years been studying the workings of progressive legislation under William S. U'Ren, of Oregon, and they were chock full of that sort of information. Senator Jonathan Bourne, jr., also of Oregon, shortly afterward came on the scene, as did many of the other Republican radicals of the time. The views of Wilson toward Bryan and La Follette began to soften very fast. Instead of regarding them as a danger to democracy, Wilson now sounded their praises. Out of it all he evolved a certain uncharted political reformation of his own design. The waves of intense public indignation and disgust at the government, as stirred up by Roosevelt, Bryan and La Follette, fitted admirably into the situation. Wilson was in a frame of mind to take on the quarrel. The enmity of powerful Princeton alumni, who had been in the habit of meeting university deficits, had been incurred by his savage fight over the graduate college. That encounter and the Smith battle proved the preliminaries to his great combat for a new Utopia.

Election Bills.

When the election bill came up for final passage after weeks of tinkering, most of the Smith Democrats in the legislature had been lined up against it, and when the vote was forced the opposition to Wilson seemed confident that they had it killed. Record learned that the Essex Democrats were to bolt, and he quietly prevailed upon Assemblymen Jackson and Layden, of Passaic county, Republicans, to support the measure, and they, in turn, got a third Republican to vote for the bill. With these votes the measure, in its imperfect shape, was put through the house on final passage by a total of 32 votes, one more than the necessary majority. It was a narrow squeeze. By common consent the Wilson program depended upon the passage of the primary bill. Had not Record been able to get the Republican votes the measure would have been defeated.

With the election bills out of the way. Wilson asked Record to sit in with Senator Harry V. Osborne, of Essex, and Frank H. Sommer, who had long been a political associate of Record, and had already framed a public utility act. Like Record, Sommer gave much time to the Wilson program, and like Record he was regarded by most old-line politicians as a bit eccentric, because he was a lawyer who took a livelier interest in ideas and ideals than he did in fees. Record found that Sommer and Osborne had done a good job on the proposed utility law, and he was unable to contribute anything to their work.

In those short months Wilson had unlearned most of the things about politics that he had been learning and teaching in the classroom. And he had not yet assumed the attitude of bitter partisanship that brought subsequent disaster.

It was during the three months of that first legislative session that Wilson gave his chief working service to the State. In his subsequent two years as governor he was largely occupied with his campaign for the Presidency and was mostly on the wing. In the matter of State appointments he had little interest. Wilson was concerned in placing one or two of his friends of the Princeton faculty who had stood by him in his fight there; otherwise it mattered little with him. The choice berth of State commissioner of banking and insurance, which had been created in the earlier days for George Harvey, Wilson gave to Prof. Henry Jones Ford, who had never taken a hand in New Jersey politics and was entirely unknown to the State leaders. His confirmation by the Senate was delayed until there had been an inquiry into his fitness. Prof. Winthrop More Daniels, another intimate in the faculty, was placed on the State board of utility commissioners.

No Obligation.

There was no sense of obligation by Wilson to those who had rendered political service to him or the cause. In view of the fact that Record had given three months to framing and carrying the Wilson legislative program, it was suggested that he should get some public recognition. The most desirable place, and the one where Record's talents might best be employed, was the utility commission. But Wilson had determined to give that berth to his friend Daniels, and the only other appropriate post open for Record was membership in the State board of assessors, with supervision over railroad and corporation property. Wilson, however, was still fearful of possible adverse newspaper criticism, and he sent for James G. Blauvelt, an ardent progressive Republican who had been giving much help, and offered him the place. Blauvelt not only declined it, but rather vigorously expressed his opinion of Wilson's conduct in taking advantage of Record's experience and help and then being ashamed to reward him for it. Wilson afterward said that nobody in his lifetime had ever talked to him quite so bluntly as Blauvelt did. The upshot of it was that Wilson named Record.

Tumulty and I made a sincere effort to pick men who would be a credit to Wilson and who furthermore had rendered party service and would not be offensive to the organization. Needless to say, not all the recommendations were followed.

There was nothing in the career of Wilson that so vastly expanded his reputation as his fight on Smith. It became increasingly spectacular because of the fact that Wilson was giving battle to the very machine which had nominated him. Like his conflict at Princeton, it made him famous and won him outside of his own State hundreds of supporters for every one he lost at home. This fight once settled, it was easy to set him before the public as a sort of tribune of the people who conceived it his duty to interpose his influence wherever other officials showed a tendency to disregard the popular will. The press of the State gave him most enthusiastic support. Everywhere he was acclaimed, and he was able to drive through any measure for which his support could be enlisted. His victories over the professional politicians of the old school had removed much of the latent fear about the scholar in politics.

Like many great reformers who had never been personally concerned about such sordid things as tax-paying, the cost never cut much figure, and New Jersey became the pathfinder in many fields of reform. Of the beneficial results of the political emancipation there are varying opinions.

COWS FIRST ANIMALS TAMED.

Cows were the first animals domesticated when cave men forsook their clubs for rude plows to till the soil. In India the cow has been worshiped for centuries. Sacred cows have been maintained in temples and milk has had an important place in Hindu magic. Milk has been the subject of song and poetry since history began. Canaan, the promised land of Israel, was said to flow with milk and honey. Ovid, the Roman poet, gave milk second place only to nectar, the drink of the gods.

Milk for ages has been regarded as a cure for human ills. The ancients discovered it was a tremendous factor in building up and maintaining the body. This is because milk is an almost perfect food, combining nearly all the elements necessary for complete nourishment.

The Rabbit

By DOUGLAS NEWTON

Courage is an imponderable quantity and some men seem to have, hidden in them an inexhaustible supply upon which they can call in moments of stress. They drive trembling bodies to heights their more material companions never even dream of.

THERE was something in Helen Lennane's tone, a coolness behind the formal language of rejection, that seemed to tell Val Grimmond that she felt his proposal had been unwarrantable, an impertinence. Stung by that even more than by her refusal of—well, the most popular and socially important man on the Chiripa Concession—he said angrily.

"What have you against me, Helen?"

"Does it matter?" she said in her soft, fine voice. "I'm sorry, Val——"

"It matters a lot to me. I thought you liked me, Helen."

"Yes," she said, "I like you."

"And isn't that enough? I've got a pretty good position, and, well, I've got a reputation for being a good sort."

"I'm sorry, Val. I can't say 'Yes.'"

"But if I waited? You haven't been out here so very long. If you knew me better——"

"It's because I know you too well," she said quietly.

"You have got something against me then," he cried. "Do be honest and tell me straight."

"It's just that I can't marry you, Val, not ever," she answered, stiffening under his curtness.

"And that's not the whole story," he said angrily. "Can't women ever be candid?"

"Very well, have it straight," she said slowly. "I couldn't possibly bring myself to marry your type of man."

"My type of man!" He was really staggered. If there was anything Val Grimmond prided himself on it was that he was a very fine example of what a real man should be.

Grimmond was really aghast. That she should find something to condemn in that genial, jolly, good-fellow meeting between the head office staff and those chaps hungry for a little gayety after the loneliness of their distant stations almost shocked him. Certainly most of them had been a little lit up, but surely among men, real men——

"You—you take exception to that mild fling?" he gasped.

"Your mild flings happen every two or three weeks, Val. And I don't think them mild."

"But, my dear girl, don't you see that among men, real men——"

"That is what I am saying," she said. "If that is what you think a real man is, then I'm not going to marry that real-man type. But I don't agree that it is the real-man type."

"You're wrong, Helen," he said as though instructing a child. "It's out here in the lonely places that you get the real-man type. There's nothing sissy about it. You mustn't compare it with the refined little gentlemen at home. You must remember the conditions of life."

"You mustn't put everything down to the conditions of life."

"Everything? Is there more to it then? Come along, I might as well know the worst."

"Does it matter?" she said again, a little wearily.

"Won't you give me my chance to reform into a real man?" he said, so savagely that she stiffened and said:

"I don't think you can, but—well, there's your treatment of the Indians and negroes."

"But—I say you've got to treat these lazy beggars rough or you don't get work out of them."

"That won't do," she said. "My brother doesn't treat them rough."

"Oh, your brother," he had only just time to bite back his opinion of Maurice Lennane, manager at Chiripa. He and his type thought that Maurice Lennane coddled the hands. Helen went on.

"Nor does Calvin Boldre."

"Oh, the Rabbit," he cried, almost laughing out loud. To compare him, Val Grimmond, with that little worm was rather thick. "Oh, the Rabbit daren't be rough. He's scared."

"Maybe, but I suppose you've noticed that he gets results."

Val had. So had all the other real men on the Concession. That was one reason for the Rabbit's lack of popularity. One glance at his insignificant figure was enough to prove that his rather brilliant results must be obtained by some low form of trickery unknown and probably beneath the contempt of fine, upstanding, muscular males.

"Sorry I don't come up to the standard of the Rabbit," Val said with savage irony. "Is that all you have against me? I gamble a bit, don't I?"

"Yes," she said quietly. "You see I don't like that, I suppose. And—and that isn't all. Perhaps you can guess that other worst thing, too."

She said it in a way that made big Val Grimmond, who feared no man or collection of men, or any animal he could face with a gun, go moist.

"Well, what is it?" he said harshly—and as she paused he said deliberately. "Am I too much of a lady's man?"

"Yes," she said as though forcing herself to speak. "Particularly too much the man of one lady named Tula."

"Who blabbed?" he said on the snarl. Maurice, he supposed, the priggish brother warning his sister.

"Not Maurice," she said, reading his thoughts. "There was no need, the native women, my servants, talked of it as a commonplace. I suppose that sort of thing is, but here."

"In a way you're right," he began, then choked. "But—but I've given up Tula, Helen."

"That isn't it. She, she happened, she and the others. I can't get past that, Val."

"I'm sorry about Tula," he said, but angrily, he was only really sorry he'd been found out. "But she doesn't, she never really did mean anything, Helen. She was just—just a sort of custom of the country. It's not a thing I like to talk about to you, but, well, you can't get over the fact that it's the usual thing here. And not unnatural—when you look at it. You've got to take the conditions into consideration—you really have, you know, to be fair. Being in the tropics, and lonely, cut off from home and all that, and living a hard life. And it being the usual thing, why, hang it all, Helen, I don't pretend to be a paragon. I'm only a man, and I've only behaved as other men do."

"I don't believe that," she said sharply. "Not all men."

"All real men," he said angrily. "There may be some exceptions, near-men like the Rabbit, but all real men fall into it as a matter of course, and think no harm of it."

"I won't believe you," she said. "It would be too horrible to think that all men were like that. And, and I won't marry a man who is like that anyhow."

"In that case," he said bitterly, "there's nothing more to be said, though I wish you success in the long and difficult search for your paragon."

"There are such men, and I'll find one," she said coldly.

"You'll find—rabbits," he sneered. "I suggest that you take the specimen near at hand. Behold the perfect type of your chevalier, pure and beyond reproach."

Helen Lennane looked along the veranda of the barracao to where the man they called the Rabbit was playing cards with the others, and she shuddered a little. Was that the sort of man her passion for fineness condemned her to?

They were playing some sort of round game at a big table, and by the light of a solitary candle.

The Rabbit rose to deal and against the candlelight his skimpy figure showed cruelly. He was a short man of slight frame. He tried to dress nattily, but he never appeared anything but insignificant. He was one of those men doomed to be thrust into a corner, partly because he was diffident and his nervousness gave him an awkward, blurting manner, partly because his lack of physique made him into a sort of doormat for the big, hearty youngsters about him. Beaten by them always at any sort of game, incapable of standing the strain and pace of the hunting or bush work the others undertook without effort, he had naturally been pushed into the social background.

He didn't count as a man. He was a joke, the butt of his more robust companions, a foolish, ladylike figure only fit for handing teacups. He was, in fact, the Rabbit.

Helen Lennane, an out-of-door girl herself, a sportswoman who could hold her own in any game, who could do her tramp with a shotgun through the heat-sticky hunter trails of the jungle with most men, who valued manhood, strength, grit and courage in a man, looked at the Rabbit and shuddered again.

Was that what she was doomed to if she clung to her ideals? Val Grimmond, reading her thoughts, looked from her to the Rabbit's meager figure and back, grinning maliciously.

But Helen was leaning forward, looking hard.

The Rabbit was dealing now and his face was concentrated and serious. It was generally smiling, a diffident, nervous smile that seemed to be perpetually apologizing for his presence. A smile that made one think him weak and foolish. But he wasn't smiling now, and he was quite different.

A good profile against the candlelight. A good nose, a firm chin, the mouth clean and resolute, and the head. Yes, he had a really fine head—strong, clever, thoughtful.

She began to feel that, after all, he wasn't responsible for his physical frame, that he could be a man despite the weakness of his build. And Val Grimmond saw what she was thinking.

His own face became ugly, he sneered. And then he hissed.

He was a fine bushman, Val Grimmond, and his hiss was perfect. It was the deadly, cruel hiss of a snake about to strike. A hiss of ghastly terror, unless one knew.

Everybody there did know. All save one laughed at Val's joke. But one knew and did not laugh, and that one was the Rabbit.

He leaped at the sound. There is no other word for it, he leaped wildly and spun round with a cry that was half a yell. The card pack tumbled in a shower onto the table, his chair went flying, his hands rose in an unpleasant gesture of sheer terror, and even in the candlelight his face was not good to see.

The others laughed at him, but Helen could not laugh, and Val Grimmond did not laugh.

"Real man, isn't he?" sneered Val. "I've tried that trick on him a hundred times and he always buys it. A fine, courageous, manly lad, eh?"

"Most people are afraid of snakes," said Helen, feeling rather sick.

"Quite! I am myself," sneered Val. "But a real man keeps his funk in hand. Besides, that's not real-man funk, it's the sheer, panicky, backboneless terror of a creature who hasn't it in him to be a man. And that's your paragon of all the virtues."

He rose and stalked contemptuously into the house, and, in spite of Miriam's protest, lit one of their too few candles and settled himself in a chair to read.

Helen made her excuses not to join the card party and went to her room, and there, sitting in darkness, for she was unwilling to waste even her half night light, she found herself obsessed by Val's words, "a creature who hasn't it in him to be a man."

And the Rabbit, she had seen, had lacked it.

The knowledge wiped out the fleeting impression of fineness she had thought she saw in him. Had put him back into the rather contemptuous place in which the others on the Chiripa Concession held him. He was a feeble, effeminate, impossible little man.

She could not alter that opinion, though, now that her attention had been so markedly drawn to him, there seemed many things helping to make her alter that opinion.

There was, first, his handling of the native workers. As she had said to Val, he got more out of his workers with his apparently mild ways than all the hazing and bullying of Val Grimmond and his muscular companions.

And it wasn't coddling or backing down before them, either. He could keep even the most truculent workers up to the mark in a way no one else could. There was one particularly cross-grained St. Kitts negro who had given Val himself any amount of trouble. He was a big, over-muscled, sullen brute, and when Val had had him in his section he had been the cause of many ugly scenes. Val had manhandled him several times, but had never got real work out of him. He had got instead an animosity that grew to such a danger point that Maurice Lennane had taken the brute from Val and had put him under the Rabbit.

Val had promised murder for the Rabbit, or, if not that, such a demoralization among the Rabbit's gang that his section would be ruined. And neither had happened. The Rabbit had made the negro work. He was an insignificant figure; he came up to no more than the big negro's armpit; the sullen black could have laid him across his great knee with one hand and spanked him. But he didn't. He just worked for him, worked as he had never worked before.

Val and the others pretended this was the result of some low and dangerous form of "playing up" to negroes. But it wasn't. Helen had watched the Rabbit working his rubber gang. There was no weak indulgence in his methods. He might look a ridiculous figure beside these great bronze statues of laborers, but he was their master. He did not swear or threaten, but he was obeyed. He might be, as Val said, too soft, but he must be firm, too, for no liberties were ever taken with him, and the work was done—done as none of the others could get it done.

Queer that such "a little runt," as Miriam called the Rabbit, should yet be able to handle difficult, tricky and sometimes dangerous brutes with better success and without any of, say, Val's effort. It spoke of character, it spoke of something in him they couldn't see; though, to be sure, her brother, Maurice, seemed to see it, for he trusted the Rabbit absolutely.

And that was another thing, his trustworthiness. He wasn't really second-in-command of the concession—Val was that nominally—yet it was the Rabbit who carried things on during such times as now, when Maurice was away; it was to the Rabbit all instinctively turned when problems had to be solved, difficulties overcome and advice needed.

They turned instinctively only. Apparently he was regarded as that sort of negative little person, the school "swat," whose only justification for existence was his ability to mug up things that better, manlier men hadn't time or desire to bother about. His reliability, his efficiency did not add to his standing, as he was just a queer little brainy worker and made use of. Never more than that.

Helen could not help studying him during the few days that followed her rejection of Val Grimmond, and she couldn't help feeling that in certain ways he was rather fine.

There was a quietness and self-respect about his nervous shyness that was rather refreshing. His mind was alert and his brain well stocked. He wasn't limited in his talk to sport and hunting and "shop" and the high spots of Belem, as the others were. He knew depths beneath his work, the folklore of the Turpi Indians about them, the legends of the place, the reasons why one should go carefully with the customs of the land. And outside that, he knew the jungle as Val and his hunting kind did not know it. He knew the loveliness and ugliness of the vast, tangled, hungry tropic bush that surrounded and threatened them. To him his work at Chiripa wasn't merely a "job;" it was a romance and an enthusiasm.

Outside that again, he was cultured; books, plays, pictures, philosophies, movements were interesting to him, and he could make them interesting. An attractive and interesting little man when one broke through his shyness. Time and time again Helen caught herself being fascinated by him.

Against the light they saw the lunge of the sinuous body, the hammer stroke of a devilish head.

But she always caught herself. She always realized that lack in him, that absence of real manliness. His very interest in cultured things seemed to insist on it. He was so interested because he wasn't a man, because his lack of manliness drove him back on such things. His very attractions made her miserable about him. If he were only a real man, could prove that he had the courage and fiber of a man like Val, she could honor him.

Yet she almost hated the Rabbit, too, because he was the only alternative to Val, a backboneless, panicky thing, as Val had called him. A woman couldn't like a man like that.

When Miriam fulfilled her threat and became really ill, dangerously ill, the Rabbit's effeminacy seemed to become more pronounced. It was he who saved Miriam's life.

The others were sympathetic, "cut up" about it, eager to help in any way, but it was Calvin Boldre who did things. He seemed to know how to tackle her peculiar brand of jungle fever at once, though he had rather less experience of local conditions than Val. He had Miriam in bed and prescribed the drugs and treatment that pulled her around. He sat up with her for three terrible nights. With his own hands and will, it seemed, he pulled her right out of the jaws of death.

"He's rather wonderful, Calvin," said Mrs. Frew, the third woman on the station. "The way he tackled the danger, absolutely like a doctor."

"Or a trained nurse," said Val Grimmond with a sneer, and, though Helen hated him for that, the truth of it seemed to stick in her mind like a burr.

Since Calvin Boldre wasn't like a man, a doctor, his handling of his patient, his gentleness and sureness, seemed womanly. Perhaps it wasn't fair to think that. A doctor would have acted in the same way, but her mind, obsessed by his lack of courage, prejudiced her again him.

If the Rabbit had only proved himself a real man. If he could prove himself that now, things might be different. But she doubted that he could and in a queer way was miserable.

That was her state of mind right up to the night when Miriam's scream struck them cold with fear as they sat on the dark veranda of the house.

They had to sit almost in the dark, Maurice was not back yet from Belem with the repaired parts of the electric plant, and therefore that wasn't working. Also the three nights of crisis with Miriam had all but exhausted their small stock of lighting materials. A few night lights rigidly rationed among the women was all that they could depend on now. The men had nothing at all, save matches.

They were not quite in darkness, for through the door and window of the sick woman's room, left open because of the terrific heat, the faint light of her single night light wanly shone. Rather eerie, that light. As they sat there it but faintly touched the dank and glistening tangle of the ominous and brooding jungle to the right, added no more than a sinister gleam to the brown, sleek waters of the creek that slid so secretly toward the big river beyond the bush.

In the intense hot darkness of the jungle night they were in a nervous state already, so when Miriam's scream came it seemed to slash through their very souls in cold horror. They all sprang up, and it came again, a wild, almost mad scream for help. Then there was a crash in the sick room, and the light was gone. They stood in stark and terrible darkness about Miriam's door, utterly unable to go to it because of the terror that lurked within.

Somebody cried: "Miriam! Miriam! What is it?"

Miriam's voice came shaking, strangled: "Shiss! Shiss! Not so loud. Don't anger it."

"It? What?" demanded a voice dropped to a low note of fear. And Miriam's shaking voice called softly:

"A jararaca! In the room with me a jararaca. Oh, for God's sake, save me!"

Jararaca! The mere sound of it turned them to water. It is the name of terror in those low jungle swamps. It is not merely the snake whose bite kills; it is the snake that fights. It will face its enemy; it will attack. A horrible foe at any time, striking with the flash of a whiplash and carrying certain death in its stroke. A horrible foe at any time, but in the dark, in the narrow confines of a room in the dark, a foe of pure terror.

No wonder they stood rooted there. Most of them were big men, brave men, men afraid of nothing on earth, and they would face it on fair footing. But to face an angry jararaca in that narrow, pitchblack room was beyond the nerve of any of them, even though a woman's life was at stake.

Horribly petrified they stood, then.

"Oh, it's coming near!" screamed Miriam.

They heard the frantic heave of her body on the bed—and the hiss.

The cold sibilant hiss that seems to curdle the very spinal marrow, the hiss that hypnotizes in its cold, low evil. The hiss that gave the Rabbit a paralysis of terror.

They heard him leap now, heard his half-stifled gasp of fear. They knew how he was feeling.

Val's voice, strangely thick, came: "My God, we've got to do something! That poor kid helpless in there with—with it. Got to do something."

Then somebody stepped quickly through the door of the sickroom, stepped right into the dark room where that deadly horror was lurking angry and eager to strike. Somebody with a courage beyond any of their courage was facing the jararaca.

A match scratched, flared up.

The somebody was Calvin Coldre—the Rabbit.

The Rabbit, the man who became backboneless with panic at the mere hint of a snake. The Rabbit who was not a real man at all!

But they weren't thinking of that. They watched with tortured anxiety those slow instants between the striking of the match and the growth of its flame. A matter of half seconds only, but it seemed eternity. They saw his outline, crouched alert, saw that he held in his hand a billiard cue which one of them had been mending. They saw it in a flash, saw him sidestep in a flash and drop the match, and as the flame died they saw the hurtle of a long, ropelike body across the flame and the thud against some piece of furniture that told of the miss and the rattle of things flung down as the savage death-dealer turned in rage.

Sheer and horrible blackness again. The Rabbit completely out of sight—hidden in there with the jararaca. "Could snakes see in the darkness?" Helen was asking herself. Was Calvin absolutely doomed? She found her heart crying out against such a thing.

Light suddenly bursting out again from behind the door. They couldn't see Calvin Boldre, who had struck another match. He deliberately struck another match to draw his deadly foe. Then a little scream from Miriam. The swish of something through the air, the smash of something struck. A plain and powerful "Damn!" from the Rabbit.

"Got him?" cried Miriam's voice.

"Chair spoiled my stroke," said Calvin Boldre. "Keep quiet, Miriam, I'm trying again."

Again the light, again that deliberate drawing of death. A scuffle, a stamp, a shout of fear from Calvin Boldre. Then Miriam's voice screaming:

"He's got the Rabbit! Killed him! What are you all doing out there to allow——"

"Shut up, Miriam!" came Calvin Boldre's voice edgily. "He hit me, but didn't bite. I'm quite all right."

"Thank God!" Miriam sobbed. "And don't do any more, Calvin. Go outside; it's too risky in here. Go outside!"

"Don't talk, Miriam," said the Rabbit. "I'm trying again. New idea."

A match burst out again, but this time it wasn't held. Those on the veranda saw it soar through the air and fall to the floor. It burned there for a moment in a small flame. Only for a moment, but it was enough. The jararaca attacked it.

Against the light they saw the lunge of the sinuous body, the hammer stroke of a devilish head. Then the cue swished like lightning through the air, the ropelike neck and body was smashed into a "V" and dashed right across the room. Quiet. Then the steady light of a held match.

"I guess it's all right," said the voice of the Rabbit. "He's dead."

Then they swarmed in on him. Half a dozen flaring matches revealed that hideous broken-backed thing lying under the wall, revealed Miriam in a dead faint on her bed. But they paid little attention to these. They were crowding round the Rabbit. They were shaking him in transports of admiration, they were pumping his hand.

Val was saying, "That was a plucky thing, the pluckiest thing I have ever seen. It took nerve. I don't know another man who would have done it."

The Rabbit was looking at them, green in the face, shaking, hardly able to stand.

"Rabbit the Snake Killer," he said with his nervous, shaky smile. "I say, do you mind if I sit down? I feel rather cheap."

"My dear," said Helen to him, "we're the people who are really cheap." And as she helped him to a chair their eyes met and held, and there came into his something so wonderful that Helen was amazed at herself for ever thinking him inconspicuous.

For now she understood him as they all understood him. He had funked that jararaca, funked it with a sheer, backboneless panic quite beyond their understanding. Their own fear of the snake had been bad enough, but it was nothing beside the wringing terror that had attacked him. And yet he had been the only one of them to go in and face that terror.

Insignificant and ridiculous he might have seemed and more fearful than any of them, but he was a finer man, with a finer courage, than any there.

Val admitted it. "You have us beat, Rabbit. You're a better man than any of us. Have you ever tackled any sort of snake before?"

"I never had the nerve," said the Rabbit wanly.

"You never had the nerve?" cried Val. "And I've tackled hundreds in the open and with proper weapons, but I couldn't force myself to face that. But you hadn't the nerve, and did."

He said to Helen later: "I talked like a fool about Boldre the other day. He's a magnificent chap. We were blind not to see it."

"Yes," said Helen, with bright eyes. "Blind—but we are beginning to see."

Her brother Maurice drove all this home when he returned. Miriam had told him all about it, but Helen had to speak of it.

"Yes," said Maurice. "Thank God, Calvin was on the spot. He never fails anybody."

Maurice took Calvin Boldre so much for granted that Helen had to say:

"And yet one would never think——"

"Rot!" said Maurice curtly. "You're going by his build. He can't help the way he's made. He always has been the right stuff all through and a true sportsman."

"Yes," said Helen, though her brother's tone had been deliberately challenging.

"Oh, you do think that?" smiled her brother when she had refused to be drawn. "I imagine that perhaps you followed popular opinion. You know, the others thought that because he didn't play games with them or join their bush expeditions he wasn't a sportsman. As a matter of fact, it was because he was. He knows he hasn't a physique up to their standard and so keeps in the background not to spoil their fun for them. That's real sportsmanship, I hold."

"It is, it is," cried Helen warmly, "and we were idiots not to appreciate it. But, but it's all going to be made up to him, the dear!"

"The dear!" said her brother, laughing and lifting his brows. "We're very ardent in our championship."

"Naturally," she said, blushing. "I'm championing my future husband, Maurice."

"By Jove," he cried. He looked at her and then became all smiles. "Good old sis. I feared—but no matter."

"You don't disapprove, then?"

"Disapprove! My dear thing, how can I when you've chosen the only real man on the Concession?"

TURNING BACK THE CLOCK

That man over there in the khaki uniform, his eyes a little squinty from astigmatism, his smile warm and his face tanned with tropic suns is Dr. Charles Wilson. He was a steward on the hospital staff with Col. Roosevelt's "Rough Riders" and has the distinction of having brought back home the body of Hamilton Fish, the brave young "silk stocking" from New York, scion of the old Stuyvesant Fish family, who fell at Las Guasimas in Cuba.

That handsome, distinguished, elderly man? You don't know who he is! Why, he is Mason Mitchell, the matinee idol of a generation and a half ago; he left the stage on which he played with Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Richard Mansfield and Dion Boucicault to go to Cuba in 1898 with Col. Roosevelt. He has been a consul to South Africa, Western China, Ireland and Malta; he will go down in history as one of the big game hunters of his day, having two animals in the American museum named for him—the Takin Mitchelli and a new red species of the lynx.

What, you don't know Col. Hersey? The vivacious looking man in the correct Palm Beach apparel? He knew it was going to be hot this afternoon, hence his sensible suit; he is the Los Angeles weather man now—but this is just an easy berth for him, during his resting periods. Col. H. B. Hersey has distinguished himself in several branches of the government service. He was a major with Roosevelt in his "Rough Riders," having three divisions and four troops under him—E, F, G, and H from New Mexico; he was wounded at San Juan Hill. In 1906 he won the international Gordon Bennett cup in a balloon race starting from Paris in which there were sixteen entrants and nine nations represented. Shortly afterward he was the first man to pilot a balloon to Spitzenbergen and when America entered the great war, he was commissioned as a colonel and had charge of the United States balloon corps in France. As one of the outstanding meteorologists of his day he is enjoying life in one of the most equitable climates in the world, Los Angeles.

They were seated around several tables in a little studio cafe across the street from the new Paramount studios in Hollywood—40 or 50 veteran "Rough Riders" holding a reunion and talking continually of their dead chief, Theodore Roosevelt, "the colonel," who is about to live again on the screen in the person of Frank Hopper, who appears with a notable cast in translating to the silversheet, "The Rough Riders," a superproduction, now being filmed near San Antonio, Tex. It was the day before work was to start on the picture, and they had been invited to the gathering by Hermann Hagedorn, official biographer of Roosevelt, who has written the story for the screen play dealing with the romantic tale of the heroic and colorful figures.

Their eyes shone, their faces were wreathed in smiles; they greeted one another with hearty words of salutation and "Do you remember that time, &c.?" They told stories on themselves, of Col. Roosevelt, on one another—a live bunch of young-old men reliving some of the most thrilling days of their lives.

"How husky they are," thought some of the younger generation, as they watched them reminiscing, their well-knit bodies and broad shoulders still entirely capable of riding a horse into another war if they are called upon to do it, their faces lined a little with the toll of the years, their hair somewhat grizzled but far from white.

Thomas P. Ledwidge, the small, active chap over there! Well, sir, there is a man with a story to tell; in fact with several stories; he carried the corrected map of Cuba to President McKinley before the United States ever engaged in the Spanish-American war. Through the Spanish lines he carried it in two little silver capsules set into slits under his armpits, arriving finally in Washington, where only Col. Roosevelt believed his story. Yes, indeed. Later he became a "Rough Rider," and since that time he has wandered all over the world as a soldier of fortune, finally having been knighted by the British government for his bravery under fire at the battle of Passiondele.

Those medals? Those are distinguished service medals won both by David L. Hughes and Frank MacDonald for their services to their country at San Juan Hill. Mr. Hughes is the son of an Arizona pioneer family, Sam Hughes—his father and uncle, L. A. Hughes having been active in the politics of the Southwest for 50 years. MacDonald has a little home and garden in Sawtelle, where he says it requires more courage to run a car than it did to ride a horse up Kettle Hill.

— MANY VITAMINS IN OYSTERS.

Experiments have proved that oysters are a very good source of the vitamins, those much-discussed organic substances essential to normal nutrition. Vitamin A., which prevents an eye disease called xerophthalmia; vitamin B., which prevents an important nerve disease; vitamin C., which prevents scurvy, and vitamin D., which prevents rickets, are each found in oysters, laboratory tests show.

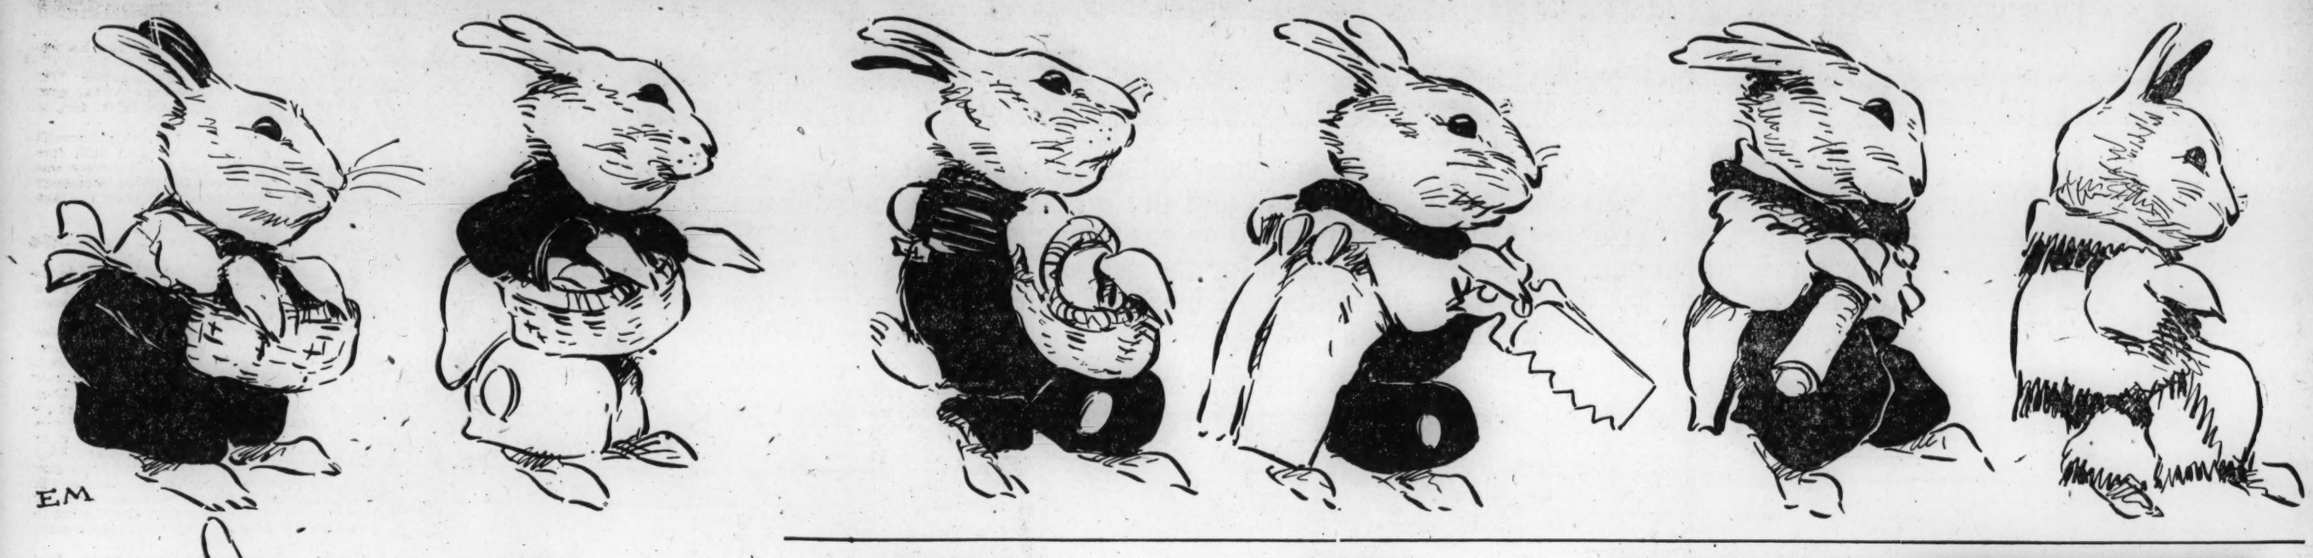

When milk is added to oysters as, for example, in the making of oyster stew, the food value is greatly enhanced, since milk not only contains important vitamins, but is a building and repair agent for the body as well.

The Bunny Tots

They Set Out for the Deep Woods.

Written and Illustrated by Edward McCandlish.

"What's the news?" asked Happy Jack Squirrel, as he bit off a piece of birch bark from a small switch which he carried. "What's up? And where are you bound for?"

"We are bound for the deep woods," said Master Patch and little Dame Thumbling, both at the same time. "We are looking for you, and for Old Mister Bristly Porcupine."

"Looking for me?" said Master Happy Jack. "How come?"

"We want you to join a circus," said seven or eight of the Bunny Tots, all at one time.

Master Jack Squirrel sat up very straight when he heard that, you may be certain; and such a puzzled look came over his face that the Bunny Tots all burst out laughing.

"You see," began Tiny Bob, who sometimes acted as a kind of spokesman for the Bunny Tots. "You see, we have just run away from a great, big circus. We traveled around from town to town, and learned to do tricks before thousands of people; and we saw all the towns and cities and villages in the whole world, almost; and we lived on pink lemonade and popcorn, and peanuts and bananas, and——"

"Oh, my sakes!" interrupted Happy Jack Squirrel, whose eyes were now about ready to pop out of his head. "Whereat you find these peanuts and popcorn and lemonade and everything? Just lead me to it!"

"Not quite so fast," said Tiny Bob Bunny Tot. "We first have to travel along a bit, and pick up a few more folks of the forest. For we want to give the circus folks a big surprise that will last 'em for awhile, when we turn up some bright, sunshiny morning, with a long procession of bunny rabbits, Bunny Tots, possums, chipmunks, coons, foxes, turtles, terrapins, Jim Crows, woodchucks and squirrels."

"The circus folks 'll be surprised," said Brother Raccoon with a chuckle. "I'll say they will!"

Then the little party got under way again and headed for the deep woods, although Happy Jack was all for going straight back in the opposite direction in the hope of getting some of that pink lemonade and popcorn. The little folks trudged steadily along through the thick woods and over big rocks and through grassy meadows and over logs that bridged the streams, and along toward noon time they came to where a clear stream ran along between steep clay banks and a high cliff on one side that sloped down to the water.

The Bunny Tots and the Woodsy Folks stopped here for a brief rest, had another drink at the running stream and sat down to eat the lunches of cabbage and clover that they had brought along from Brother Woodchuck's house.

Now, the Bunny Tots are for to boasting. They love to tell rambling stories about wonderful things that they have done, or would like to do—and they tell some mighty remarkable stories sometimes, too, I can tell you—if you would believe all that they have to tell.

Well, the clover-and-cabbage lunches had all been eaten, and the Bunny Tots had begun to sort of look around and "spread" themselves. Each tried to tell a more astonishing story than the one before him. One Bunny Tot told a story about how he had once (so he said) killed a wildcat "all by his lonesome," by which, of course, he meant "without any help." Not to be outdone, the next Bunny Tot said that he had once killed two big wolves. Then a third Bunny Tot was starting out on a long-winded story that promised to wind up with his killing nothing less than a buffalo bull, when—happening to look up at the overhanging cliff that jutted out over the water, the Bunny Tot who was telling the story suddenly stopped talking, turned very pale and kept staring up at the high cliff above him.

Every one in the little party had been listening to the "buffalo" story, and nobody paid much attention when the story suddenly stopped, until they noticed the scared look on the face of the speaker. Then all eyes turned up toward the cliff at the same moment, and—— What do you suppose was standing up at the top of that cliff?

"Hurricane."

(Winner of $1 Prize.)

Large, black clouds hung gloomily from the darkened heavens. It was coming! That was obvious. There was nothing to do but wait. Wait for the storm! How strange that sounds, yet true! There was nothing to do but wait!

Then, it came. The rain beat down upon us in torrents. It rained as it never had before. We had read of such storms, but in fiction. Most of us were doubtful, though, about accepting this as a possibility. Now we knew. The wind followed rapidly. It blew terrifically. We could hear an occasional crash. The noise was terrible! Buildings crumbled as if they were made of paper. However, the sound they created assured us that they were anything but paper. What could mere man do? Wasn't this the will of God? Some people cursed it, others were more optimistic about it. Things were flying all around us. Cement blocks, uprooted trees, even roofs of houses. Houses that were once beautiful now looked like mere shacks. How Florida had changed in those few hours. It was Sunday, too. How different from glorious Sundays!

For no reason at all, Bob Hunt was out. How he wished that he wasn't, though. His yellow hair, bleached by the Florida sun, was washed about his face. A mighty handsome and manly face, at that! The eyes that had never shown worry were now filled with tears. The wind was much too strong for his sturdy little body. He was merciless in the hands of fate. He was blown backward and forward, to and fro. The Almighty only knows how he wasn't hurt! "I shouldn't have left Tom's house in such a—a—a—hurricane, even though we did argue. Why, oh why, do I have to be so domineering?" he cried softly to himself.

He was not more than a block from Tom's house, yet he couldn't turn around. He knew that he would be killed instantly if he attempted to turn around. He held desperately onto a palm tree. God must have taken special care of that tree to keep it from being uprooted. His strong little arms were breaking. He couldn't hold on much longer, that was certain. "Some one will save me!" But fate had a different plan in mind. Would some one save him or would he——?

It was late, very late, really I should say early, though, as it was rapidly getting lighter. The storm ceased little. Then! In front of him he saw something, something that was unbelievable. Something that he would dare not even think of on any other occasion, but now; oh, well; anything can happen in a hurricane. He couldn't bear the sight of it. There it was on the ground, but 5 feet away. He realized he couldn't hold on any longer. He must let go. Then, too, think of that little bundle 5 feet away! He let go. Somehow he managed to reach the bundle. Yes, it was true! Just as he had thought. An infant! He gathered it closely to his breast. The rest was all black!

When he awoke he was in a little white cot, in a little white room. A hospital.

"How, how is the little bundle " he queried half consciously.

"Why, fine, my brave little lad, thanks to you." A kind, fatherly voice assured him.

A day or so later he was told everything. How he happened to get there, the whereabouts of his parents, however, he was told, that the parent of the child would be known later.

Just then a door opened, so quietly, however, that Tom hadn't heard it. A boy hurried into the room.

"Bob!"

"Tom!"

"Gee, Bob, don't you know that the child you saved is my, my sister!" Tom fairly shouted.

"Why, why!" Bob muttered.

"Yes, little Marie!" Tom paused, "the wind blew her right away from us when our house collapsed. None of us were hurt! I bet you think it strange about Marie, b-but strange things do happen in hurricanes!"

A Novel Thanksgiving Party.

(Honorable Mention.)

Elsie and her sister Marjory had their heads together planning what they would buy with their money they had been saving. Each had two dollars. Elsie was determined to get several books she had heard her friends talking about while Marjory thought she would give a big Thanksgiving party and invite all her closest friends.

They were interrupted by "Marjorie, did I hear you say you had two dollars?"

"Yes, granny," said Marjory, "and I am going to have the nicest party!"

"Let me tell you about a party we gave when I was your age," offered their grandmother.

"Yes, do," said the two girls in chorus, "new ideas for parties are always welcome!"

"Do you remember little Dorothy Burrough and her sisters?"

"Those girls that always wear the same clothes and nobody likes?" inquired Virginia.

"Yes, but you mustn't talk like that," responded their grandmother sternly.

"But tell us about your party," said Virginia impatiently.

"I am. We used to ask all the girls in the neighborhood to save as much money as they could and when it was all put together we usually had four or five dollars and we——"

"Oh, grandmother, and you'd have a wonderful party then! I wish I had five dollars instead of two. But what about the Burrough children?"

"Well, will you promise to do what I ask you to?" inquired grandmother.

"Certainly," they responded in their eagerness to learn new ideas.

"The day before Thanksgiving we three will venture to town and purchase a turkey and several vegetables to go with it!"

"But we always have ice cream and cake at a party," protested Virginia.

"Yes, dear, but this is a very different kind of a party," reassured their elder. "We will then take a walk and leave this at the door of the Burrough's cabin; that's giving some one else a party, isn't it?"

The two girls' faces fell, then brightened at the novel idea. "All right, grandmother, we will," they said.

"Fine, I know Virginia will pitch in with her two dollars," said granny, proud to have accomplished her task.

The day arrived when they went to town, hand in hand, and finally left a big turkey on the door step of the Burroughs' for their Thanksgiving dinner. Never were there two happier girls than Marjory and Virginia and never before a happier family than the Burroughs.

The Lost King.

(Honorable Mention.)

The king was lost! Bugles were blowing, children were running around the streets crying and the people were very much excited.

Early that morning the king had been out in the garden looking over his large assortment of flowers and no one had seen him since.

His wife, the queen, had died many years ago, but he still had his beautiful daughter, Irene. Every one loved her, she was so kind and thoughtful and there was not one young man in all her father's kingdom who did not have hopes that some day he would wed her.

Irene was frantic when she heard that her father was lost and she immediately sent out the king's army in search of him. They searched every where, but he was not to be found.

At the west end of the kingdom there lived a very noble young man. He loved the king's daughter and he was determined to win her hand. As he was on the way back from the nearest village his eye was attracted by a bright blue plume lying at the side of the road. He had heard about the lost king and he thought that this might possibly be a clew. He went into the thicket a short way and there lay the king. He was breathing heavily and he looked as though he had been struck over the head with a large pipe.

The noble lad carried the king to the palace as quickly as he could and the king soon recovered.

The king asked the man, whose name was Franklin Rene, what he wished as a reward. The lad was brave and he asked for the king's daughter's hand, saying, "There is nothing that I would like better than to marry your daughter." The wish was granted. They lived happily for many years and when the king died the ruled the kingdom.

ROOSEVELT AND THE NAVY CHOSEN AS PRIZE TOPICS

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

"The American Navy in Peace and War!"

That is one of the titles of the special essay prizes to be given on October 24. The other essay is to be written about "Theodore Roosevelt, the Man."

Surely, any boy and girl should be able to find interesting facts on either of these topics. The American navy is the right arm of national defense and its roll of heroes is a glorious one, reaching from John Paul Jones to Commander John Rodgers and Commander Richard Byrd, intrepid fliers of modern fleets.

Its story is one of romance, service, heroism, daring and patriotism. In peace it patrols our seas, serves science and performs a thousand missions of usefulness.

In war it keeps the invader from our shores and defends the women and children of the nation. Theodore Roosevelt, rough rider, scholar, naturalist and leader of men, was one of our greatest Presidents.

His life is a fascinating combination of adventure, service and constructive building of the forces of good citizenship. There is much of inspiration in the story of this great man for the boys and girls of America.

Be sure to address your essays to the "Post Boys and Girls Editor, Washington Post." Write only on one side of the paper, in ink, and your essays must not be more than 400 woods.

If you are careful in the choice of your words you can write a splendid essay in this number of words.

Have the words tell the things you really think on these subjects. Words are the good tools with which you build an essay to give to others your opinions and knowledge of these matters.

Many boys and girls are trying for the $5 grand prize for November which will be given for the best Thanksgiving poem, drawing or story received by November 15.

The stories, poems and drawings must contain an original Thanksgiving idea and can not be copied from the work of any one else.

Drawings, it should be remembered, must be done in black ink. As I have said before, blue ink will not reproduce.

Until further notice, a weekly prize of $1 each will be given for the best poem, story and drawing received by Monday night of each week.

How about crossword puzzles? Have you tired of these? We could use some original crossword puzzles again. Send them and their solutions with them. The best one sent in each week will receive a prize of $1.

The Unknown Visitor.

We live in an old stone mansion in Georgetown. It is a large, colonial house, well built with a central hall and spacious rooms on either side. As soon as he saw it father decided that it was just the home for us. Father is a physician and the two well-lighted rooms on the right served as his reception room and office.

I have one brother and although he is a little older than myself, we are great chums. We were both glad when father concluded to buy the house. There is a big yard with fruit trees in the rear where we could romp to our hearts' content. And over the stable there is a large loft which we immediately planned to use on rainy days.

After we were settled in our new home we heard rumors that the house was haunted. Father and mother laughed when these stories were repeated to them. And Tom and I pretended that we thought it was a good joke. But we were not at all so sure. One day when our parents were at a matinee and the cook was in the basement preparing dinner, Tom dared me to go to the attic and get his bat. I made a great pretense of going willingly but my heart was in my mouth as I entered the dimly lighted attic and I came down the steps with such speed that Tom laughed heartily.

Tom and I occupied adjoining rooms. One night when I was restless, Tom said he would sleep with me. Tom is a regular bookworm and I at once insisted that if he would tell me a yarn I could go to sleep. Tom had just finished one of Poe's tales and he started off on a story that soon had me wide awake. As he reached the most thrilling part of the narrative, we heard a low, moaning cry. It seemed to come from the window nearest our bed. As we sprang from our bed something white passed by the window. Tom immediately jumped back in bed and I followed his example.

The next night we decided to sleep together again. Just as we were drifting off to sleep we heard the same moaning cry. As we leaped from our bed something white passed by the window. Tom turned on the light and what should we see perched on the window sill but a white dove.

The next morning we told our parents of our adventure. Father said, "So that was the ghost of which my friend told me."

"But they thought it was a ghost," replied Tom.

"So they did," rejoined father, laughing. "But it took my two brave boys to show us they were wrong."

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1926.

Hilltop Manor, Largest of Cooperative Apartments, Has Many Unusual Features

COOPERATIVE PLAN HAS ATTAINED WIDE POPULARITY IN CITY

More Than 2,000 Apartments Have Been Bought in Order to Own Home.

ADVANTAGES EXPLAINED BY EDMUND J. FLYNN

Owner Becomes Stockholder in Corporation; Comfort and Economy Among Gains.

The cooperative apartment, asserted by its sponsors to be the most desirable form of home ownership available to residents of Washington, has, since its introduction in the nation's Capital more than seven years ago, attained such remarkable popularity that there are now more than 2,000 families occupying apartment homes which they have bought or are buying. Thousands of others have evidenced their interest in this plan, and many more who heretofore have given but slight consideration to home ownership will find their attention arrested by the alluring prospect of a means to escape the ever recurring rent problem.

It is for these that the following interview with Edmund J. Flynn, authority on cooperative apartments and pioneer in this field in Washington, is published.

Q. What do you own when you buy a cooperative apartment?

A. I will use a concrete example. Hilltop Manor contains 214 apartments. This property (building, land, &c.) will be owned in fee simple by a corporation composed exclusively of the cooperative owners of the apartments. The corporation is capitalized at the sale price of the property. To each apartment is apportioned a block of stock representing its equitable proportionate value in the building. Accompanying this stock is an occupancy agreement giving to the purchaser, his heirs or assigns, forever, the right of occupancy and use of the chosen apartment. The block of stock represents the purchaser's proportionate ownership of the entire development, and the occupancy agreement conveys his apartment to him just as in a deed.

Q. How is the corporation operated?

A. The apartment owners own all of the stock of the corporation. At a stockholders' meeting they elect a number of directors and these directors elect their officers: President, secretary and treasurer. All serve without pay. The by-laws of the corporation provide that a responsible agent must be employed to do the actual managing under the supervision of the directors. This provision obviates any possibility of attempted management by incompetents within the corporation.

Q. How is the cost of running the building determined and how is it divided?

A. The directors consult with the experienced managing agent in estimating the budget of expenses for each year in advance. The budget of expenses comprehends all items of cost of operating the property, such as taxes, insurance, employes' salaries, water rent, fuel, electricity for the building, management charge, ashes removal, supplies, sinking fund, &c. These expenses are divided among the owners, each owner being assessed a proportion of cost based on the number of shares of stock he owns. The assessments are paid monthly.

Q. How does the share of one apartment in these expenses compare with the cost of running a house?

A. It costs about 50 per cent less to run a cooperative apartment, because of the economy of wholesale buying and enforced budget plan of operation under a responsible agent, who must render regular statements from an accurately maintained voucher accounting system.

Q. How does the physical value of a cooperative apartment compare with that of a house?

A. Most houses are of wooden-beam construction. Hilltop Manor is the last word in fireproof construction, with the very best materials used throughout. It was erected under the supervision of highly skilled engineers with the best workmanship obtainable.

Q. What other advantages have cooperative apartments as compared with houses?

A. A cooperative apartment affords the comfort, convenience, service and economy of living in a high-grade, well-conducted apartment building, along with the satisfaction of home ownership, and eliminates the worry, care, responsibility and comparatively excessive cost of conducting an individual dwelling plant.

Q. Suppose I should buy an apartment in this building and some are not sold—must I help to carry the unsold ones?

A. No; there are no unsold ones. This is a 100 per cent cooperative plan, which, as we apply it, means that every apartment must have a responsible owner to meet his proportion of all costs from the outset. This is accomplished before the building is offered for sale by having the builders underwrite all of the stock of the corporation, thus obligating them to meet all payments chargeable to the apartments remaining under their control until they have been sold.

Q. Does the building always have a first trust, or do you provide for its reduction and ultimate liquidation?

A. Our plan provides for complete liquidation of all encumbrances against the property. Our apartments are priced at their proportion of the full sale price of the building, not just equity above mortgage indebtedness. The apartments are then sold on terms so that the treasury shall always have collected from its stockholders enough to meet the interest and amortization payments on the mortgage indebtedness. The amount owed to the corporation by the stockholders who are buying under terms is exactly the same as the sum owed by the corporation on the purchase of the building. All the stockholders complete their payments for stock at the same time and the building is then clear of all encumbrances. The money received from the stockholders in payment for their stock is placed in a trust fund by the bonded agent to be exclusively applied to the liquidation of the mortgage indebtedness on the property.

Q. Is the cooperative apartment plan an experiment?

A. It is not an experiment. It has been operating satisfactorily in New York for 60 years, in Chicago and other large cities more than 12 years, is in operation all over the United States and is growing in popularity each year, and has given perfect satisfaction in Washington for more than 7 years. There are at present, approximately, 40 cooperative apartment buildings being successfully operated in Washington.

Q. How do those who have bought apartments in Washington feel about it?

A. They are the most enthusiastic boosters any home ownership plan ever had. They are glad to recommend it. They are our best references. Ask any of them.

Q. What assurance is there as to satisfactory neighbors?

A. Cooperative apartment homes present the only form of community life where one may be assured of satisfactory neighbors through the right of selection. The board of directors, who are owner occupants, must pass on the desirability of all occupants of apartments. Hilltop Manor will have an atmosphere of social respectability unsurpassed in Washington. Such a social value has a readily transmutable cash value on consideration of resale.

Q. Is the cooperative apartment as easy to resell as any other type of home?

A. The history of the cooperative apartment in Washington and elsewhere has proved that it enjoys a much greater resale demand than any other type of home. Naturally such would be the case. The cooperative apartment presents every resale attraction that any other type home affords and, in addition, has the following advantages that they lack. When the cooperative building has been sold out, an internal market is immediately created. A lot of persons become desirous of living there because they have friends or relatives living in the building, or they were too slow in making up their minds to buy, or they became acquainted with the opportunity too late to take advantage of it, or, for a number of other reasons, want to live in that particular building. Then, the old law of supply and demand gets busy and increased prices are the natural result. In some instances, after buildings have been completely sold, shortly thereafter, resales have been made at increases of as much as 50 per cent more than the original prices. This last assertion may be easily verified by communicating with the owners of some of the buildings sold in the past.

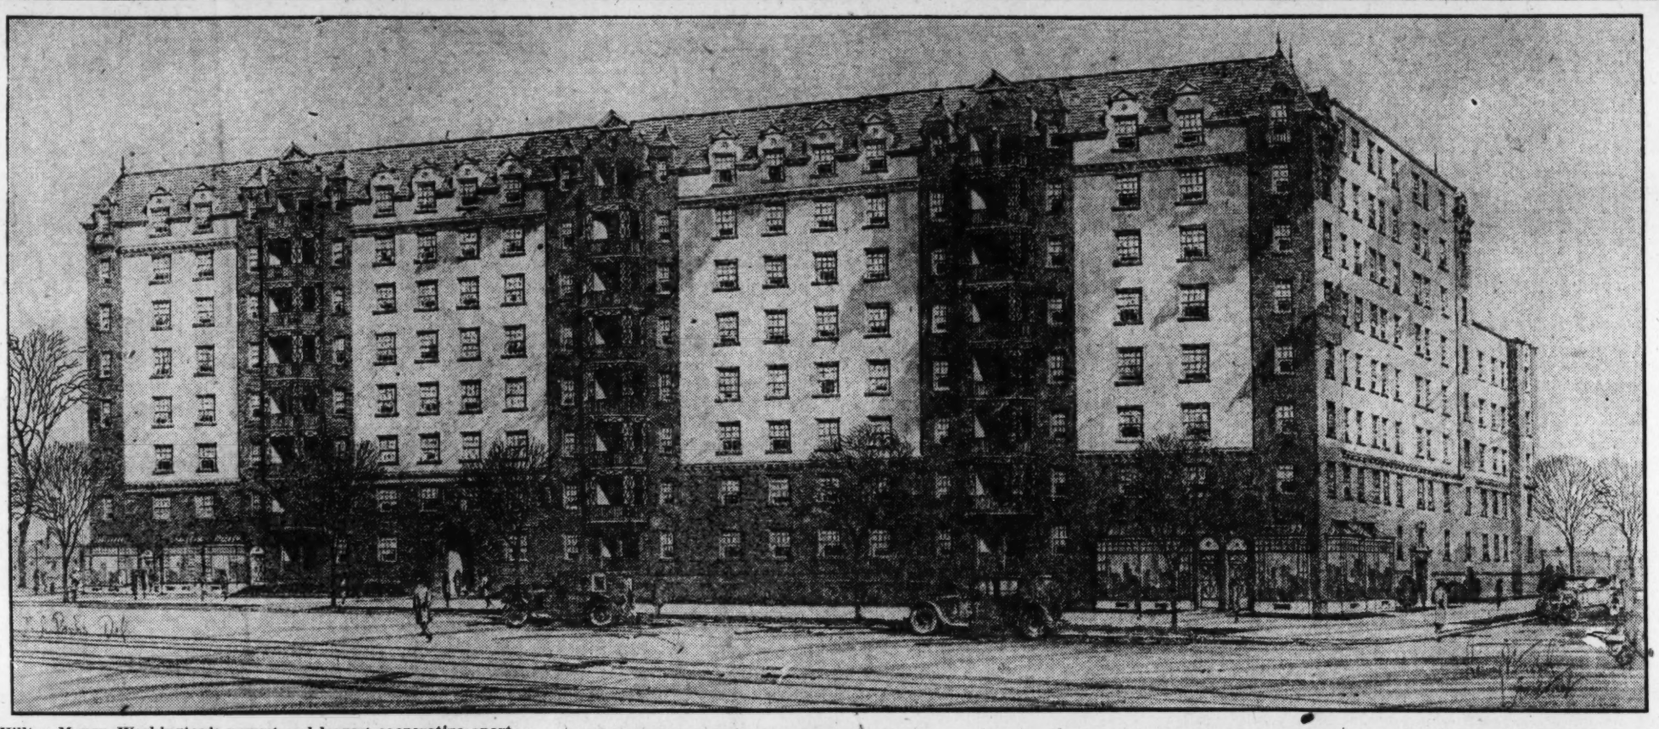

Q. How are you able to sell these apartments on terms so much under rental rates?

A. That is easily explained. Again, let us use a concrete example. Suppose I were to sell this building to a speculative landlord on exactly the same terms, one-fifth cash and monthly payments amounting to the aggregate monthly payments of the cooperative purchasers. In order to meet his monthly payments it would be necessary for the landlord to secure rental tenants. In fixing his rental rates, in addition to charging the actual payments to principle and interest on the unpaid balance and actual cost of operating the building as set forth in our budget of expenses, he must add the following items which are eliminated in the 100 per cent cooperative building: A large percentage for probable vacancies, a percentage for uncollectible rents from bad tenants, a percentage for the wear and tear caused by constant moving in and out and carelessness of tenants who are not owners, a percentage for frequent redecoration of abused apartments, a percentage for advertising for new tenants, a percentage for wastage by careless help not under the observation of tenant owners, a goodly percentage to provide an income for the landlord himself. All of the above enumerated percentages, which constitute a big proportion of what is charged as rent, we classify as "wastage." No such wastage is possible in the 100 per cent cooperative apartment building.

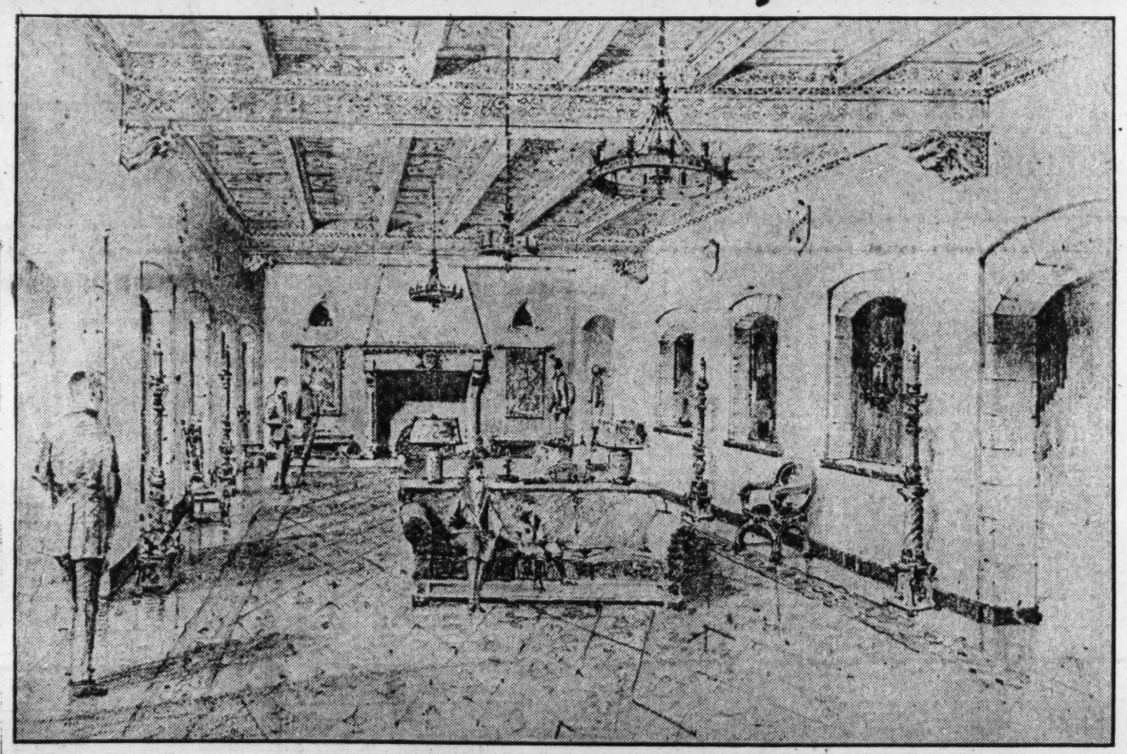

Q. What do you say to the man who exclaims, "I don't want to buy an apartment, I want to rent one?"

A. I say to him, "If you are going to live in an apartment, you are going to buy it for some one. You may either rent an apartment and in that way buy it for the landlord and pay a great deal additional to defray the wastage costs of the rental building, or you may buy one for yourself directly from the builders at a fair price, paying only your proportion of the cost of operation under the most economical method of buying and maintaining a home in existence." Here is another comparison between the rental tenant and the cooperative buyer: Contrast the future positions of the two after the buildings are paid for. The cooperative owner then finds himself practically rent free, having to pay thence on only his small proportion of operating costs. The rental tenant must continue rental payments indefinitely after he has bought the building for the landlord and is quite frequently confronted with an increase in rent as a result of the building being resold at a profit by his landlord. The new landlord has a larger sum invested and therefore feels justified in obtaining more revenue from his building. On the other hand, an increase in value of the cooperative building accrues to the benefit of the cooperative apartment owner.

HILLTOP MANOR APARTMENT HAS THREE ROOF GARDENS AND HUGE DINING SALON

Hilltop Manor, Washington's newest and largest cooperative apartment building, occupying the entire block on Fourteenth street between Oak street and Otis place. The building contains 214 apartments of 30 different types and embraces every modern convenience. More than 50 of the apartments have spacious porches and there are three tiled roof gardens atop the fifth story of the wings that extend westward from the eight-story main structure. In the expansive and elaborately-furnished lobby 24-hour service will be given by office attendants and telephone switchboard operator. The three high-speed elevators will have attendants on duty day and night. A dining salon accommodating more than 400 persons is on the ground floor. Below is a view of a lobby, one of three on Fourteenth street, Ogden street and Otis place.

Many Firms' Work Helped Make Building Luxurious

Concerns of Highest Caliber Selected for Contracts to Insure Best of Materials, Construction and Deliveries on Schedule Time.

In the selection of materials entering into the construction of Hilltop Manor only the best was selected. The high standard required also implied that the firms supplying these materials should be of such a character as to render efficient service without unnecessary delays, for the work on such a building required enormous amounts of material delivered on schedule.

One of the most important items was the plumbing. The firm selected was D. H. Alsop, who furnished all plumbing equipment and did all the work in the building. The baths have all built-in tubs and showers, pedestal lavatories and Sloan valve toilets. A high pressure water system has been installed and there is a large laundry in the basement with the most modern equipment. The kitchens have porcelain sinks and drain boards.

Another important consideration was the electrical work for which Ralph P. Gibson & Co. was selected. All of the apartments are wired for electrical refrigeration and every room has convenient outlets. While the electrical work may not be constantly in sight, it is all the more important that the installation be properly made so as to prevent irksome interruption in the future.

Three Steel Boilers.

Included in this heating equipment are three steel boilers of 18,000 cubic feet capacity each. The vapor system is the most modern and most economical and permits heating of the entire building on a few moments' notice. It is not necessary as in the old style methods to get up a great head of steam before service can be given. There also are two steel hot-water heaters of 2,500 gallons per hour capacity. The entire equipment is operated by an oil burning plant.

One feature of Hilltop Manor which is unusual is the fact it is finished completely on all four sides with face brick, which was furnished by United Clay Products Co. This brick is exceptionally beautiful, being of variegated shades of brown with a rough tapestry finish. The National Brick Co. furnished all other brick.

All cement in the reinforced concrete work and the walks was supplied by Fries, Beall & Sharp.

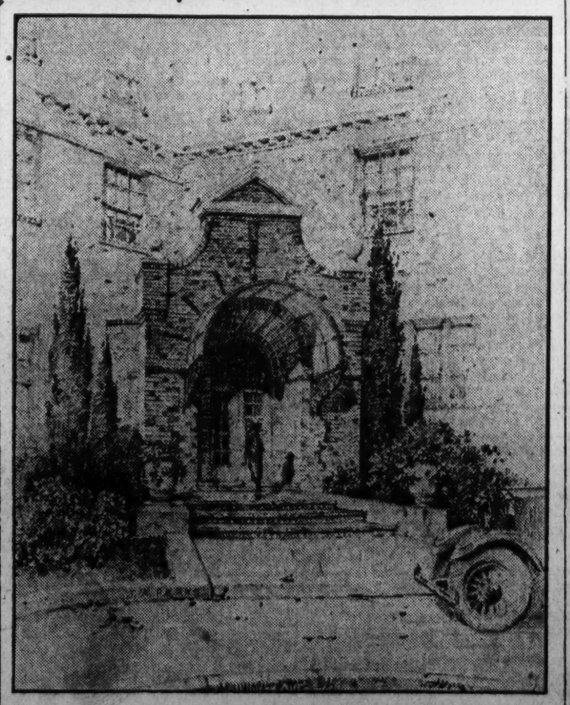

More than 107 carloads of the best grade cement went into the fire-proof construction of Hilltop Manor. The steel forms used in the columns and beams were supplied by the Washington Steel Form Co. and the reinforced bars for the slabs were supplied by the Concrete Steel Co.

Barber & Ross supplied all the hardware of the most attractive design, which lends a note of distinction to the finish of the apartments. This firm also designed and executed the special walnut china closets in the breakfast rooms. These are unusually attractive and provide ample space for dishes and glassware. The handmaid enamel kitchen cabinets take care of storage for pots and pans and also provide a shelf for the [illegible] in preparing the meals.

The Simplex Steel Products Co. furnished all the fireproof partitions and ceilings, consisting of fireproof plaster board over steel channels. This material has the additional quality of being sound resisting.

The slate mansard roof of green and purple was provided by the Woodward Roofing Co., and the ornamental wrought iron balconies in the center of each of the brick towers on the Fourteenth street elevation together with the mar-

CAPITAL ACQUIRES UNIQUE STRUCTURE IN CAFRITZ BUILDING

Beauty Declared Unsurpassed in Floor Plan and in Finish of Apartments.

FRENCH RENAISSANCE STYLE IS FOLLOWED

Doors Are Mirrored, Rooms Trimmed With Gumwood and Kitchens Fully Equipped.

Hilltop Manor, on Fourteenth street, between Oak street and Otis place, just a few blocks from Park road, is Washington's newest, largest and most magnificent, 100 per cent cooperative building. The Washington public has watched with interest the progress of its construction, and that interest has ripened into a desire for ownership now that the building is ready for occupancy.

The site, formerly the Lenman tract, remained unimproved until its purchase by the Cafritz organization. In the early part of 1926 the trees were cut down, the tract graded and the excavation for the present building begun, and as soon as the weather permitted construction work began.

Men were employed day and night in the concrete work and the operation looked like a real fairyland to approaching Fourteenth street traffic with myriad electric lights strung between columns and powerful flood-lights illuminating the work. Every detail of construction was most carefully planned and supervised with the result that today Hilltop Manor stands out as one of the best apartment buildings in the city in design, quality of materials and arrangement of apartments. Architects from New York and Philadelphia made numerous inspections of the building, commending it highly and even taking away sketches of typical apartments for their use.

Unique Among Buildings.

Architecturally, Hilltop Manor is decidedly different from most apartment buildings. The beauty of this structure is unsurpassed in floor plan, finish of apartments, equipment and service. It is the realization of the desire of the Cafritz Co. to give the Washington public the most beautiful building of its kind ever erected in this city.

The general treatment of the building has been rugged, buff brick towers, soft-toned stuccoed panels forming a most pleasing contrast. The style of architectural treatment is of French renaissance, so finely expressed in the variegated slate mansard roof of green and purple hue, with quaint dormer windows in each of the three brick towers.

On Fourteenth street there is a series of wrought-iron balconies, giving a relief by their projection from the monotony of a flat surface and forming a delightful refuge in warm weather for the occupants of the apartment. There are three attractive entrances, one on Fourteenth street, one on Ogden street and one on Otis place. The entrance on Ogden street is a semicircular driveway, with shrubbery and attractive porte-cochere. This is the automobile entrance.

Stands on City Square.

Hilltop Manor fronts the entire block on Fourteenth street between Oak street and Otis place, occupying virtually the entire square, with the exception of a small frontage on Ogden street. It is just one block from Sixteenth street and a short distance from Fourteenth street and Park road, in a neighborhood where property values are constantly increasing. Its high elevation affords a commanding view of the city and its proximity to schools, churches, transportation lines and the uptown business center makes it especially desirable.

The nation's Capital, in the opinion of Morris Cafritz, whose organization conceived and constructed this largest of cooperative apartment buildings, has nothing that can remotely rival Hilltop Manor. "This structure," Mr. Cafritz said, "is the realization of the foremost thought in housekeeping plan and equipment. No effort has been spared in the beautification of the interior to make it undoubtedly one of the finest arranged apartment buildings ever erected anywhere.

Was Rigidly Supervised.

"The vast resources of our organization combined with rigid supervision of every phase of planning and construction have resulted in sound economies that enable the purchaser to obtain a better home at the lowest possible price.

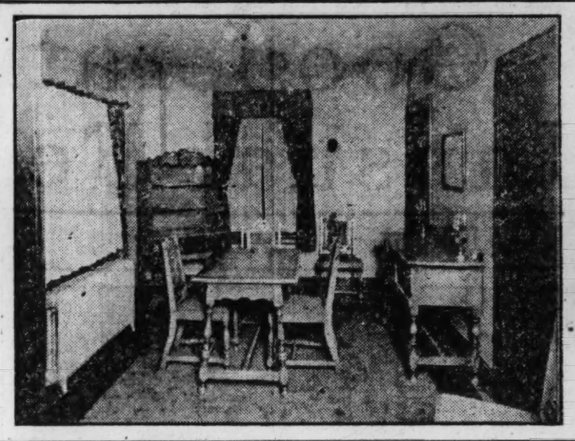

"The 214 housekeeping units consist of 30 different types, many with porches. They range in size from efficiency units of reception hall, large living room with Murphy bed and dressing compartment, breakfast room, kitchen and tiled bath with built-in tub and shower, to apartment suites containing re-

LEADERS IN CAPITAL HOLD COOPERATIVE PLAN IN CITY SOUND

Many Have Purchased Homes Identical With Hilltop Manor Terms.

CALLED PRACTICAL HOUSING SOLUTION

Early Buyer Says Idea Has Worked Perfectly and Unreservedly Indorses It.

Testifying to the soundness of the cooperative ownership plan as applied in Washington to the purchase and operation of apartment homes, leaders in the financial, legal and professional life of the Nation's Capital have given this most modern method of home ownership their unqualified indorsement.

During the more than seven years that it has been in operation in this city they have had ample opportunity to scrutinize the details of the plan. Aside from the fact that many of them have themselves purchased homes under identically the same plan as now obtains at Hilltop Manor, the following letters should carry great weight:

President of Bar Association,
Suite 835, Southern Bldg.,
Washington, D. C., Aug. 31, 1926.
Mr. Edmund J. Flynn,
Cafritz Co., Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Flynn: It is my opinion that the ownership of apartments on the cooperative plan is legally safe and that the plan under which you are operating is sound.

It so happened that I represented the first company formed in the District of Columbia to sell apartments on this plan, and since the formation of that company I have had considerable experience with other cooperative apartments. I believe that the plan affords a practical solution of the housing problem.

The successful operation in Washington of a number of large and valuable apartment houses by corporations formed on the cooperative basis, indicate that the plan will continue to merit the confidence of the investing public. Very truly yours, JOHN LEWIS SMITH.

Popular in Large Cities.

The Franklin National Bank,
Washington, D. C.,
September 28, 1926.
Mr. Edmund J. Flynn,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: The cooperative ownership of apartments is becoming very popular throughout the large cities of this country and is becoming quite popular in Washington; and where these buildings have been properly financed and incorporated and then sold at a reasonable price it makes a very modern and delightful home.

In my judgment, a modern apartment has many conveniences and economies over an individual dwelling house and will continue to grow in popularity.

Very truly yours,
JOHN B. COCHRAN, President.
1746 K street northwest,
Seven years an owner.
Washington, D. C.,
September 17, 1926.
Mr. Edmund J. Flynn, care Cafritz Construction Co., Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Flynn: As one of the early purchasers of cooperative apartments when they were introduced in Washington about seven years ago, and having been a continuous owner since that time, I am in a position to state that the plan has worked perfectly and I am very glad to give it my unreserved indorsement. Very truly yours,
REGINALD R. WALKER.

Rights Clearly Defined.

Edmonds Building,
Washington, D. C.,
September 21, 1926.
The Cafritz Co., Washington, D. C.

Dear Sirs: Careful attention has been given to the legal phases connected with the Hilltop Manor apartment, in order that it may be owned and successfully operated on the cooperative plan. The charter of the corporation will embody all provisions essential to the protection of the tenant-owners, the rights of whom will be clearly defined and adequately safeguarded.

The title to the land and improvements will be vested in the corporation, and each tenant will receive shares of stock representing his investment. The occupancy agreement grants the right to perpetual occupancy of a specific apartment selected by the investor, and his right may be transferred and assigned to any tenant satisfactory to the board of directors.

In my opinion the plan will merit the confidence of the investing public. Very truly yours,
MILTON STRASBURGER.

Education in Real Estate.

A State plan for technical education in real estate was adopted by the Colorado Association of Real Estate Boards at its annual convention. A committee of the State association will be appointed to work with the University of Colorado on a proposal for extension courses in real estate.

CAFRITZ'S BUSINESS BUILT FROM SMALL START 4 YEARS AGO

Phenomenal Rise of Realty Concern Held Interesting Testimony to Vision.

DECLARES PRESENT IS ONLY ITS BEGINNING

Launching of Operations Outcome of Boyhood Dreams While Selling Papers.

The phenomenal rise of the Cafritz organization to a position of leadership in the real estate field within the last four years is one of the outstanding business romances of the Nation's Capital, and testifies to the vision, courage and initiative of Morris Cafritz, the founder and president of the organization. Mr. Cafritz is constantly thinking of the future of Washington, not only today and tomorrow, but of a greater Washington of next year and the years to follow when the city then will bear the same relation to the city now, that the Washington of today bears to the Washington of four or five years ago. This vision and the courage to make the vision a reality is something that is fundamental with Mr. Cafritz.

There is a little story about Mr. Cafritz which shows just how his thoughts run. One day in the course of conversation, the writer took occasion to remark on the splendid growth of the organization, the magnitude of its construction program and the character and quality of the buildings that it erected, expecting his listener to make some reply of like nature. He was disappointed. All that Mr. Cafritz said in the face of such praise was, "It is only the beginning." This is the spirit that is instilled into the Cafritz organization, and it is this spirit that makes outstanding accomplishment the expected rather than the unusual.

Launched 4 Years Ago.

It was only four years ago that a young man in his early thirties without influence or backing, set out in a very modest way to realize an ambition of his youth. As a boy selling newspapers on the streets of Washington, he was always attracted by building construction and would spend his spare time watching the erection of homes, apartments and commercial buildings. Mr. Cafritz told this story in all its colorful details to a gathering of his employes at a recent dinner of the organization, and one could easily see the earnestness and ambition of the boy still alive and active in the man.

Back of all successful accomplishment, no matter what the field, are the plans, policies and a strong and well-organized personnel working in cooperation with an enlightened and far-seeing management, which makes for that success. Such is the case with the Cafritz organization.

The record of the Cafritz organization, since its beginning, is one of unusual brilliance, and has its inspiration for those who need look no further than their own city for opportunities.

In a recent talk with Mr. Cafritz the conversation drifted to the subject of success. The writer, anxious to find out all that he could, asked Mr. Cafritz about the opportunities for a young man today. Mr. Cafritz replied that the opportunities of today are much greater than ever before. On every side and in every walk of life one has a splendid opportunit to earn as well as learn. Business men of today are more progressive, more willing to make changes and improvements for the benefit of their business, and are constantly alert to new ideas, and always ready to take on the man who can accomplish their plans and in turn carry the business to further success.

In the early stages of its growth, the Cafritz organization realized its success depended on a definite plan and policy in its activities, and the strict adherence to this fundamental plan, with the improvements and changes brought about by changing conditions, has given it a goal on which time has set the seal of approval. One of the first things decided upon was to give the purchaser the benefit of the economies resulting from its operations. This affected the price of the house and went back still further to the cost of production. The larger the quantities of material the lower the price. This applied to land as well as construction materials.

Furnishings Attract Hilltop Manor Crowds

The crowds thronging Hilltop Manor have viewed with interest the attractively furnished apartments. These suites show the splendid arrangement of furniture which is made possible by the spaciousness of the room and their practical arrangement. No detail is lacking in the representation of an apartment home suitable for immediate occupancy. Rugs, colorful draperies and the latest model of furniture have been used with shaded lamps conveniently placed.

The model apartments also have for demonstration the Servel electric refrigerator, a most sanitary device, economical in operation.

SERVICE TO BE MOTTO OF HILLTOP MANAGEMENT

Louis B. Pelzman to Be Secretary and Active Head of New Company.

BAN IS PLACED ON WASTE

The purchasers of co-operative apartments in Hilltop Manor will be assured of the very best management obtainable. A corporation has been formed to be known as "The Co-operative Apartment Management Company, Incorporated." The officers will be Edmund J. Flynn, president; Morris Cafritz, treasurer, and Louis B. Pelzman, secretary.

Mr. Pelzman, who is a mature business man of considerable experience, will be in active charge of this company. He has just returned from Chicago where he has been studying the most successful method of managing co-operative apartments in use there.

The object of this corporation and its sole purpose will be to give the finest possible service to the owners of co-operative apartments at the least cost. An accurately operated voucher system will be maintained. All supplies will be bought at wholesale. All employes in the apartment buildings managed by this company will have to pass examinations to determine their fitness and will be under the constant supervision of experts. There will be no waste permitted. Every request or complaint of an owner or other occupant will be promptly and courteously attended to. This company will use as its motto "Service" and it will demonstrate to those whom it serves that it understands the true definition of the word service and is qualified to render it.

In addition to the usual duties of such a managing agency, this company will extend to the owners of the individual apartments a further service. Contracts will be obtained for interior decorating, repairs, and window washing, so that the individual may have the advantage of contract rates on work for which he would have to pay considerable more as an individual.

INSPECTION IS URGED OF MANY FEATURES OF HILLTOP MANOR

Representatives Always on Hand to Give Information About Property.

PRESSURE ON SALES CAREFULLY AVOIDED

Genuine Service to Patrons, Aim of Owners; Confidence Is Invited.

By EDMUND J. FLYNN,
Authority on Cooperative Apartments.

My aim in preparing this statement is to present only general information about Hilltop Manor and the plan under which you may become a home owner. The development of this property is the result of the Cafritz Co.'s broad experience in building satisfactory homes combined with my organization's years of experience in selling cooperative apartments. Hilltop Manor has so many unusual features a personal inspection of the property is necessary, before an intelligent decision regarding it can be made.

You are, therefore, invited to inspect Hilltop Manor. Our representatives will be at the property for the purpose of giving information. We do not use sales pressure nor what is popularly known as sales methods. The men and women who will give you information regarding Hilltop Manor homes are thoroughly familiar with this property and with cooperative home ownership. We shall, at all times, confine our sales efforts to giving complete, dependable information.

Our business ethics merit the confidence of Washington people. We want you to buy a home in Hilltop Manor, and we know that intelligent people will not invest their money until they are in full possession of the facts, have confidence that statements made to them are true and have assurance that they will receive good values. Our entire organization is at your disposal to furnish whatever information you may desire, regarding the property. Cafritz Co.'s ability as builders, our responsibility and our fairness in business dealings.

In return, we shall require complete and satisfactory information from all purchasers. All applications for apartments are being taken subject to approval, after a thorough investigation of the applicants has been made.

No enterprise can permanently prosper unless it renders a genuine service to its patrons. We render a real service to its patrons. We render a real service at Hilltop Manor by offering an exclusive, well-appointed home for less money than it would cost to build an individual home and for less money than an apartment home of equal value could be secured elsewhere. The quality of materials and equipment used in Hilltop Manor assures every owner a minimum of upkeep expense.

Hilltop Manor is a masterpiece of architectural designing. It is planned so carefully that nothing is extravagant, yet the entire development is artistic and unusual. Each apartment embodies all of the essentials of a comfortable home environment.

Sunshine, ventilation and an unobstructed outlook from every apartment have been the guiding consideration. The best engineering practices known to the building trade have been followed. The best materials and home equipment the market affords have been bought at the lowest possible prices, and the best of workmanship has built them into Hilltop Manor.

The purchase of an apartment home on the cooperative ownership plan should be subjected to the same careful scrutiny as any other investment.

Hilltop Manor has been planned with regard for the following essential elements:

First—The price of the property is well within its fair market value.

Second—It is safely financed. The mortgage indebtedness, by reason of the amortization provisions, will be entirely removed and the property clear upon completion of the apartment owners' payments for their apartments.

Third—The property is located in a select residential neighborhood of established and increasing values.

Fourth—It is organized on the 100 per cent cooperative ownership plan.

Fifth—Tenant owners are being selected with extreme care.

Many Apartment Homes Bought in Hilltop Manor

Despite that Hilltop Manor is not yet completed a large number of apartment homes in this new 100 per cent cooperative building on Fourteenth street between Oak street and Otis place already have been sold. The insistent demand of the public for information concerning this newest project of the Cafritz organization and the desire for immediate occupancy of the building, was the reason for placing these apartment homes on the market in advance of the scheduled date.

The rapid progress in the development of the cooperative idea is due entirely to its soundness. The average individual spends a large part of his life and a large part of his income in a rented dwelling or apartment from which he gains no direct benefit financially or otherwise. Home ownership is a fundamental instinct and from the earliest times the human race has always desired some habitation that could be called "home."

The renter gets nothing in return for his expenditures but a temporary dwelling and has only a number of slips of paper for the money he has expended. The owner of a cooperative apartment home is investing his money in the form of monthly payments, which are much less than rental values for similar accommodations, in an apartment which he owns and practically in all cases he can resell if he desired to move to another location without suffering a loss, generally at a considerable profit.

There are numerous economies connected with the cooperative plan of ownership which inure directly to the benefit of the owner of an apartment home These have been constantly brought to the attention of the public and their repetition would serve little purpose.

The apartment homes in Hilltop Manor are exceptionally desirable. With 30 different types of apartment suites the purchaser may make a selection of any of these types in accordance with his requirements. They range from attractive suites containing two rooms and bath to those with six rooms and two baths, all of them modern in every detail. There are 214 apartments in Hilltop Manor and their rapid sale is most gratifying and shows the desire of the public to live in Washington's newest, largest and most magnificent 100 per cent cooperative apartment building—Hilltop Manor.

The Fable of the Generous Landlord

Once there was a landlord who was truly generous of heart. He owned an apartment building that had been occupied by the same tenants for years. One day he asked them to meet him in the lobby. When all were gathered he addressed them thus:

"Beloved tenants, greetings. I have called you to this meeting to make known to you that you no longer need pay rent.

"Your rent has paid for the building, plus the cost of running it, plus a goodly income for me. Therefore, I believe it is only just you now should own the building, and I have deeded it to you. I have formed a corporation composed exclusively of you tenants, and have given stock to each of you equivalent to the value of the space you occupy and an occupancy agreement which gives to you, your heirs or assigns, forever, the right to the use and occupancy of your apartment.

"The by-laws of the corporation provide that you shall own and manage this building cooperatively, and that you shall divide the cost of taxes, coal, janitor, &c. You shall elect a board of directors from among yourselves who shall have supervision, and who each year shall estimate the cost of operation for the ensuing year and assess it against shares of stock on a monthly payment basis. The monthly cost to each of you will be so small as to be almost negligible.

"I wish you happiness and prosperity in your new ownership."

The tenants almost were overcome with joy upon learning of this extraordinarily generous action by their landlord. When they finally were convinced they were not dreaming, they began to investigate the plan of ownership. Again they exclaimed in praise of their landlord, this time because of the simplicity and soundness of his plan to form a corporation and create a cooperative form of ownership.

The plan succeeded perfectly, and they all lived happily ever afterward.

* * * *

"Truly a generous landlord, indeed," you'll say, "but who ever heard of one doing that?"

You are not likely to ever hear of one doing that. But you do hear of tenants owning their own buildings under the identical cooperative ownership plan described in the fable.

CAFRITZ RESOURCES BROUGHT TO FRONT FOR HILLTOP MANOR

Organization's Many Departments Gave Best to Produce New Apartment.

EACH PHASE OF WORK FINISHED BY EXPERTS

Building Wins Praise and Offers Practical Solution of Home Problem.

The success of any project depends primarily on the soundness of the plan and the proper method of execution. This procedure has assured the success of Hilltop Manor. The vast resources of the Cafritz organization were brought into full play and the result speaks for itself in the beautiful, well-planned, fireproof building which is the largest 100 per cent cooperative apartment building in Washington.

From the beginning to end the planning and the carrying out of those plans has been in the hands of the architects and engineers of the Cafritz organization. Careful study and hard work produced an elevation of unusual charm suggesting the influence of the French renaissance with its colorful Mansard roof and dormer windows. The efficiency of the floor plan has attracted wide attention and the unstinted praise of architects who have visited the building. It is the result of the combined experience of the organization and exceeds that of any other apartment building in the city in beauty, desirability and economy of arrangement. No columns or beams are exposed unnecessarily to mar the wall space with unsightly projections.

The execution of the plan called for the best of materials in the construction and to assure their proper use in the realization of such an enormous project, only the best of skilled workmanship was employed. The vast purchasing power of the Cafritz organization gave them the benefit of enormous savings and permitted the erection of a more beautiful building at a lower cost.

Experts Complete Work.

The construction department of the Cafritz organization in personnel and equipment is complete in every field. It has its own steam shovels, fleet of trucks and mixers and permits of only the best in any operation. In the construction of Hilltop Manor the Cafritz organization, aside from the planning and supervision, executed all of the brickwork, all of the concrete work, and all of the carpenter work.

The papering of the apartments which has met with praise of the public as well as the painting in the interior and on the exterior of the building was done by decorating department of the Cafritz organization. No expense was spared to give the building the proper finish commensurate with the high character and the exacting requirements of the whole operation.

In offering Hilltop Manor as a home for 214 Washington families, the Cafritz organization feels that it has made a distinct contribution to the beautiful buildings of the city and has provided a form of home ownership practical in application and economical in operation.

MANY AIDED IN MAKING BUILDING LUXURIOUS

quise over the Ogden street entrance and the metal stairs throughout the building were executed by the Alexandria Iron Works.

The finish of all of the apartments is in excellent taste. All millwork, glass and mirrors and the beamed ceiling in the lobby were furnished by J. Carey King.

This firm has just taken possession of its new seven-acre plant, located at 6100 Sligo Mill road northeast. The installation of the most modern woodworking machines and equipment together with the provision of ample storage facilities will enable the company to take care of its increasing volume of business due to a rapid growth of the city. In this new plant it will continue to maintain the best possible millwork service.

Red Oak Flooring.

All lumber, including clear plain red oak flooring, was supplied by I. S. Turover and Gallihet & Hugusly.

The apartments are papered in exquisite taste, the combination being cream rock ceiling with hand-embossed walls. The paper was supplied by the Capital Wall Paper Co. The paints used both in interior and exterior decoration were provided by W. R. Winslow and by Hugh Reilly.

The window shades are of a material both water-proof and washable. They were furnished by the Shade Shop.

The Capital Metal Weather Strip Works supplied the screens and weather stripping for the building, adding greatly to the comfort of the occupants in summer and winter. The weather stripping on doors and windows prevents rattling and keeps out dust.

The tile work in the bathrooms, lobby and corridors, and the marble steps were installed by Joseph A. Casassa. Glazed ceramic tile floors and side walls provide the acme of cleanliness in the bathrooms. The lobby tile is a patterned type of unique French design in mottled brown. Lally Rohlaver, Inc., is factory representative for this tile.

Walter M. Ballard Co., were the interior decorators who designed and furnished the lobby with its beautiful rugs, draperies, lounges and lamps. This company also furnished the five specimen apartments on the third floor of the building.

The Murphy Inadoor beds were furnished by the Murphy Door Bed Co., and are of the new graceline design with walnut finish. They are the efficiency units which make for economy of space and are to be found in the living rooms of most apartments.

Joseph Lozupone had charge of all the plastering.

The three high-speed elevators were furnished by the Marsh Elevator Co. The cars are finished in walnut and are equipped with electric interlocks.

SPACIOUS LOBBY AND LOUNGES POINT TO LUXURIOUS EASE

18th Century Fireplace, Divans and Lamps Make for Quiet Elegance.

DAINTINESS FOR WOMEN WHILE MEN HAVE CLUB

Restraint in Decoration Only Brings Out the Charm of Romantic Times.

A visitor to Hilltop Manor, Washington's newest and largest cooperative apartment building, can not fail but be impressed as he steps into the main entrance of the structure and notices the care and taste that has been exercised in equipping the lobby of this latest Cafritz development.

One enters a commodious lobby, centrally located in the building, with lounges to the right and left. Everything makes for comfort and quiet elegance. Adhering to the French style which obtains in this lovely room, one immediately is impressed with the comfortable furniture.

Large divans are placed in attractive groups in the center of the room, with tables close by. Table lamps provide soft but sufficient light for reading. Along the walls and pilasters are stately carved chairs with floor lamps close by. At the pilasters in the north and south wall are placed torchiers bearing shields with heraldic emblems skillfully wrought in bronze.

Eighteenth Century Fireplace.

An attractive eighteenth century fireplace is directly across from the main entrance and is flanked on both sides with low benches, with fine old French tapestries on the walls back of them. A French monastery window is set in a deep recess with a cushioned seat, as are the other windows in the room.

The furniture is covered with imported French and Italian friezes and in multicolor designs. The entire scheme of coloring is interesting and harmonious. Two luxurious Austrian rugs, in neutral tone, are included in the furnishings. To complete this charming room a formal French design in simple color has been used to decorate the beam ceiling. High on the walls, in relief, are heraldic shields emphasized in color.

Vaulted Arches a Feature.

Through vaulted arches one enters the lounges. One will be in more delicate treatment than the other. Here one will find furniture and fabrics in more delicate designs, where milady may entertain her friends in the quiet atmosphere of a nearby private drawing room. The other lounge is to be known as the "clubroom" and is furnished in a more rugged tone. It undoubtedly will find the men of this community home congregated there. In each of these lounges are French fireplaces with hooded tops which will bring the charm of old Brittany. Easy chairs, tables and reading lamps further add to comfort and ease. The bizarre and brilliant has not been attempted, but rather a home atmosphere and the slight attempt to bring a romantic Old World feeling into play.

A ceramic tile floor, niches and deep reveals all tend to complete the charm of these rooms.

The exhibit apartments have been furnished with an effort to convey the possibilities of them. No attempt has been made to furnish with unusual or costly equipment, but the type of furniture that would be found in almost any well-appointed home.

Hilltop Manor

Washington's Newest, Largest and Most Magnificent

100% Co-Operative Apartment Building

Own What You Buy

If you are renting an apartment you are buying it for a landlord. Why not buy one for yourself? Why accumulate rent receipts instead of a home?

Less Than Rent

The rent you pay for an apartment includes a large percentage of "wastage," always present in the budget of a rental building. There is no "wastage" in a cooperative building. That is why you can buy your apartment on terms less than rent.

30 Types to Choose From

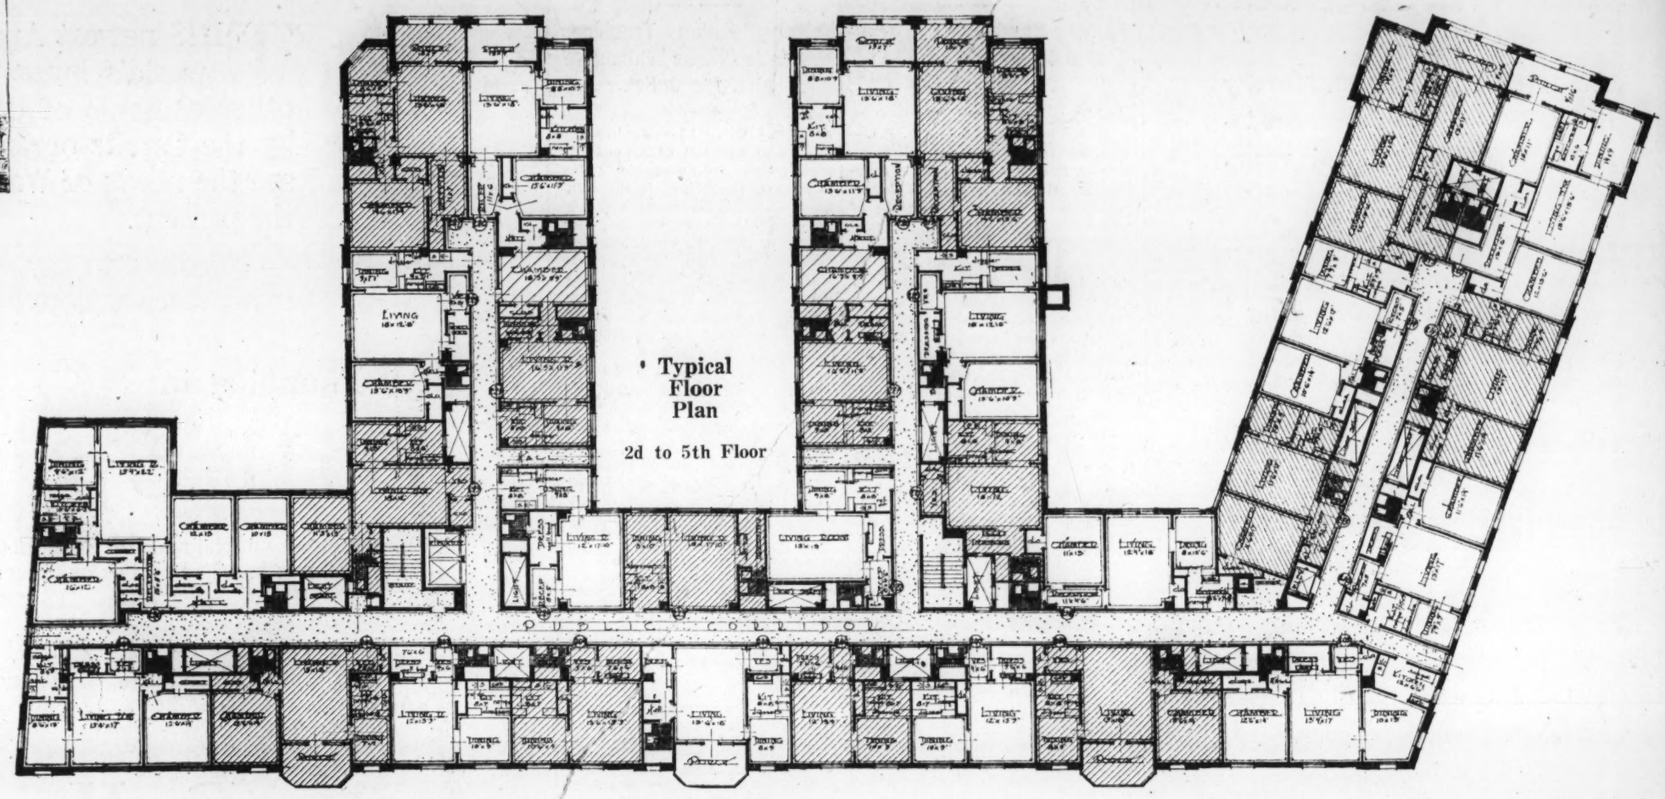

Hilltop Manor contains 214 apartments with 30 types from which to choose, many already have found there. A visit to the furnished apartments will end your quest also. Your home is there.

Select Neighbors

Co-operative apartment homes present to you the only form of community life where you may be assured of satisfactory neighbors through the right of selection. Your Board of Directors must pass on the desirability of any occupant. Hilltop Manor will have an atmosphere of social respectability unsurpassed in Washington. Such a social value has a readily transmutable cash value on consideration of resale.

Own Your Own Apartment Home

The slogan "Own Your Own Apartment Home" has literally spread from coast to coast. In virtually every city of importance in the United States thousands are grasping this opportunity to become home owners under the most economical plan in existence. Washington ranks high among the cities where this opportunity exists and Hilltop Manor is one of the largest and most modern co-operative apartment buildings in the world.

Features that Appeal

There is nothing to compare with HILLTOP MANOR in Washington. It's the last word in construction—and the realization of the foremost thought in housekeeping plan and equipment—combined with the most modern features and facilities of Apartment Hotel Service.

The lobbies will be luxuriously furnished; three high-speed elevators, lobby office and a telephone exchange will give continuous twenty-four hour service. A carefully managed public dining room will be maintained and three tiled-floor roof gardens overlooking Washington and off into the mountains of Maryland and Virginia.

A staff of representatives is at your service in the building, every day and evening, including Sunday, or you may telephone Main 9080 for further information.

WALTER DAMROSCH SEES MUSICAL SOUL GROW IN AMERICA

Business People Taking More Interest in Concerts, He Declares.

ASSERTS AWAKENING CAME WITH THE WAR

Famous Conductor Has Traveled 400,000 Miles With His Orchestra.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—The change from superficial, negative audiences to increasing numbers genuinely interested in music, heralds new eras in the growth of America's musical soul, Walter Damrosch believes.

From the inception of the first New York symphony orchestra in 1878 by Dr. Leopold Damrosch, his father, to the present time when thirteen great orchestras of the rank exist, the younger Damrosch marks progress by audiences, musicians and conductors.

Lags Alone in Composition.

"In the field of composition alone does America lag far back of other countries," says the noted conductor. "Yet musical interest increases daily and lovers of this art are bringing more of it into our lives each year.

"With the growth of audiences in numbers has come a change in personnel, attributed in its incipient stages to the war. From a small group of social lights, music students and foreigners, the old audiences, most of whom were women, are being enlarged by business people.

Genuine Love for Music.

"Having found in music the opportunity to spend their emotions during the war, these people now have developed a genuine love of music and are swelling the concert audiences."

Mr. Damrosch, in his career of twoscore years during which Kreisler, Paderewski, Saint-Saens and Tschaikowsky, have made their American appearance under his baton, has initiated many developments in musical fields. He was the first to start children's concerts, in which he personally explains and acquaints them with the master compositions, tendencies, rudiments of the art and themes of the operas.

It was he who, having first taken his orchestra to the Pacific coast in the days when transcontinental travel, dependent on the financial response of the nation's music lovers, was a hazardous task, then turned eastward and for the first time introduced American music Europe. He has traveled more than 400,000 miles with his orchestra, and has conducted it through 4,000 performances.

He is the composer of two operas, "Cyrano de Bergerac" and the "Scarlet Letter," the former having been produced by the Metropolitan Opera company.

MISSION WORKERS AND SNOBS BLAMED FOR ORIENT UNREST

Baroness Ravensdale Says Chinese Not Accepted Socially by Foreigners.

SAYS WHITES IN INDIA ALSO REJECT NATIVES

Holds Christian Teachings Stir Ambitions Without Affording Outlet.

Tokyo, Oct. 16.—Missionaries and snobs are the causes of the unrest that is noticeable today throughout the Orient, in the opinion of Baroness Ravensdale, daughter of the late Lord Curzon, once viceroy of India, in which land the baroness was born. She was in Japan recently, sightseeing, after a visit to India and a tour of China.

While in China she was extensively entertained, she says, but in no instance did she ever meet a Chinese in any of the foreign homes. The diplomats and others do not accept the Chinese socially. This is one of the main causes for the antiforeign feeling.

In India the white residents maintain the social bar against the Indians, and, she says, "we cannot take those people, educate them in England, at Oxford or Cambridge, and send them back to be social outcasts." Just what can be done about it Lady Ravensdale does not know. The British rulers, she says, refuse to take the advice of those who know, and "Stanley Baldwin is as bad as all the rest in that regard."

The teaching of Christianity, she believes, merely stirs the people up without affording them any outlet for their new ambitions, the result being the supplanting of a fairly contented people with a people unrestful and disorderly, which unrest and disorder the missionaries continue to fan in order to retain their hold upon their converts.

WE Join in the Congratulations to Mr. Cafritz

THIS newest Apartment, considered one of the world's largest Cooperative structures, is another example of the progressive spirit manifested by the Cafritz organization, and their ability to foresee the needs of Washington in the future, as well as the present.

Needless to say, only the finest of plumbing fixtures were selected for Hilltop Manor.

ELECTRICAL equipment in these newest Cooperative Apartments excels in every respect. Fittingly it exemplifies proper provision for this most efficient energy. We congratulate those who have participated in this work as well as The Cafritz Company under whose able direction it was installed.

Application of cooperation to the housing problem has brought about a satisfactory solution thru Cooperative Apartments of the type Hilltop Manor distinctively depicts. It is on the same principle—cooperation—that a public utility must lay the foundation for its standards of service. That cooperation is the keynote of this Company's activities has been repeatedly proven. Your continued cooperation will maintain that high standard of service which has been set by

IRISH PRESS URGES TALL HAT'S RETURN FOR FESTIVE TIMES

Dublin Warned Not to Forget Gaiety Nor Become Careless of Dress.

CIVIC PRIDE EVIDENT IN EDITORIAL APPEAL

Parties of Officials Contrast Sharply to Those of Prewar Days.

Dublin, Ireland, Oct. 16.—It is a cheerful sign of the times in Ireland to find a Dublin morning newspaper devoting an editorial to the revival of the tall hat in this country. The Irish Times denies at once the obvious charge of snobbishness, while it points with unfeigned satisfaction to the fact that at a recent garden party given at the viceregal lodge by the governor general, almost all the men present wore the conventional silk hat while at least half a dozen came in summer gray "toppers" with clothes to match.

By way of explanation of this joyful revival, which might not seem to require explanation by many, the paper proceeds to say:

"Dublin is a capital city who in her long day has kept the best company. She has a great tradition in art, letters, and the graces of living, and the lamp of her history shines on fair women and brave men. There is something wrong with Dublin, therefore, when she forgets her gaiety and ceases to be careful about her clothes."

Conveys Civic Pride.

It is not difficult to detect the note of civic pride which this conveys, and of the prevalence and deep-rootedness of that pride there is no manner of doubt. Dublin is a capital city and ought, on state occasions, to be top-hatted.

A country just emerging from revolution has not much use for social amenities, garden parties, and top hats. Less than five years ago Ireland was signing a treaty with England after a terrible struggle. Less than four years ago she was in the throes of civil conflict. Now the sword is sheathed, the machine gun is silent, most of the scars have been healed. The progress which has been made toward good order is surprisingly great. It is no wonder that Ireland is glad that the days of the garden party and of other social gaieties have returned. Within the last few weeks the social round has been wonderfully diversified and the weather has been all that such gatherings require to spell complete success.

The governor general's party was something in the nature of an exhibition to the world, a proof to the natives that the Irish Free State has "come out." And it was appropriate that the chief guests of the occasion were the delegates of the International Women's League of Peace, which was simultaneously holding its congress in Dublin. The women came from the civilized nations of the world, including Great Britain, France, America, Germany, the Balkan states, and Scandinavia, as well as from India and Australia.

Old Dignity Prevails.

It was a wonderful spectacle to see this very representative assemblage of women, many of whom wore native costumes of many colors, paying their respects to Governor General Healy and to note the dignity and old world courtesy with which the former fire eating politician and erstwhile lawyer welcomed them. In addition to the international representatives Gov. Healy had around him a galaxy of men and women, the cream of his own country, types of humanity of which any country might be proud.

Inevitably one was forced to contrast the function with others of a similar nature which in prewar days were held in those famous grounds surrounding the viceregal lodge. In those days the host was an English nobleman, and the guests were English or pro-English. Few of them had any real sympathy with the country in whose capital they were being entertained. Irish people were not invited, and to the masses the functions meant nothing. Even the clothes that were worn, for the most part, came from London or Paris.

Another notable function was the garden party given by the head of the civic guard, Gen. O'Duffy, when President Cosgrave came to present three members of the new police force with medals for the greatest act of bravery performed during the last year.

Models From New York.

The medals are the gift of Col. Scott, the head of the New York police force. The daring and gallant deeds performed by the three recipients were read out by the president, and the large audience applauded as he pinned the medals on the breasts of the three gallant officers.

Gen. O'Duffy had around him for the occasion a great concourse of representative people, whose support throughout the country will lend strength and backing to the guards in their work of maintaining social order and banishing crime from the country.

These social festivities are but the forerunners of many others announced for the later months of the summer. But the principal one will be the great horse show which takes place at Ballsbridge this month.

LANDSCAPE WORK BEAUTIFIES TRACT AT HILLTOP MANOR

Two Thousand Square Yards of Earth Used for Grading Building Site.

INTERIOR COURTS MADE INDIVIDUAL GARDENS

Lawns and Shrubs Require Careful Selection and Constant Attention.

Those who are accustomed to a beautiful garden very seldom stop to think of the expense and labor entailed in producing the results which go so far in making a home or residence attractive through the efforts of the landscape gardener and his knowledge.

To one not familiar with the quantity of material used in landscape work, the figures referring to the Hilltop Manor landscaping for the Cafritz Construction Co., are interesting. Following the plans laid out by the landscape architect it was necessary to use over 2,000 square yards of earth for grading. This was necessary to bring out the beautiful lines of the building as well as to make the approaches attractive and homelike. The specification calls for 1,500 square yards of sod. The sod is cut and laid the same day, to get the quality necessary. The sod is hauled 25 miles by truck. Even then nature can upset the best laid plans and the lawns require constant attention for at least two months. The planting of shrubs and evergreens at Hilltop Manor requires even a greater knowledge than either of the above items.

Shrub Selection Important.

Over 300 shrubs and evergreens will be required to produce the result necessary. These must be selected, taking into consideration, color, size, rapidity of growth, exposure to sun and shade, and a number of conditions not apparent to the eye of anyone except the expert in this line of work. The treatment of the courts is very vital as they are as a rule viewed entirely from the interior of the building. The various apartments facing on the courts are so arranged that the court effect produced is designed with the idea of making almost individual gardens.

The enormous quantity of sod, plants, and shrubs used by the Cafritz Construction Co. in the past year, furnish some interesting figures. Over 100,000 yards of sod and 5,000 shrubs and evergreens were required to landscape a great number of homes, apartments, and commercial buildings erected by the Cafritz Construction Co., all of which not only beautifies the general surroundings but in turn will be a factor in making Washington known as the most beautiful city in the United States.

CLOTHES USED IN FILMS OFTEN ARE GIVEN AWAY

Stars Share Dresses With Extras, if They Do Not Retain Them.

Hollywood, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—What becomes of the screen players' old clothes?

The problem of "what shall I wear?" is an acute one with the movie star who has appeared in a series of gorgeous creations. To wear them again in a new picture is out of the question. The same problem exists for the male star, but not quite to the same extent. His psychology is the same, however, whatever happens to be his role.

Irene Rich, who appears in many of Warner's society plays gowned in the height of fashion, has a list of people to whom she gives her old clothes. Occasionally she keeps them, as there is no reason why screen clothes can not be worn off stage. Several extra girls receive most of her old clothes.

Many actresses have learned thrift through necessity, while climbing the ladder to fame. Among them are Patsy Ruth Miller and Myrna Loy. Miss Miller "wears her things to death," while Miss Loy makes her dresses over and over until she is even ashamed to throw them away, much less give them away. As for stockings, Miss Loy dyes her cast-offs and makes rag rugs out of them. Jane Winton gives her old clothes away and finds that many discarded silk pieces make excellent polishing rags.

Louise Fazenda every once in so often takes a lot of old gowns and dresses out of the closets and sends them to several families in Los Angeles.

Many men do not like to get rid of an old hat, or an old suit of clothes, and screen stars are no exception. George Jessel wears his old clothes until they are fit only for the paper mill. Monte Blue keeps his old clothes to wear in character parts.

Syd Chaplin wears his old clothes while working or lounging around the house. Sometimes he gives them away to persons he has known for years, and whom his clothes happen to fit.

Congratulations to Cafritz on the Completion of Washington's Largest Co-Operative Apartment

LOST LEAD OF GOLD SOUGHT BY MINERS FOR HALF CENTURY

Descendant of Gen. Zachary Taylor Still Prospecting for Rich Ore.

ONCE SHOWN THE SPOT IN NEW MEXICAN REGION

Unable Now to Relocate It and His Indian Guide Died Years Ago.

Hillsboro, N. Mex., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—After 50 years of search for a "lost lead" of red ore said to have assayed $2,100 gold to the ton, Manuel Taylor, aged but active American-Mexican who says he is a descendant of Gen. Zachary Taylor, still pokes about this section of the Southwest with two burros, confident that he yet will "strike 'er rich."

His life and the faith that goes with it stamp him as one of the last of that picturesque type—the old West gold prospector.

Taylor now is eking out a living and saving toward one more grubstake by prospecting and placer mining near Gold Dust, N. Mex., with a primitive machine he calls "the poor man's concentrator." But he is reputed to have mined on a vast scale at various times in his life and to have made at least six big mineral strikes and spent as many fortunes.

For instance, in 1906-1907, when an epidemic of influenza struck this part of the country, Taylor is credited with having bought 155 coffins and paid the funeral expenses of as many of the poor of his community.

Early in the 70's an Indian friend told young Taylor he could lead him to "heap much gold." They outfitted and penetrated the wild San Matillo mountains country. Finally they reached a spot from where the redskin pointed to a streak of red earth, much like brick dust, and grunted dramatically:

"Here heap much gold!"

Taylor was disappointed to see no trace of gold in it. He was then ignorant of metallurgy. However, he wrapped some of the stuff in a handkerchief and threw it into one of his pack bags. They returned to Silver City, N. Mex.

One day months later Taylor was cleaning his bags and found some of the red dust. Idly rubbing it between his palms he suddenly noticed many particles of fine gold appearing as the coarser grains broke away. He went to an assayer to learn that the dust tested $2,100 gold to the ton.

In the meantime his Indian guide had died. And for 50 years Taylor has failed to relocate the treasure spot again.

OCCIDENTALS WEARIED BY CHINESE DRAMATICS

Boston's Oriental Theater, However, Draws Steady Patronage.

Boston, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Boston's only Chinese theater draws steady patronage, even though it is unknown to most white residents.

Only those few who chance along a dingy street have heard the clash of cymbals, the twang of squeaky two-string violins, the rattle and tinkle of unnamed traps, and over all the falsetto of voices in the sing-song of the Chinese tongue which accompany the Chinese production.

At the front of the hall is the square platform of the stage. In the alcove at the rear of the stage is an eight-piece orchestra. One of its members wears an eyeshade. Another musician smokes a cigarette. All the while weird sounds issue from the instruments, blended in a sort of monotonous rhythm, but jarred acutely by unexpected twangings, clashes and thumping on a dry wooden box.

An especially loud clamor, and an actor brushes aside the curtain and walks in with the classical stilted gait and slow-moving hands of the ancient drama. His robe and headdress are ornate in the rigidly prescribed manner; his make-up is conspicuous. He begins to sing.

The Occidental gets little from what follows. Actors and actresses, all in elaborate costume, succeed each other at short intervals, singly or in groups. A scene shifter sidles behind the classical players to shift a chair to meet the new requirements of the play. He erects a throne, takes out a curtained bed, lays out fresh fans and performs a constant succession of tasks. In no manner does he disturb the continued singing and playing of the orchestra.

Some pantomime accompanies the play, but for the most part it is long monologue in singing or speaking voice, with occasional dialogue and rare bits of dramatic action.

Toward midnight the spectator purchases from a vendor tidbits of dried pork, lichee nuts, candied fruits or other confection. The Chinese come and go through the evening. They smoke and eat, converse and sleep. They never applaud, but they do laugh appreciatively when a bit of buffoonery enlivens the scene.

Few Occidentals see an evening's performance out. It lasts for seven hours, and then resumes next evening where it broke off.

'TALL' SKYSCRAPERS HAVE SHORT VOGUE AS NEWER ONES RISE

Designers of Distinctive Buildings No Longer Can Rely on Height.

WOOLWORTH IS TO LOSE "WORLD'S TALLEST" TITLE

Architects Turning in Other Directions to Insure Prestige.

New York, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—With the skyscraperss of each year being lost in the shadows of the taller ones erected in the next, the designer who wishes to plan a distinctive building no longer can rely upon superior height alone.

Most of the cities of the United States are seeing their "tallest buildings" eclipsed, one after another, as the result of a construction trend which has been gaining momentum for several years.

In the past, especially in the early part of the century, the erection of a building taller than any of its neighbors, or taller than any other in the same town, was a guarantee that it would stand out prominently, for a considerable time.

"World's Tallest" Change.

In New York city, several buildings, successively acquiring the title of "tallest," held it long enough to gain national reputation. The American Surety building, one of the first downtown skyscrapers; was followed by the Flatiron building, and then by the Singer building. The title of "world's tallest" was then captured by the Woolworth, which held it until the planning of the 81-story of the new Book Tower in Detroit.

Will Rise 711 Feet.

Most of the cities of America today are witnessing similar processes of "overtopping." In Cleveland, the new Union Terminal tower will rise 711 feet, considerably higher than the previously tallest buildings, except the Woolworth building.

The peak of the Brooklyn skyline was for years at 23 stories, the height of the Chamber of Commerce building. Suddenly it went to 28 stories with the Court Remsen building, and scarcely was this completed when work was begun on a new 30-story structure, and another which is to go to 35 stories, all within a few blocks of one another. In nearly every section of New York city, buildings which previously stood out as isolated skyscrapers, are today surrounded by taller ones, like groves of trees.

Architects Turn Elsewhere.

When this overtopping occurs, a structure can still hold its rank as one of the "leading buildings" through distinctive features other than height. Architects now plan to insure permanent prestige for the buildings they design by modern floor plans and lighting effects, exteriors made attractive by skillful use of terra cotta and other decorative materials, efficient elevator facilities, and generally convenient equipment throughout.

Care is also being taken to avoid the buildings' ever assuming an appearance of "oldness" by the use in many cases of facing materials which can be washed with soap and water.

COURTS WITHIN PRISONS RELICTS OF PIRATE DAYS

"Kangaroo" Tribunals Mete Punishment for Petty Offenses in Jails.

ARE FORMED REGULARLY

Chicago, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—A relic of the trials aboard pirate ships in the days of the Spanish Main persists in almost every jail in the country, says Capt. George H. Weideling, retiring warden of the Cook county (Chicago) jail. It is the "kangaroo court," organized and conducted by the prisoners for the punishment of petty offenses among themselves. The "court" exists in every prison and jail he has visited, Capt. Weideling declares.

The paradoxical honor existing among criminals lies at the base of the days of the Jolly Roger, when the penalty was often a walk down the gangplank. Usually, t' sentence now is a fine of ten or fteen cents, for such offenses as failing to wash the neck, untidy cell, or petty theft. Sometimes when the crime is graver, the inmates take the "law" into their own hands.

Sheriff Peter Hoffman was convicted of some unannounced sentence during his contempt confinement at Wheaton jail and fined $50 by the "kangaroo court." The court within the jail is not, as a rule, a makeshift affair, but regularly organized by the prisoners themselves, Capt. Weideling says. Judges, bailiffs and lawyers are elected from among those apparently best qualified. Sessions are held during exercise or rest periods. Collected fines are put into a fund for penniless inmates.

12 MINDS PASS ON BOOK BEFORE IT IS SCREENED

Adaptations Made by Various Writers, if the Story Is Viewed Favorably.

DIRECTOR HAS LAST SAY

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Twelve analytical minds usually pass judgment upon a book, play or original story before it is converted into a modern picture. So hazardous do most production officials consider the task of selecting the subject matter of photoplays that no one person is given exclusive responsibility. Opinions of a number of minds are desired.

A novel for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for example, is suggested to or recommended by a studio executive. It is then passed upon by Marion Frances Lee, head of the scenario department, who in turn assigns it to one of her readers for further judgment.

Thereafter the novel is synopsized and commented upon by two or more readers and returned to the executives, who decide from their reports whether it contains picture material.

If the reports are favorable, the novel is purchased and assigned to a writer for adaptation. This means that the most important and dramatic situations are enlarged upon and the unimportant details—those that can not be shown on the screen—are deleted. Sometimes as many as four writers make adaptations or "treatments" of the same novel before one is found satisfactory.

Following that a director is selected to make the picture, and he is consulted as to his opinions on both the story and the treatment of the final script. If he, too, passes on it, a continuity is written from the adaptation. Every scene is written out in terms of action and numbered. If the finished continuity does not meet with all-around approval, however, a conference is held and certain original scenes are added and others taken out.

During the entire time that the adaptation and continuity are being written, the director, star, writers and supervisor confer and make suggestions for improvement.

LOUVAIN NOW SWAMPED BY FLOOD OF VOLUMES

Library Only Half Finished, Work Is Delayed, but Books Pour In.

Louvain, Oct. 16 (By A. P.).—Louvain library, to which Uncle Sam stands godfather, is developing problems.

Foremost is the question of how to complete the half-finished gift of Americans to devasted Belgium, with money invested in Belgian bonds which can not now be disposed of without an enormous loss on their face value. It may be years, as a result, before the $1,000,000 library is completed.

Next is the problem of how to meet the upkeep of the completed unit with the interest on $125,000, also invested in Belgian bonds. Atop these considerations, citizens of the town are beginning to realize that the famous library is running away with them.

Where they once had a university specializing in theology, with a fine old theological library attached, they now possess one of the most important international libraries in the world with a university attached which still specializes in theology. What effect the library is going to have on the university is the question they are asking.

An unceasing flow of books comes to Louvain library from nations, societies and individuals in all parts of the world. Ffrom 2,000 to 3,000 books arrive each month to swell the 600,000 already given. A staff of twelve works constantly at indexing and still thousands of volumes are uncatalogued. Professor's attics, private libraries, and even commercial warehouses are filled with the overflow of the library. Every cranny of Louvain is bulging with books and still a generous world keeps sending.

In the complete library there will be space for 2,000,000 volumes, and Louvain's librarians nevertheless are grateful for each volume they receive, no matter what the difficulties its receipt entails for the present.

GOOD BATTLE AIRPLANES CAN NOT BE SAFE ONES

Element of Danger Affords Pilot Best Protection in Combats.

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 16. (By A. P.).—A good battle plane is necessarily an unsafe plane, and it is the element of danger that offers the pilot of such a ship his greatest protection in aerial battle.

Officers of the army air corps and officials of McCook field here believe that. The primary requisites in fighting planes are speed and maneuverability. These little ships must be able to twist and turn sharply and suddenly, to follow the enemy's zigzagging, or to avoid his sudden rush from behind a cloudbank. They must be highly maneuverable.

This means that the controls must be sensitive to an extreme degree. When a pursuit pilot in battle elevates his ailerons or other control he wants immediate response. It is this sensitiveness and extreme flexibility, McCook field officers say, that make the pursuit plane unsafe and treacherous in the hands of an inexperienced pilot. More than one death may be attributed to the fact that the pilot's experience had been almost wholly on "slow" ships, and had not developed the delicacy of touch necessary to piloting one of the "finger pressure" planes.

CAFRITZ

THE completion of Hilltop Manor marks another milestone in the appreciable activities of The Cafritz Company. Heartily we join in the clamor of congratulations which must mark an event of this magnitude.

The part played by electricity in Hilltop Manor's Co-Operative Apartments must be measured by the initial installation's completeness. Inspection of the wiring will show that Ralph P. Gibson & Co. have incorporated all the most modern developments in electric house wiring here.

Inspect Hilltop Manor's electrical provisions. See how its every detail is just as complete—for your comfort and convenience. After all, only you can judge the adequacy and completeness of its appointments. We're confident you will not be disappointed!

Again We Congratulate Cafritz!

The Worsted-tex Suit

A Custom-Tailor Cloth in a Ready-to-Wear Suit

WORSTED-TEX is an entirely new cloth. It is similar to the goods you see at a fine custom tailor's. Now used for the first time in a moderate priced suit.

Worsted-tex keeps its shape like the old-fashioned worsted. But it drapes and feels like a soft imported fabric.

The Worsted-tex suit is guaranteed to wear as well as the best suit you can buy at any price or your dealer will replace it.

It is made with one pair of trousers only. The wearing quality of the cloth makes an extra pair unnecessary.

Worsted-tex is shown in a variety of rich colors, mixtures and patterns that suit the taste of every well-dressed man. Made 2 button or 3 button, single-breasted or double-breasted.

If the Worsted-tex label is not in the suit, it is positively not made of genuine, guaranteed Worsted-tex cloth.

The Knit-tex Coat

The Knit-tex Coat is Guaranteed for 3 years

THE Knit-tex Coat is different from any topcoat you have ever worn. Light as a feather, warm as toast, soft as velvet, never wrinkles and can be worn ten months in the year.

Knit-tex is knitted but you wouldn't know it. It looks like a fine, imported fabric. The yoke and sleeve lining are of Skinner's satin.

In every city and town in the United States a clothing store with this Knit-tex photograph in its window carries Knit-tex in new shades of light and medium grey, oxford, brown, tan, polo, blue-grey, sage, beige, mode and heather mixtures.

If some one shows you a coat without the Knit-tex label and claims the material is like Knit-tex—beware!

If the Knit-tex label is not in the coat it is positively not made of genuine, guaranteed Knit-tex cloth.

GINGHAM DRESS and striped stockings were worn when Postmaster General Harry New faced the lens for the first time in the sentimental seventies. The custodian of the U. S. mails at the right as he appears now.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE

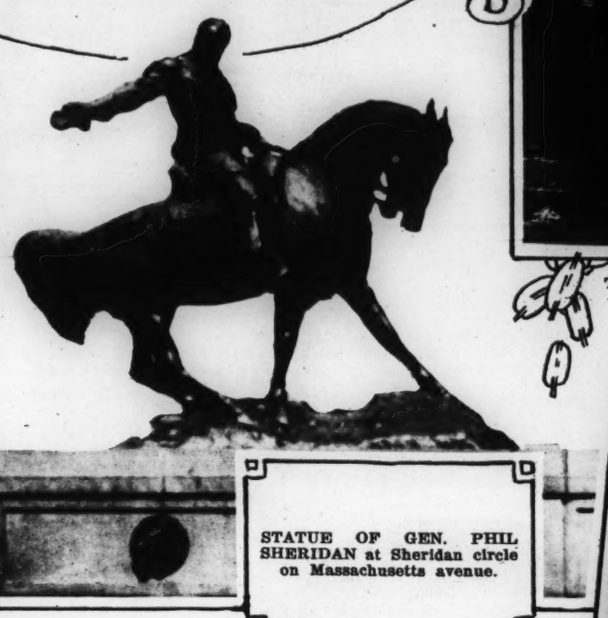

By T. BUCHANAN READ.

Next Tuesday, Oct. 19, will mark the sixty-second anniversary of the famous ride made by the noted Union general.

Photos by N. L. G. Anderson.

STATUE OF GEN. PHIL SHERIDAN at Sheridan circle on Massachusetts avenue.

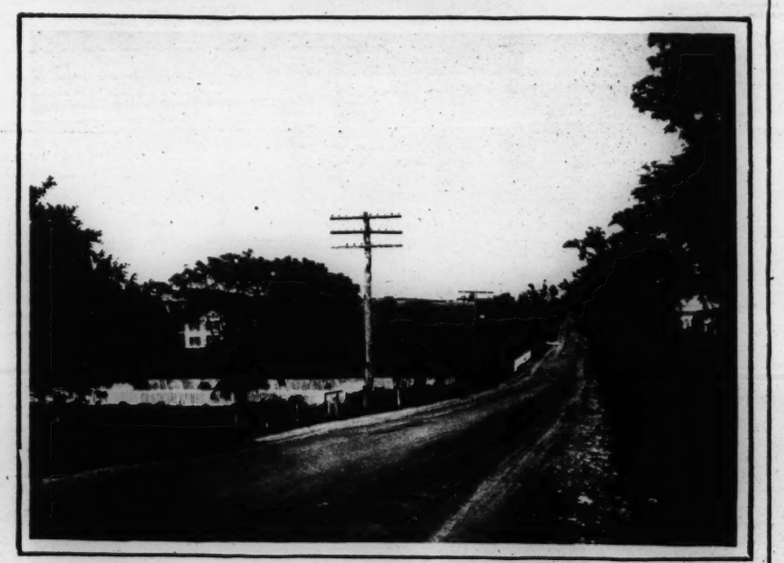

THROUGH QUIET MIDDLETOWN Sheridan rode, eight miles from the scene of action.

EIGHTEEN MILES AWAY. Stretch of road over which Sheridan passed, two miles out of Winchester.

AND SHERIDAN FIFTEEN MILES AWAY. The general rode down this dip in his mad flight.

Up from the South at break of day,
Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay,
The affrightened air with a shudder bore,
Like a herald in haste, to the chieftain's door,
The terrible grumble, and rumble, and roar,
Telling the battle was on once more,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.

And wider still those billows of war
Thundered along the horizon's bar;
And louder yet into Winchester rolled
The roar of that red sea uncontrolled,
Making the blood of the listener cold,
As he thought of the stake in that fiery fray,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.

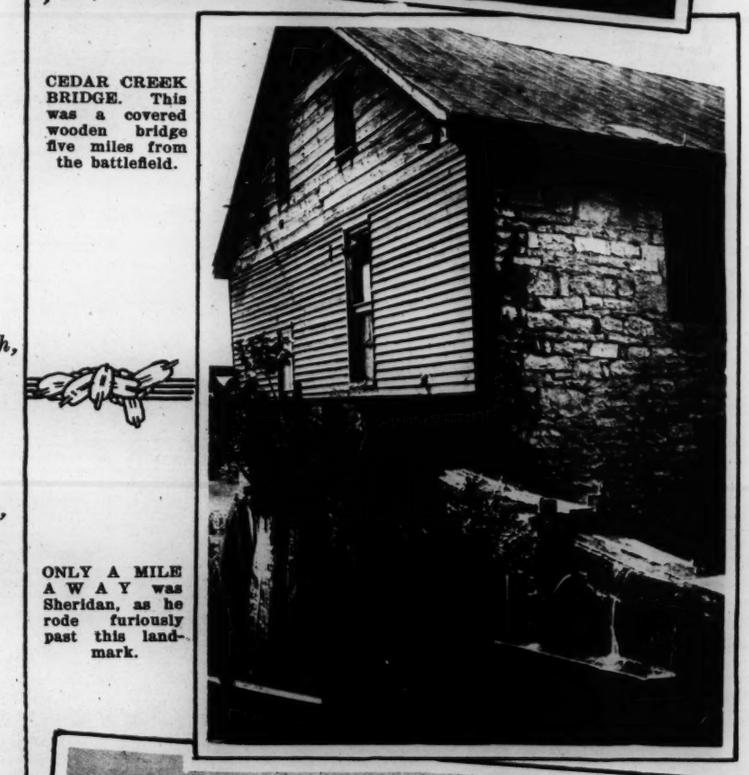

But there is a road from Winchester town,
A good broad highway leading down;
And there, through the flush of the morning light,
A steed as black as the steeds of night
Was seen to pass, as with eagle flight,
As if he knew the terrible need;
He stretched away with his utmost speed;
Hills rose and fell; but his heart was gay,
With Sheridan fifteen miles away.

Still sprung from those swift hoofs, thundering South,
The dust, like smoke from the cannon's mouth;
Or the trail of a comet, sweeping faster and faster,
Foreboding to traitors the doom of disaster.
The heart of the steed, and the heart of the master,
Were beating like prisoners assaulting their walls,
Impatient to be where the battlefield calls;
Every nerve of the charger was strained to full play,
With Sheridan only ten miles away.

Under his spurning feet the road
Like an arrowy Alpine river flowed,
And the landscape sped away behind
Like an ocean flying before the wind,
And the steed, like a barque fed with furnace ire,
Swept on, with his wild eye full of fire.
But lo! he is nearing his heart's desire;
He is snuffing the smoke of the roaring fray,
With Sheridan only five miles away.

The first that the general saw were the groups
Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops.
What was done? what to do? a glance told him both;
Then, striking his spurs, with a terrible oath,
He dashed down the line, 'mid a storm of huzzas,
And the wave of retreat checked its course there, because
The sight of the master compelled it to pause.
With foam and with dust, the black charger was gray;
By the flash of his eye, and the red nostril's play,
He seemed to the whole great army to say,
"I have brought you Sheridan all the way
From Winchester, down to save the day!"

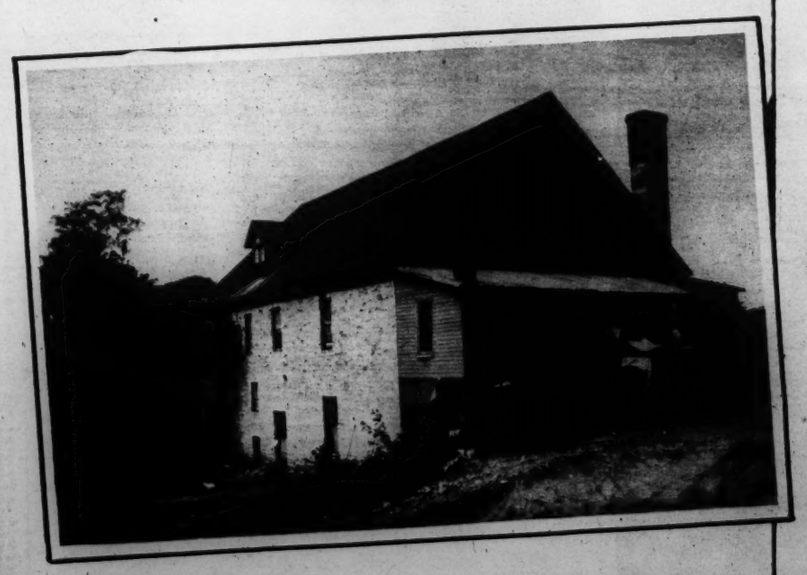

Hurrah! hurrah for Sheridan!
Hurrah! hurrah for horse and man!
And when their statues are placed on high,
Under the dome of the Union sky,
The American soldiers' Temple of Fame,
There, with the glorious general's name,
Be it said, in letters both bold and bright,
"Here is the steed that saved the day,
By carrying Sheridan into the fight,
From Winchester, twenty miles away!"

CEDAR CREEK BRIDGE. This was a covered wooden bridge five miles from the battlefield.

ONLY A MILE AWAY was Sheridan, as he rode furiously past this landmark.

OLD SPRINGDALE MILL, built about 150 years ago. When Sheridan passed here he was fourteen miles away from the battle.

WHERE THE RIDE ENDED. Tumbling run at the foot of Fishers hill.

A FAUX PAS — by C.W. KAHLES

SAY, WHEN DO WE GET OUT OF THIS TUNNEL? I WANT TO SEE YOUR LOVELY ENGLISH LANDSCAPE.

THAT AINT TUNNEL— THAT'S FOG.

WHY DO YOU WEAR THAT FUNNY STRAP UNDER THE CHIN?

THAT'S SO'S TO MAKE IT 'ARDER TO LAUGH AT YOUR SILLY AWSS QUESTIONS

PICCADILLY CIRCUS

GUIDE BOOK

MY GOODNESS! SO THIS IS LONDON! MIGHT JUST AS WELL BE DARKEST ABYSSINIA! WE'LL NEVER SEE ANYTHING IF THIS FOG DOESN'T LIFT!

WE'RE GOING BY DEAD RECKONING. THE VAPOR IS SO THICK THAT I'M NOT SURE WHETHER WE'RE ABOVE OR BELOW THE SURFACE OF THE THAMES

WELL, ANYWAY, IT FEELS LIKE LONDON. THIS FEELS LIKE ST. PAUL'S DOME.

NO — WAIT — IT'S MOVING! OH DEAR! IT'S ONLY A MAN'S BALD HEAD!

I JUST STUMBLED INTO SOMETHING HARD AND BULKY. MUST BE TOWER OF LONDON.

GEE! IF I RAN INTO THE PRINCE OF WALES HE'D NEVER KNOW IT WAS I, AND I'D MISS A SWELL CHANCE OF BEING THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND.

SOMETHING HIT ME ON THE COCO! EITHER LONDON BRIDGE IS FALLING DOWN OR SOMEBODY IS DROPPING HIS H'S!

HELP! QUICK! BLOW YOUR FOGHORN! I'M ON THE ROCKS! SOMEBODY'S GOT ME!!

GEE WHIZZ! DEFT FINGERS JUST WENT THROUGH MY POCKETS!

JUST THEN THE FOG LIFTED

HELP! CALL OUT THE FOGHOUNDS AND THE HORSE-GUARDS!

TO-O-O-O-O-T

TOO-OO-OO-O-T

FOGHORN

'ERE I COME!

WE WERE JUST SIGHT-FEELING OUR WAY ABOUT IN THE FOG WHEN SOMEBODY JOSTLED ME, AND WHEN THE FOG SUDDENLY LIFTED, A THIEF HAD STOLEN MY MONEY AND MY GIRL!

AHA! A CLEAR CASE FOR SCOTLAND YARD!

WELL, EVERYTHING IS WORKING OUT FINE. THIS IS THE PLACE, IT'S JUST 2.33 A.M. AND HERE COMES THE FOG DOWN AS THICK AS BEAN SOUP!

AHA! GREAT SCOTT WAS RIGHT! I HEAR STEALTHY FOOTSTEPS APPROACHING JUST LIKE SOMEBODY SNEAKING IN AT 3 O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING WITH HIS SHOES IN HIS HAND. NOW FOR A GRAND SLAM, TAKING CARE NOT TO DAMAGE BELINDA, THOUGH.

WHAM!

OW! AW, BE REASONABLE! I WAS ONLY AT THE LODGE!

HI SAY! THAT'S THE KING'S PALACE! THERE'S THE JUSTICE'S, OVER THERE!

GEE! IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN THE KING!

HEH! HEH! I CAN JUST GET INSIDE BEFORE THE FOG CLOSES IN AGAIN

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1926

NOW TRY THIS STEP!

Ella's taken a job as dancing instructress to earn money to leave her stepfamily. Every time she dances, she earns half a ticket — one nickel.

I'D DANCE TO A DIFFERENT TUNE IF MY STEPMOTHER CAUGHT ME—AND FURNISH MY OWN MUSIC!

MY NEXT JOB IS GOING TO BE IN A SKATING RINK OR SOME OTHER PLACE WHERE YOU CAN SIT DOWN ALL THE TIME!

YES, SIR—ONE TICKET, ONE REGULAR DANCE. TWO TICKETS, AND I DANCE AS THOUGH I ENJOYED IT!

JUST A MINUTE UNTIL I PUT THIS INSTALLMENT OF MY NIGHTLY WAGE AWAY.

THIS BOY'S SHOES AREN'T FULL OF FEET—THEY'RE FULL OF CEMENT.

I WISH I'D GET A GOOD DANCER JUST ONCE—— OGEEGOSH—HERE COMES HOPPING HENRY AGAIN!

THIS ISN'T WORK— IT'S PUNISHMENT! FOUR TIMES I'VE DANCED WITH THAT FELLOW! EACH TIME HE FOLLOWS ME AND WAITS FOR THE NEXT ONE!

SAY, BIG BOY, DON'T SPEND YOUR WHOLE SALARY ON TICKETS—SAVE ENOUGH FOR LUNCHES NEXT WEEK!

DON'T WORRY— THIS AIN'T COSTING ME SO MUCH!

THIS IS THE FIFTIETH TICKET YOU'VE HANDED ME, BUT IF YOU WANT TO DANCE AFTER THIS ONE, YOU'LL HAVE TO DO A SOLO!

CHEAPEST EVENING I EVER SPENT!

CASHIER

IF MY FEET COULD SPEAK, THE AIR WOULD BE FILLED WITH LOUD-PEDAL PROFANITY!

OGEEGOSH! NO WONDER HAMFOOT HENRY FOLLOWED ME— EVERYTIME I PUT A TICKET IN MY POCKET, IT DROPPED OUT AND HE'S BEEN DANCING ALL EVENING ON ONE TICKET!

HEY, ELLA, I GOT A TREAT FER YA! I KNOW HOW YA LIKE TO PUT YER FOOT IN IT, SO I GOT TICKETS FER THE ICEMEN'S BALL TOMORROW NIGHT!
